The theme of this chapter was the use of our time and talents, the investment of ourselves as God's co-workers.

The Christian steward is under obligation to invest himself and all his powers for the glory of God and the advancement of His Kingdom. There are varieties of talent, but the same, Lord; varieties of effect, but the same God who effects everything in everyone. Each receives his manifestation of the spirit for the common good, was the closing thought as given in I Cor. 12, 4-7.

A questionnaire was conducted which proved helpful.

Readings on prayer were given by Mrs. Fred Westover and Mrs. E. K. Hubble. "A calendar for all my life" was given by Mrs. Earl Bush and "The world's heart ache" by Mrs. C. Moon. Light refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

AIRCRAFT CARRIER ILLUSTRIOUS SAFE

Amateur Photographer Takes Picture of Ship in a Bermuda Harbor

New York, July 9—(AP) — The New York Daily News today published a photograph of the British caption saying it has been taken by caption sayinf t had been taken by an amateur photographer on a United States liner in a Bermuda harbor a day after the Germans claimed it was struck in battle.

The Illustrious is one of the six new aircraft carriers that Britain laid down in recent years. She was launched in 1939 as were her sisterships Victorious, Formidable and Indomitable. The two others in the class are the Implacable and Indefatigable.

Except that these craft are of 23,000 tons and are 753 feet long, the public knows nothing of them. Jane's Fighting Ships publishes no data. It is not known how many of the six are actually in service.

The layman only has a pretty shrewd idea that these craft are the finest aircraft carriers ever built.

Committee Advocates American 'Trusteeship' Over Possessions

New York, July 9—(AP)—An American "trusteeship" over French and Dutch possessions in the western hemisphere "until full independence is restored to those countries," was advocated yesterday by the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies.

The committee, in three new basic objectives adopted in a move to make itself a permanent organization headed by William Allen White, Emporia, Kansas, editor, also advocated:

1. Unrestricted sale to Great Britain of surplus food supplies, planes, guns, ships and ammunition "not necessary to our national defence."
2. Evacuation "when necessary," of mothers, children and old people from the British Isles to the western hemisphere.
3. Removal of restrictions banning United States citizens from joining Allied forces.
4. Encouragement of congressional action to give the President authority to accomplish these objectives.

BRITAIN ACQUIRES ALEXANDRIAN FRENCH FLEET

Petain Empowered by French Deputies to Write New Constitution

French Battleship Richelieu Blasted by British Depth Charges at Dakar

Demilitarize Ships And Reduce Crews Part of Agreement

France Arranges Transportation to That Country for Crews of All the Warships — French Decision Removes Possibility of Naval Action Such as Occurred at Oran — British Fleet Free to Move More Power Against Italians in Mediterranean

MANY CONTINUE TO FIGHT WITH BRITISH

These Crew Members Staying Aboard Their Ships Waiting Orders — Statement Issued by Admiralty Setting Out Agreement Under Which Fleet Could Operate — British Guarantee Supplies and Pay of Men Running Maintenance and Also Return of Ships to France at End of War

ALEXANDRIA, July 9 (AP)—French naval authorities here agreed today to turn over the entire French fleet at Alexandria to the Royal Navy.

The French decision removed the possibility of a naval action here such as occurred at Oran, Algeria, July 3, and left the British fleet free to move more of its power against the Italians in the Mediterranean.

A French steamship was reported to have sailed with approximately 500 members of crews of French warships who had asked repatriation. The French liners Othos and The Providence are expected to take the remaining sailors who are returning home.

SOME STAY ABOARD SHIPS

An unidentified number of French officers and seamen who elected to continue the fight alongside the British are staying aboard their ships awaiting orders.

The newspaper La Reforme published a British Admiralty order permitting the repatriation of Frenchmen who prefer going home to continuing the war.

A statement on the action was issued. It follows:

"When terms of the armistice were made known, it became evident that a new situation had developed, and Admiral Godfroy was therefore asked to consider various proposals on the lines of those sent at Oran.

"Seeing that in a foreign harbor, in the presence of a greatly superior British fleet, there was no possibility of taking the French ships to sea, and that an attempt would only endanger valuable French lives, it was agreed by (French) Admiral Godfroy:

AGREEMENT REACHED

"1. To put his ships in a condition in which they could not go to sea.

"This was done by reducing the oil on board so that there was sufficient only for harbor purposes.

"2...To demilitarize the ships. This was done by landing certain portions of armament and placing them under the care of French authorities ashore.

"3. To reduce the crews, in order to leave sufficient only for care and maintenance. This is being done now and crews who are leaving are being sent to Syria, to be sent to France later as decided by the French Admiralty.

"For their part, the British government has guaranteed supplies and the pay of men running the maintenance of the ships, and also their return to France at the end of the war.

TERRIBLE EVENTS AVOIDED

"In the eastern Mediterranean, terrible events of which we all know have been avoided, and the best hope is that our good relations here may continue as before. Our only wish throughout has been to make sure that Italians and Germans should not possess French ships in order to use them against the British who still are fighting on to defeat Germany and Italy, and to re-establish France."

Rome Communique

Rome, July 9 (AP).—Today's Italian communique:

'On the Cirenaican frontier enemy armored motor vehicles destroyed in the past few days number not less than 50.

(There was no confirmation of this claim.)

"In East Africa our aviation has bombed enemy positions in the Wajir zone of Kenya, hitting munitions dumps. In the Turcana zone, Kenya, some British troops have been captured. Following air bombing action our troops have carried out a raid on Kurmuk in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, destroying a radio station and warehouses.

(British sources have not commented on these operations.)

"Enemy planes have raided Massawa, Diredawa and Zula, causing a total of two dead and one injured. There was no material damage."

(The R.A.F. in Cairo announced that direct hits were made on railway workshops in the raid on Diredawa.)

ITALIAN DAM BURSTS

London, July 9 (CP).—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Rome said today the bursting of a dam near the important electric centre at Aosta, 50 miles from Turin, had caused seven casualties and considerable damage. It said the dam gave way following the overflowing of the river Dora Baltea.

Leaders of Opposition Groups Invited to Sit in on All War Cabinet Meetings

By CARL REINKE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 9 —(CP)— A reconstructed and expanded cabinet today took over direction of Canada's steadily growing war program. A provincial premier and two members of parliament have been added to the ministry in a reorganization involving shifts by four other ministers to meet wartime needs.

In addition, Prime Minister Mackenzie King has invited leaders of the three opposition groups to become "associate members" of the cabinet war committee, taking part in all its proceedings without responsibility for its actions.

Two new departments have been created for a more efficient division of government war duties: A Department of National Defence for naval affairs and a Department of National War Service.

NO CASUALTIES IN NAZI RAIDS

London, July 9 (CP). — Isolated German aircraft carried out a number of bombing raids in northeast and southeast England and eastern Scotland early today, the Ministry of Home Security announced.

No damage of any consequence was caused, the announcement said, although many incendiary bombs were dropped on one southeast town.

Of nine German planes which flew over southeast Scotland, one was believed to be badly damaged and unlikely to reach its base.

There were no casualties.

The statement said:

"Sporadic raids by isolated enemy aircraft were carried out in the north east and southeast of England and on the east coast of Scotland during last night and early this morning.

"A number of high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped. No damage of any consequence was caused.

"A considerable number of incendiary bombs fell on one southeast town and were quickly dealt with by A.R.P. (air raid precautions) services. A house and a stable were damaged and in a Scottish town some windows were broken and a few casualties caused."

Head in Bandages Ex-Premier Reynaud Attends Chamber

Vichy, France, July 9 (AP).—Former Premier Paul Reynaud, his head wrapped in bandages, made his first appearance in public today since an automobile accident in which he was injured June 28 near Montpelier.

Sir William Mulock is Pleased Grandson New Postmaster-General

Toronto, July 9—(CP)—Sir William Mulock, Ontario's most famous nonagenarian, is pleased with the appointment of his grandson, Col. William P Mulock, as Postmaster-General, but he does not envy him the job

Sir William, interviewed today at a summer resort near Toronto, recalled his own term as Postmaster-General in the Laurier Government from 1896 to 1905.

He said he might have a job for his grandson. "I want him to look up a gift that was misplaced years ago. It was in 1904 after the conferences on the Pacific cable in which I took part. I was presented with a beautiful box fitted with sections of the cable which led into British Columbia. I prized it very much but I lost it when I left office in 1905."

6,000 French Officers Cross Syrian Border To Join British, Report

Dispatch from Ankara Says Officers Include Staff of General Mittelhauser—Feeling Reported Growing Tense in Syria as Result of Arab Disorders

Ankara, July 9 (AP).—Persons returning from Syria reported today that about 6,000 French officers, including the staff of General Eugene Mittelhauser, had crossed the border into Palestine and joined British military forces there.

Tension was reported growing in Syria as the result of Arab disorders, a division of sentiment among the French troops and expectation British forces might move in from Palestine.

General Mittelhauser, commander in chief of France's near eastern armies, recently announced the cessation of hostilities in the near east.

The British, who have warned they would not countenance any German or Italian effort to use Syria as a base of operations, were reported massing troops along the frontier, leading to the belief action of some sort might be imminent.

Observers said that while the majority of the French soldiers under Mittelhauser seemed opposed to continuing the war against Germany, it was doubtful whether they would resist if the British attempted to move in.

British Bombers Raid Ethiopian Town, Hit R. R. Shops

Cairo, July 9 (AP). — British bombing planes have raided the Ethiopian railway town of Diredawa and scored direct hits on railway workshops, the Royal Air Force announced.

Diredawa is on the Jibuti-Addis Ababa railway, running from the African east coast to the capital of Italian Ethiopia.

Today's Royal Air Force communique said:

"Numerous reconnaissance flights were carried out in the course of the 24-hour period under review, and much valuable data was obtained.

"Bombing aircraft raided Diredawa and scored direct hits on railway workshops. Enemy fighters attempted to intercept our machines without success."

"An important enemy base at Zula was attacked by our bombers and direct hits were obtained on a jetty and on stores. Two fires started, accompanied by much black smoke. One enemy aircraft was engaged and shot down into the sea. At Massawa, direct hits were registered on camp buildings, causing considerable damage.

"Two air raids on Malta—one the evening of July 7 and the other yesterday afternoon—were entirely unsuccessful as a result of interception by our fighters. No bombs were dropped."

3-Fold Campaign To Defeat Britain Says Virginio Gayda

Rome, July 9 (AP).—An Italian-German agreement for a three-fold campaign against Britain was reported today by Virginio Gayda, the Fascist editor.

The axis partners, Gayda said, are to attempt:

1. To blockade the British Isles.
2. To break Britain's Empire communications.
3. To defeat her "at home, in imperial territories" and at sea.

Each axis power has assigned tasks for these goals, said Gayda, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia.

Italy's job, he declared, is to strike at the British Empire in four places on land and harass British shipping in the Atlantic, Mediterranean Red Sea and Indian Ocean and, above all, keep a large part of Britain's seapower in the Mediterranean.

FRENCH MILITARY, NAVAL MISSIONS HELD IN LONDON

A WISE MOVE

London, July 9 (CP).—Members of the French military and naval missions in London are being "held for repatriation," it was learned in informed quarters today.

Official sources said the missions definitely had not been interned, but observers regarded the phrase "held for repatriation" as elastic enough to cover virtual internment of the members, who worked with the British authorities up to the French capitulation to Germany.

It was explained that they are in possession of much information about military and naval forces here which Great Britain would not want to reach the axis powers.

A return to France just now might place the mission members in a position where they would be forced to give any information they have to Germany, it was said.

Defer Hearings in Bill Until Known, Stimson Nominations Dealt With

Washington, July 9—(AP)— The United States Senate Military Committee decided today to defer hearings on the Burke-Wadsworth military training bill until final Senate action on the nomination of Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox to head the War and Navy Departments.

Reliable sources said, however, that when the army's representatives did appear, they would approve the principle of compulsory military training, disagreeing only with details set out in the bill under consideration.

Leaders of various organizations which advocate civilian training were on the witness list of a House of Representatives committee considering the measure.

French Charge d'Affaires in London Refused Permission to Retire

Vichy, France, July 9—(AP)—The French Chamber of Deputies today approved a bill granting the government of Premier Marshal Henri Philippe Petain full powers to write a new constitution. The vote was 395 to three.

Edouard Herriot, President of the Chamber, read the brief text of the bill, which had been approved last night by the cabinet with President Albert Lebrun presiding, and by the Chamber's Legislative Committee this morning.

The bill now is to be submitted to the Senate, where approval by a large majority is considered certain, and then it will go to the National Assembly, composed of both Houses sitting together, for purely formal approval.

TEA IS RATIONED IN GREAT BRITAIN

Newspapers Voiced Approval of Move Stating People Are Ready to Make Any Sacrifice

London, July 9.—(CP Cable)—Newspapers bring to the Briton the news that he must drink less of his inevitable tea, today voiced unqualified approval of the extension of rationing to tea, margarine and cooking fats.

Explaining that the people are ready for any sacrifice for victory and that the tea ration is similar to that in the last war, the Morning Telegraph said "there was no grumbling then".

Tea consumption will be cut under rationing to a quarter of the normal average consumption and means individuals will be restricted to about 25 cups a week at home. Sales in restaurants are not rationed so the sight of much used teapots being carried from hole-in-the-wall cafes is a familiar feature today.

The Times said threats of a siege blockade led to the rationing, a precautionary measure for defence. The Mail advised those who feel deprived of the odd cup of tea between meals to remember they are helping to save more than 50,000 tons of shipping space a year.

DROP INCENDIARY BOMBS

London, July 9—(CP Cable)—The battleship Richelieu, 35,000-ton pride of the French navy, has been heavily damaged by air and naval attacks while lying at anchor at Dakar, West Africa, A. N. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons today.

Running the risk of blowing themselves up, British seamen took a small boat through the outer defences of the harbor to plant depth charges under the stern of the new battleship, which was the most formidabile in the world, and damaged her propellors and steering apparatus.

Nazis 'Interpret' Suggestion Made By U. S. President

Berlin, July 9—(AP)—The controlled Nazi press today centred attention on reports from the United States of President Roosevelt's suggestion that Europe and Asia adopt principles of the Monroe Doctrine in solving international problems.

Nazis read into the President's proposals an impression that the United States was giving more thought to the "negative aspects" of the Monroe Doctrine—interpreting this as a sign that in return for keeping out of the western hemisphere, "European powers" might expect the United States to keep out of what the Nazis regard as European affairs.

FUEL DEALERS ASK FOR FUEL BOARD

Toronto, July 9—(CP)—Members of the Toronto Retail Fuel Dealers' Association, meeting here last night, unanimously voted in favor of asking the Ontario Industry and Labor Board to set up a Fuel Board. A petition signed by about 150 dealers will be presented to the Board today or tomorrow, a spokesman said.

He said the dealers were of the opinion that the public, the dealers and the coal company employees should be represented on such a Fuel Board.

Burma Road Affair Test for Japan, Tokyo Considers British Rejection

Japanese Program to Assume Control Over European - Owned Territories in Far East Testing Matter Say Neutrals

TOKYO PRESS CHARGES

Tokyo, July 9—(AP)—Informed quarters assert Japan is preparing to take military action against Hong Kong if Britain continues refusal to close the Burma route of war supplies to China.

These sources said Japanese plans are complete and merely await London's reply to a request for reconsideration of the refusal.

They pointed to the removal of women and children from Hong Kong as an indication of the seriousness with which Britain views the situation.

The Japanese cabinet decided today to send new representations to Britain, and Domei, Japanese news agency, said the Ministers expressed "strong opinions" in their meeting.

Discuss British Rejection

Neutral diplomatic quarters looked upon the Burma road affair as a test for Japan's entire program to assume and consolidate control over European-owned territories in Eastern Asia.

The Japanese War, Navy and Foreign Ministries called emergency conferences to discuss British rejection yesterday of Japan's demand that this link between the Chinese Nationalist forces and the outside world be cut off—as a means of ending the three-year-old Chinese-Japanese war.

Japanese Press Makes Charges

The Japanese press was unanimous in declaring that "an understanding" with the United States and Soviet Russia preceded the British reply and newspapers repeated previous charges that the United States fleet is acting as Britain's watchdog in the Pacific."

The press at some time reported Japan's roving diplomat, Naotake Sato, in conference with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had received indications Germany would back Japan in any action against Britain in the Far East.

Britain Loses 30,377 Gross Tons By Enemy Action Week Ending June 30

London, July 9—(CP)—Britain lost six merchant ships totalling 30,377 gross tons by enemy action in the week ended June 30, the Admiralty announced today.

In the same period three Allied vessels totalling 9,622 tons and three neutral ships totalling 11,340 tons were sunk by "enemy" action.

These losses, it was said, were slightly above the average, except in the case of neutral shipping.

It should be borne in mind, however, a naval source said, that the number of neutral countries has decreased progressively.

All Explosives Must be Loaded 12 Miles Below New Orleans

New Orleans, July 9 (AP).—A new safety measure went into effect today as reports circulated in shipping circles that an additional 10,000,000 pounds of high explosives for Great Britain were enroute here.

Captain J. L. Ahern of the Coast Guard, newly named captain of the port under an emergency presidential decree, said all explosives would have to be loaded at an anchorage more than twelve miles down the Mississippi river from the city proper.

A shipment of 8,500,000 pounds of T.N.T., released from the government arsenal at Port Wingate, New Mexico, passed through here in great secrecy more than a week ago, and was shipped to Britain. Subsequently it was learned that the 132-carload shipment was transferred from port docks.

News dispatches from Gallup, N. M., yesterday said that 10,000,000 pounds of additional T.N.T. was being loaded for shipment east, presumably New Orleans.

Captain Ahern, in his order, acted under authority granted by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau June 27 specifying that "movement, loading and discharging of explosive or inflammable material or other dangerous cargo shall be under the supervision and control of the captain of the port."

He also announced that shipping companies, transportation companies and shipping associations would be required to obtain from him a permit to load and handle high explosives on water-borne craft within the port.

Sir William Mulock is Pleased Grandson New Postmaster-General

Toronto, July 9—(CP)—Sir William Mulock, Ontario's most famous nonagenarian, is pleased with the appointment of his grandson, Col. William P Mulock, as Postmaster-General, but he does not envy him the job

Sir William, interviewed yesterday at a summer resort near Toronto, recalled his own term as Postmaster-General in the Laurier Government from 1896 to 1905.

He said he might have a job for his grandson. "I want him to look up a gift that was misplaced years ago. It was in 1904 after the conferences on the Pacific cable in which I took part. I was presented with a beautiful box fitted with sections of the cable which led into British Columbia. I prized it very much but I lost it when I left office in 1905."

Leaders of Opposition Groups Invited to Sit in on All War Cabinet Meetings

By CARL REINKE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 9 —(CP)— A reconstructed and expanded cabinet today took over direction of Canada's steadily growing war program. A provincial premier and two members of parliament have been added to the ministry in a reorganization involving shifts by four other ministers to meet wartime needs.

In addition, Prime Minister Mackenzie King has invited leaders of the three opposition groups to become "associate members" of the cabinet war committee, taking part in all its proceedings without responsibility for its actions.

Two new departments have been created for a more efficient division of government war duties: A Department of National Defence for naval affairs and a Department of National War Service.

NO CASUALTIES IN NAZI RAIDS

London, July 9 (CP). — Isolated German aircraft carried out a number of bombing raids in northeast and southeast England and eastern Scotland early today, the Ministry of Home Security announced.

No damage of any consequence was caused, the announcement said, although many incendiary bombs were dropped on one southeast town.

Of nine German planes which flew over southeast Scotland, one was believed to be badly damaged and unlikely to reach its base.

There were no casualties.

The statement said:

"Sporadic raids by isolated enemy aircraft were carried out in the north east and southeast of England and on the east coast of Scotland during last night and early this morning.

"A number of high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped. No damage of any consequence was caused.

"A considerable number of incendiary bombs fell on one southeast town and were quickly dealt with by A.R.P. (air raid precautions) services. A house and a stable were damaged and in a Scottish town some windows were broken and a few casualties caused."

Vichy, France, July 9 (AP).—Former Premier Paul Reynaud, his head wrapped in bandages, made his first appearance in public today since an automobile accident in which he was injured June 28 near Montpelier.

Reynaud was among those attending the session of the Chamber of Deputies to approve a new constitution.

6,000 French Officers Cross Syrian Border To Join British, Report

Dispatch from Ankara Says Officers Include Staff of General Mittelhauser—Feeling Reported Growing Tense in Syria as Result of Arab Disorders

Ankara, July 9 (AP).—Persons returning from Syria reported today that about 6,000 French officers, including the staff of General Eugene Mittelhauser, had crossed the border into Palestine and joined British military forces there.

Tension was reported growing in Syria as the result of Arab disorders, a division of sentiment among the French troops and expectation British forces might move in from Palestine.

General Mittelhauser, commander in chief of France's near eastern armies, recently announced the cessation of hostilities in the near east.

The British, who have warned they would not countenance any German or Italian effort to use Syria as a base of operations, were reported massing troops along the frontier, leading to the belief action of some sort might be imminent.

Observers said that while the majority of the French soldiers under Mittelhauser seemed opposed to continuing the war against Germany, it was doubtful whether they would resist if the British attempted to move in.

British Bombers Raid Ethiopian Town, Hit R. R. Shops

Cairo, July 9 (AP). — British bombing planes have raided the Ethiopian railway town of Diredawa and scored direct hits on railway workshops, the Royal Air Force announced.

Diredawa is on the Jibuti-Addis Ababa railway, running from the African east coast to the capital of Italian Ethiopia.

Today's Royal Air Force communique said:

"Numerous reconnaissance flights were carried out in the course of the 24-hour period under review, and much valuable data was obtained.

"Bombing aircraft raided Diredawa and scored direct hits on railway workshops. Enemy fighters attempted to intercept our machines without success."

"An important enemy base at Zula was attacked by our bombers and direct hits were obtained on a jetty and on stores. Two fires started, accompanied by much black smoke. One enemy aircraft was engaged and shot down into the sea. At Massawa, direct hits were registered on camp buildings, causing considerable damage.

"Two air raids on Malta—one the evening of July 7 and the other yesterday afternoon—were entirely unsuccessful as a result of interception by our fighters. No bombs were dropped."

Age, Physical Condition, Domestic Responsibilities and Occupation to be Catalogued

WILLINGNESS TO SERVE

Ottawa, July 9—(CP)—By the end of August the government hopes to have every Canadian over the age of 16 registered and catalogued as to age, physical condition, domestic responsibilities, occupation and willingness to serve.

The registry will be compiled under authority of the National Resources Mobilization Act, recently passed into law by parliament.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, who as Minister of the new Department of National War Services will be in charge of this wartime stock-taking of human resources, made known the plans for registration and organization late last night.

His two chief aides in the undertaking will be Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche and Mr. Justice T. C. Davis of the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal. They are to serve as joint Deputy Ministers of the new department.

3-Fold Campaign To Defeat Britain Says Virginio Gayda

Rome, July 9 (AP).—An Italian-German agreement for a three-fold campaign against Britain was reported today by Virginio Gayda, the Fascist editor.

The axis partners, Gayda said, are to attempt:

1. To blockade the British Isles,
2. To break Britain's Empire communications,
3. To defeat her "at home, in imperial territories" and at sea.

Each axis power has assigned tasks for these goals, said Gayda, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia.

Italy's job, he declared, is to strike at the British Empire in four places on land and harass British shipping in the Atlantic, Mediterranean Red Sea and Indian Ocean and, above all, keep a large part of Britain's seapower in the Mediterranean.

FRENCH MILITARY, NAVAL MISSIONS HELD IN LONDON

A WISE MOVE

London, July 9 (CP).—Members of the French military and naval missions in London are being "held for repatriation," it was learned in informed quarters today.

Official sources said the missions definitely had not been interned, but observers regarded the phrase "held for repatriation" as elastic enough to cover virtual internment of the members, who worked with the British authorities up to the French capitulation to Germany.

It was explained that they are in possession of much information about military and naval forces here which Great Britain would not want to reach the axis powers.

A return to France just now might place the mission members in a position where they would be forced to give any information they have to Germany, it was said.

Defer Hearings in Bill Until Known, Stimson Nominations Dealt With

Washington, July 9—(AP)— The United States Senate Military Committee decided today to defer hearings on the Burke-Wadsworth military training bill until final Senate action on the nomination of Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox to head the War and Navy Departments.

Reliable sources said, however, that when the army's representatives did appear, they would approve the principle of compulsory military training, disagreeing only with details set out in the bill under consideration.

Leaders of various organizations which advocate civilian training were on the witness list of a House of Representatives committee considering the measure.

NOT TAKEN ON CIVIL GUARD

Toronto, July 9—(CP)— Armed guards now privately employed by various industries will not be taken on the Ontario civil guard, Attorney-General Gordon Conant said today.

French Charge d'Affaires in London Refused Permission to Retire

Vichy, France, July 9—(AP)—The French Chamber of Deputies today approved a bill granting the government of Premier Marshal Henri Philippe Petain full powers to write a new constitution. The vote was 395 to three.

Edouard Herriot, President of the Chamber, read the brief text of the bill, which had been approved last night by the cabinet with President Albert Lebrun presiding, and by the Chamber's Legislative Committee this morning.

The bill now is to be submitted to the Senate, where approval by a large majority is considered certain, and then it will go to the National Assembly, composed of both Houses sitting together, for purely formal approval.

TEA IS RATIONED IN GREAT BRITAIN

Newspapers Voiced Approval of Move Stating People Are Ready to Make Any Sacrifice

London, July 9.—(CP Cable)—Newspapers bring to the Briton the news that he must drink less of his inevitable tea, today voiced unqualified approval of the extension of rationing to tea, margarine and cooking fats.

Explaining that the people are ready for any sacrifice for victory and that the tea ration is similar to that in the last war, the Morning Telegraph said "there was no grumbling then".

Tea consumption will be cut under rationing to a quarter of the normal average consumption and means individuals will be restricted to about 25 cups a week at home. Sales in restaurants are not rationed so the sight of much used teapots being carried from hole-in-the-wall cafes is a familiar feature today.

The Times said threats of a siege blockade led to the rationing, a precautionary measure for defence. The Mail advised those who feel deprived of the odd cup of tea between meals to remember they are helping to save more than 50,000 tons of shipping space a year.

DROP INCENDIARY BOMBS

London, July 9 (CP).—A German raider dropped incendiary bombs in southeast England this morning, starting a number of fires which were extinguished by air raid wardens after the roofs of some cottages were damaged. No casualties were reported.

London, July 9—(CP Cable)—The battleship Richelieu, 35,000-ton pride of the French navy, has been heavily damaged by air and naval attacks while lying at anchor at Dakar, West Africa, A. N. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons today.

Running the risk of blowing themselves up, British seamen took a small boat through the outer defences of the harbor to plant depth charges under the stern of the new battleship, which was the most formidablle in the world, and damaged her propellors and steering apparatus.

Nazis 'Interpret' Suggestion Made By U. S. President

Berlin, July 9—(AP)—The controlled Nazi press today centred attention on reports from the United States of President Roosevelt's suggestion that Europe and Asia adopt principles of the Monroe Doctrine in solving international problems.

Nazis read into the President's proposals an impression that the United States was giving more thought to the "negative aspects" of the Monroe Doctrine—interpreting this as a sign that in return for keeping out of the western hemisphere, "European powers" might expect the United States to keep out of what the Nazis regard as European affairs.

FUEL DEALERS ASK FOR FUEL BOARD

Toronto, July 9—(CP)—Members of the Toronto Retail Fuel Dealers' Association, meeting here last night, unanimously voted in favor of asking the Ontario Industry and Labor Board to set up a Fuel Board. A petition signed by about 150 dealers will be presented to the Board today or tomorrow, a spokesman said.

He said the dealers were of the opinion that the public, the dealers and the coal company employees should be represented on such a Fuel Board.

Burma Road Affair Test for Japan, Tokyo Considers British Rejection

Japanese Program to Assume Control Over European - Owned Territories in Far East Testing Matter Say Neutrals

TOKYO PRESS CHARGES

Tokyo, July 9—(AP)—Informed quarters assert Japan is preparing to take military action against Hong Kong if Britain continues refusal to close the Burma route of war supplies to China.

These sources said Japanese plans are complete and merely await London's reply to a request for reconsideration of the refusal.

They pointed to the removal of women and children from Hong Kong as an indication of the seriousness with which Britain views the situation.

The Japanese cabinet decided today to send new representations to Britain, and Domei, Japanese news agency, said the Ministers expressed "strong opinions" in their meeting.

Discuss British Rejection

Neutral diplomatic quarters looked upon the Burma road affair as a test for Japan's entire program to assume and consolidate control over European-owned territories in Eastern Asia.

The Japanese War, Navy and Foreign Ministries called emergency conferences to discuss British rejection yesterday of Japan's demand that this link between the Chinese Nationalist forces and the outside world be cut off—as a means of ending the three-year-old Chinese-Japanese war.

Japanese Press Makes Charges

The Japanese press was unanimous in declaring that "an understanding" with the United States and Soviet Russia preceded the British reply and newspapers repeated previous charges that the United States fleet is acting as Britain's watchdog in the Pacific."

The press at some time reported Japan's roving diplomat, Naotake Sato, in conference with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had received indications Germany would back Japan in any action against Britain in the Far East.

Britain Loses 30,377 Gross Tons By Enemy Action Week Ending June 30

London, July 9—(CP)—Britain lost six merchant ships totalling 30,377 gross tons by enemy action in the week ended June 30, the Admiralty announced today.

In the same period three Allied vessels totalling 9,622 tons and three neutral ships totalling 11,340 tons were sunk by "enemy" action.

These losses, it was said, were slightly above the average, except in the case of neutral shipping.

It should be borne in mind, however, a naval source said, that the number of neutral countries has decreased progressively.

All Explosives Must be Loaded 12 Miles Below New Orleans

New Orleans, July 9 (AP).—A new safety measure went into effect today as reports circulated in shipping circles that an additional 10,000,000 pounds of high explosives for Great Britain were enroute here.

Captain J. L. Ahern of the Coast Guard, newly named captain of the port under an emergency presidential decree, said all explosives would have to be loaded at an anchorage more than twelve miles down the Mississippi river from the city proper.

A shipment of 8,500,000 pounds of T.N.T., released from the government arsenal at Fort Wingate, New Mexico, passed through here in great secrecy more than a week ago, and was shipped to Britain. Subsequently it was learned that the 132-carload shipment was transferred from port docks.

News dispatches from Gallup, N. M., yesterday said that 10,000,000 pounds of additional T.N.T. was being loaded for shipment east, presumably New Orleans.

Captain Ahern, in his order, acted under authority granted by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau June 27 specifying that "movement, loading and discharging of explosive or inflammable material or other dangerous cargo shall be under the supervision and control of the captain of the port."

He also announced that shipping companies, transportation companies and shipping asociations would be required to obtain from him a permit to load and handle high explosives on water-borne craft within the port.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

MONDAY WARMEST DAY OF THE YEAR

Yesterday was the warmest day enjoyed this year, but it in no way reminded citizens of the sweltering days experienced this corresponding week in 1936. Yesterday the mercury rose to over 80 on the thermometer, while a year ago yesterday the temperature was nearly ten degrees hotter.

Four years ago yesterday saw the start of a six-day heat wave that resulted in temperatures bordering on the 100 mark for several days. It was in the early part of July, this corresponding week to be exact, that citizens sweltered in one of the hottest heat waves of the present century.

The road to the bay bridge was lined with automobiles every night for over a week, where city folk were endeavoring to obtain what little comfort from breezes off the bay possible. The city parks were a comfortable rendezvous along the cooling Bay of Quinte, but little sleep was enjoyed that particular week. Local probabilities are fair and warmer today.

DR. ANNIS, LINDSAY, INJURED IN INDIANA

Friends in the city of Dr. M. Annis, Lindsay, retired optician, and famous checker player, well known in this district, will regret to hear that he is in a critical condition following a motor accident at Michigan City, Indiana, when he was returning from California. The accident occurred on June 30th, the day upon which Wilfred A. Lick drowned in the Bay of Quinte. Dr. Annis is an uncle of Mrs. O. R. Thompson and Miss Evelyn Lick of this city.

HERB BURLEY HOOKS 8¼-POUND PICKEREL

Herb Burley, well-known Belleville basketball player has turned his recreational efforts in the direction of angling and has met with more than the usual success already this year. Only last week Herb proudly displayed a fine finny beauty, but last evening he surpassed his most anxious hopes, when he landed an 8 1-4 pound pickerel, caught in West Lake, Prince Edward County. What made the catch more interesting was the fact that the angler's 86-year-old grandfather, Ben Burley of this city, accompanied Herbie on the trip and was as keenly interested in the catch as though the elderly gentleman had actually made the strike. Herb was casting with a Williams spinner when he made his strike.

ADDED ATTRACTION FOR KID KAR DERBY

An added attraction for this evening's fifth annual Belleville Kinsmen Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby was guaranteed today when it was announced that Ernest Young, 1939, Canadian Soap Box champion, would drive his new kid car "Zip 2nd" over the Derby Hill course in an attempt to lower the world's Soap Box Derby record. Having won one Soap Box championship, Champion Ernest Young is not eligible to enter again, but the youthful driver is still keenly interested in Soap Box racing and has constructed his 1939 model racer in such a fashion that he approached the Kinsmen Club last evening seeking permission to give an exhibition run down Derby Hill this evening in an attempt to lower the existing world's Soap Box Derby speed record.

Aside from Champion Young's trial heat, there will be 38 heats raced tonight before the 1940 Canadian Soap Box Derby champion is heralded. Seventy-five drivers will compete in the local race this evening, including entries from Trenton, Stirling, Kingston, Prince Edward County and Belleville.

RECRUITING GOOD SAYS COL. GRIBBLE

Voluntary recruiting under the Defence of Canada regulations is progressing quite favourably in the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank), according to Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble today. Last evening 20 new recruits were accepted at the Armouries bringing the present strength, of the local unit, drilling for home defence purposes, to nearly one hundred of all ranks. When at full strength the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) will be 729 of all ranks.

"At present we are only introducing light training, but it is expected, that our unit will go into camp for a training period some time this summer. Recruiting is carried on every week day at the Armouries and we are open until 9.00 p.m. evenings to accept voluntary recruits and I might add that all recruiting will be of a voluntary nature until the National Registration comes into effect early in August," explained Lieut.-Col Gribble in his office at the Armouries this morning.

The Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) will train for the time being as an infantry unit.

FISHERMEN LAND A 15-POUND 'LUNGE

Fishing in the waters of the Bay of Quinte in Muscote Bay on Sunday, Steve Flintoff of the Bowra Electric, and Harold Harnes, were fortunate in landing a 15-pound 'lunge. The fish was hooked from a boat while trolling in the bay and gave Flintoff a real struggle before landing it. The two fishermen claimed that the 15-pounder they landed was snagged almost immediately after they had hooked a much larger 'lunge, but with the toughest of "fisherman's luck," what was easily a 20-pounder, or more, managed to escape before he was landed in the boat.

SOME MAIL SERVICES ARE SUSPENDED

Official notice is given from the Belleville post office that all mail service, including money order service is suspended to France, Corsica, Algeria, Tunis, Andorra, Monaco, French Morocco and Switzerland.

Parcel post is suspended to all European countries (except Gibraltar, Portugal and Spain), also to Turkey and Syria.

The bulletin states that mail for members of the Canadian Active Service Force on duty in Newfoundland should be addressed as follows: Regimental Number, rank and name, full name of regiment or unit, C.A.S.F., care of base office, Canada.

Entire Expense For Show Borne By Picture Industry

No one outside of the committee officials has any idea of the magnitude or the work involved in the Motion Picture Industry's Win the War Campaign for the sale of War Savings Stamps in co-operation with the Dominion Government through the holding of special patriotic performances in all theatres across the country Monday, July 15, at 8.30 o'clock.

No less than 650,000 complimentary tickets have been distributed among the 1,300 moving picture theatres, this number being the approximate combined seating capacity in Canada. Close to $1,000,000 worth of war savings stamps are being sent to the theatres by the War Savings Stamp Committee at Ottawa through the post offices in every city and town which has a "movie." A thousand film trailers announcing the free show on July 15 have been shipped to all parts of the country while several thousand manuals, giving campaign instructions and suggestions, are in the hands of theatre proprietors and managers. There are a dozen national committees at work on their respective duties while regional campaign committees are busy in 15 cities. As many as 35 people, loaned for the purpose by theatre companies and film exchanges, have been occupied with details at the headquarters in Toronto.

All this, and more too, is being done at the expense of the film industry so that no deduction will be made for expenses from the proceeds of the sale of war savings stamps, every cent of which will be collected by Federal Government representatives and branch bank managers to aid in Canada's war effort when the patriotic shows are held. To do this, the industry is donating theatres for the whole evening, the latest screen attractions have been made available without cost, theatre staffs and talent have donated their services while various companies have provided tickets, film trailers, accessories, stationery and other supplies without charge in order to help the national cause. All that the public is asked to do is to buy at least two 25c war savings stamps at a theatre box office for which he will receive a complimentary ticket for a special free show at 8.30 o'clock on the night of July 15th. to help Canada win the war.

Application Forms Now Available For Entry into U. S.

Application forms for passports for entry into the United States are now available at the post office but only in limited quantities, according to a report from post office officials this morning.

A rush of inquirers depleted the initial stocks of forms which were sent to the local office when it first became necessary to obtain passports for entry into the States, but this was caused by numbers of people acquiring forms who had but the slightest intention of visiting south of the border at the present time. "In many cases, forms were asked for by persons who intended making a visit to the United States next December," stated Postmaster Trualsch this morning, "but in the future we intend to question applicants regarding their intention before giving them the forms."

With the rush of printing new tax forms, etc., the Government printing press at Ottawa had been working day and night for the past few weeks and only a limited quantity of passport forms were available to each office, making the above restrictions necessary if the forms were to be available to those actually intending to visit the United States in the near future, stated Mr. Trualsch.

CITY COUNCIL RECESSES UNTIL MONDAY, SEPT. 16

Last Session of Council Before Summer Holiday Bereft of Important Business

BY-LAWS PASSED

Committee Appointed to Interview Highway Department After Road Report Submitted

The Belleville City Council at the conclusion of their session on Monday evening, adjourned until September 16, for the summer recess and a by-law was passed permitting the Mayor, Glencoe E. Thompson and officials at the City Hall to carry on the business of the city without ratification by the members. The Mayor was authorized to sign all cheques and conduct all business that has been approved by the several department heads.

A comprehensive plan was submitted by City Engineer Charles A. Mott respecting the new roadway that is contemplated to allow the heavy transports to go around the Murney Street Hill and thus eliminate a great deal of noise that is caused by these machines in that particular area and also to cut down the accident toll at this point. A petition was submitted to the council some time ago by residents of West Bridge Street and Highland Avenue respecting the noise created by transports trying to negotiate that particular hill and requested that they be re-routed up the West Dundas Street hill. The plan shows a considerable quantity of fill would be required for the water bound macadam road that would be constructed at a width of 30 feet with a ten-foot shoulder on each side. The transports would have a straight run at the 5.6 per cent grade and plenty of room to come to a stop on the level before proceeding into Highway No. 2 at this point.

A special committee of Mayor Thompson, Aldermen Rollins, Haig, and the City Engineer was appointed to confer with the Department of Highways seeking request to re-route traffic especially the transports. This committee will proceed to Toronto at their earliest convenience and if the Department accepts the proposition the council will hold a special meeting to consider if the city can stand the expense of the project. The Isolation Unit of the Belleville General Hospital will pass into the hands of the Corporation on July 15th, according to a recommendation passed at the meeting. The treasurer was ordered to pay $20,000 to the W.C.A. and Board of Governors as their share and also pay a monthly tenancy of $200 per month from that date. Alderman McLean Haig was given permission to interview the Municipal Board with regards to negotiating with the Public Utilities with respect to the Waterworks Bonds held by that Corporation.

It was also agreed by the members that members of the Council called to military service and while a member of the council should be paid their fees if absent. Mrs. Jack Eaton was allowed to purchase the property at 45 and 45 1-2 Front Street for a sum of $275. Four lights will be placed on the roadway on the east side of the Moira River. Repairs will be made to a house owned by the city at 75 East South John Street at a cost of $34. It was decided to advertise the old Isolation hospital for sale and the special property committee given authority to close the deal if a fair price is offered.

An automatic stoker will be purchased for the City Hall heating plant but the tenderer will have to supply more definite particulars of specifications. It was decided to petition the Police Commission asking that body to prohibit the use of push carts on Bridge street and Front street on Saturday from 8.00 a.m. until 12.00 p.m. The tenders for castings from the Belleville Foundries was accepted at a price of $3.75 per cwt. Alderman Rollins and Haig were appointed a special committee to consider special grants for the Arena and Wharf Street Athletic Club and report at the next meeting. Fireman Wallace Snell will be paid for nine days of his holidays and Fire Chief Lynch was given permission to attend the Fire Chief's convention to be held at Brantford in August. Mayor Thompson was given permission to declare Monday, August 5th as a Civic Holiday.

By-laws granting a deed to D. L. Storey, and Mrs. Jack Eaton were passed as also one for the transfer of lands by the Special Property committee during the summer recess.

Report Submitted

The report given by the City Engineer on the proposed new road is herewith given.

Aldermen of the City Council,
Belleville, Ont.
Highway. Construction—West Dundas St. Hill

Gentlemen,—

As instructed by recommendation dated June 24th 1940, I beg to submit herewith a report on the estimated cost of constructing a permanent roadway across parts of Lots 2, 3 and 4 at West Dundas Street corner, better known as the "Devil's Elbow" in the City of Belleville.

Parts of Lots 2 and 3 at this location are owned by the Department of Provincial Highways of Ontario, but the small cottage listed as 103 W. Dundas Street and located on part of Lot 2 is shown on the assessment roll as belonging to the late W. N. Ponton. Part of Lot 4 at the Bay Bridge Road corner is owned by the City of Belleville. A road allowance called Marsh Street is shown on the registered plan of the city as separating Lots 3 and 4, but this street has never been opened up for traffic and likely never will be. However, it will be necessary to have this street legally closed in the proper manner and in view of the fact that part of the motor traffic is to be diverted from Highland Avenue and part of West Bridge Street by the construction of this new roadway across the West Dundas Street corner, I feel certain that the proposed undertaking will have to be advertised even though the city obtains the approval of the Department of Highways to cross its property, namely, parts of Lots 2 and 3.

The proposed new roadway would be 600' in length and 30' in width, with a 10' shoulder on each side of the finished road surface including heavy cable guard fences. A 6.5 per cent grade would provide practically a straight line for traffic along West Dundas Street, thus eliminating the 7.2 per cent grade on the existing West Dundas Street hill and the 8 per cent grade on part of West Bridge Street as shown on the small plan of the city as submitted.

The construction of the new roadway would consist of stone and gravel fill, upon which would be built a water bound macadam roadway, surface treated with liquid asphalt and chip cover. At the top of the hill a section of the new roadway would have practically a level grade for a distance of 150' to provide a stopping place for west bound traffic at the stop sign before entering upon the main highway at this location.

Improvements at the corner of West Bridge Street and Coleman Street would include the relocating of the waterworks hydrant and the increasing of the radius of the pavement curb at the south east corner of this intersection.

The large plan and photographs submitted herewith show in detail the location and type of construction of the proposed roadway. The attached sheet, page 3, outlines the estimated cost of the project.

Yours respectfully,
Charles A. Mott,
City Engineer.

The total cost of construction of the 30' roadway (not including the purchase of any lands or buildings) is estimated as follows:

15,000 cu. yards stone and gravel fill at 60c per cu. yd. $9,000.00; 600 cu. yards, 2 1-2" to 3" crushed stone at $2.00 per cu. yd. $1,200.00; 200 cu. yd. 1" crushed stone at $2.00 per cu. yd. $400.00; Grading, rolling, etc., $400.00; 1,000 gals. liquid asphalt at 13c per gallon $130.00; 30 tons 3-8" pea gravel cover at $2.00; $60.00; Drainage culvert, $95.00; 560' heavy cable guard fence $560.00; Labour on surface treatment work $80.00; Removal of trees and shrubbery $40.00; new traffic signs $30.00; Alterations to sidewalks, curbing and existing pavements $160.00; Alterations to waterworks hydrants $120.00; Removal and relocation of power line poles and guy wires $220.00; Total $12,485.00; engineering and supervision 2 per cent. $250.00; Total $12,735.00; Appurtenances $150.00; Total $12,885.00.

Charles A. Mott,
City Engineer.

Stamp Savings Day Plan Begins Wednesday Morning July 10th

Mr. Jack McVeigh, President of the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association, announced today that the plan known as War Stamp Savings Day (Wednesday mornings) goes into effect this Wednesday morning, July 10th, and is sponsored by the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association. If any of the merchants did not receive a letter explaining this effort and are interested in learning further of the plan it is suggested that they get in touch with any member of the following committee: H. Carruthers, (Reward Shoe Store); Ed. Shapiro, (McNabb's); J. McVeigh, (Kresge's); B. Yanover, (Esquire); Ed. Logan, (McFee's); W. Doyle, (John Lewis Co.); B. Lattimer, (Lattimer's Drug Store); Bill Cook, (Cook's Tobacconist).

Police Blotter

While patrolling his beat at the rear of Front St. early last evening, P. C. Arnott apprehended a transient, who gave his name as George Taylor of the Peace River district. Today Taylor was charged with intoxication.

When taken into custody Taylor was found to be in possession of a small part of a bottle of native wine, while lying nearby was an empty "40-ouncer." After viewing the situation Constable Arnott said: "Who helped you drink all of this stuff?"

"I'se drank it alone," was Taylor's almost unbelievable reply.

Following complaints from the manager of the local United Cigar Store, Donald Roe, Constables Wright and Arnott arrested George Miller, Belleville, on a charge of intoxication. It was alleged that Miller had taken a magazine from off the news rack in front of the United Cigar Store, which ultimately led to his arrest and remand to the custody of the county jail.

A transient appeared at the police station seeking a night's shelter last evening. The man was quite evidently intoxicated as he could give no coherent answers and was promptly "booked" by Sergeant Arthur Booth. The man gave his name as Oscar Turcott and it was later revealed that he had only been released from jail yesterday morning.

Chief Kidd received a letter of complaint from Mr. H. A. Bortlain, 204 King St., Toronto, who stated that a fog light had been stolen from off the front of his parked motor car here on Dominion Day, he was convinced. The light was not found missing until Mr. Bortlain returned home, however, and might have been lost en route, Chief Kidd suggested after receipt of the letter of complaint.

Hon. J. S. Gardiner Tells of Steps

Mr. Gardiner, who later will relinquish the portfolio of Agriculture, told of the steps taken and proposed for national registration only a few hours after he had been named to the new department by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

"We hope to complete the registration in August," he said.

The registration plans call for use of the census facilities of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and facilities of the chief electoral officer who compiles voters' lists for federal elections.

Duty is to Appear Before Registrar

Judges named by Chief Justices of all provinces will supervise the registration within their own area and in each federal constituency the registration will be under the direction of a registrar and a deputy.

These officials likely will be named before the end of the week. Registration forms are now being printed.

It will be a personal responsibility for Canadians to present themselves to the registrar, in their area, penalties being provided for failure to do so.

Budapest, July 9—(AP)— Hungary's government leaders were called to Berlin today to discuss settlement of their country's claims on Rumania with the German and Italian Foreign Ministers, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano.

Hungarian Premier Count Paul Teleky and Foreign Minister Count Istan Csaky were expected also to confer with Hitler during their stay in the Berlin capital. Informed sources said they would leave for Berlin this afternoon.

It was learned that a Hungarian note was sent to Germany several days ago setting forth Hungary's minimum demands for return from Rumania of Transylvania.

Von Ribbentrop and Ciano, who conferred with Hitler in Berlin Sunday and are scheduled to see him again this week, were said to have been studying the note and the Hungarian Ministers were expected to discuss the whole question with them.

May Settle For Less

Hungary, it is understood here, is willing to settle peacefully with Rumania for less than the original borders of Transylvania, lost to Rumania in the last war settlement.

The Hungarian army is on a complete war footing and apparently the Hungarian attitude is that the nation must remain on this basis until her claims on Transylvania are satisfied in one war or another.

To what extent the axis powers might go to soothe Hungary in the interests of keeping peace in southeastern Europe remained a question.

Hitler and Ciano May Ask Delay

It was admitted there is a possibility Hitler and Ciano may ask Hungary to reserve her claims for the time being—as in the case of Bulgaria's claim on southern Dobruja although this directly involves Magyar prestige

To date the Bulgarian government has indicated its reliance on the reported axis assurance that Bulgarian's claims will be satisfied at a peace conference after the war.

It is believed here Hitler and Ciano already know how far Rumania can be persuaded to make further frontier adjustments.

(Rumania has ceded Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina to Russia.)

There has been no indication, however, that Rumania is ready to yield Transylvania and mobilization there is as complete as in Hungary.

Masons Secure Homes For 44 Refugees in Tweed Village

Tweed,—Members of Tweed Masonic Lodge have secured homes for forty-four evacuees from the British Isles. Other organizations interested in placing children are taking up this matter and other homes will be secured so that Tweed will be ready to accommodate its quota of children from the Motherland when they arrive.

Lieut. Rogers of Picton Nova Scotia, was the special speaker at the local Salvation Army Citadel on Sunday. Lieut. Rogers has recently been appointed to the Riverside Corps in Calgary, Alberta, and will take up her new duties in a short time.

The many Tweed friends of Rev. W. L. Wright, formerly rector of St. James's Anglican Church, Tweed, are pleased to learn of his appointment as rector of St. Luke's Pro-Cathedral in Sault Ste. Marie and Dean-elect of that city in the Diocese of Algoma. His wife was formerly Miss Margaret Clare, a member of Tweed High School staff for some years.

C. L. Rice of Niagara Falls, N.Y., is the envy of Tweed fisherman. On Thursday while fishing in Stoco Lake with Murney Badgley of Toronto, he landed 6 1-2 lb pickerel, his second of the same size in two days.

BILL MEANS END

This probably means the end of the democratic third republic, which followed the empire of Napoleon III.

Petain's government is expected to emerge with greater power than any free government of Republican France ever held— authority to France its own laws and constitution and then create its own Assembly to ratify them.

Identity Not Disclosed

The identity of the three Deputies who cast opposition ballots was not ascertained immediately. But the Provincial Press noted that Jules Jeanneny, President and for years "grand old man" of the Senate, abstained from participation in any meetings on the constitution although he was in Vichy.

Havas News Agency distributed a communique of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, saying that Roger Cambon, French Charge d'Affaires in London who informed the British Foreign Office July 5 that he could not longer hold the diplomatic post, had been "provisionally suspended."

Cambon's request that he be placed on the retirement list was refused, Havas said.

His action came after he delivered to the British Foreign Office the French government's protest over the British naval attack on the French Mediterranean fleet.

Berne, Switzerland, July 9—(CP) —France's forgotten family—the House of Orleans—hopes for restoration of the throne in the virtual totalitarian dictatorship which Premier Petain is forming the new French state.

Reports reaching Switzerland today said the Duke of Guise, claimant of the French throne, and his young heir, the Count of Paris, have renewed their bid for recognition, working under protection of the Spanish Nationalist Government at their headquarters near Larche, Spanish Morocco.

Dispatches from Cichy, new seat of the German-vanquished French Government, have said the 84-year-old Premier Petain would become "chief of state" under a new constitution described as "corporative" —the term Italian Fascists apply to Mussolini's government.

These dispatches added that Petain would assume "only the title of executive power"—presumably as a figurehead—and that the government would be dominated by a triumvirate composed of Gen. Maxime Weygand, former Allied commander-in-chief, former Premier Pierre Laval and former Labor Minister Adrien Marquet.

Lebrun May Resign

Resignation of President Lebrun was forecast along with expectations that reshaping of the third republic into a totalitarian mold would begin immediately.

Recently it was reported a strong group of Royalists had installed themselves high in the councils of the Petain Government.

The king pin of their bloc was said to be Gen. Weygand, long regarded in army and political quarters as having Royalist sympathies.

Petain, while ambassador to Nationalist Spain, was friendly with a group of Spanish Royalist officers. Reports here said he was "tremendously impressed" by the pattern of General Francisco Franco's Spanish Government which has "left the door open" to a return of Spanish monarchy.

The Count of Paris, current hero of the French Royalists, said in one of his periodic manifestoes:

"God forbid that it take a great disaster to show France the way back to sanity, but if it does, we must be ready."

The Count applied formally to the French Government at the start of the war for permission to serve as a soldier, but he was refused. Like other men of the direct Orleans line, he is forbidden to set foot on the soil of France or French possessions or protectorates.

AT THE BELLE

"Brother Orchid"

Edward G. Robinson is back at his bullet-proof best in "Brother Orchid," the new Warner Bros. film opening next at the Belle Theatre. An hilarious satire on the denizens of the underworld, "Brother Orchid" tells the story of a gangster who goes gunning for culture, with side-splitting results.

Featured with Robinson are Ann Sothern, as a hat-check girl who takes a good tip; Humphrey Bogart, as a diabolically double crossing henchmen; Ralph Bellamy as the alfalfa grower whose bank-roll isn't hay; and Allen Jenkins as Willie the Knife, a cute little cut-up.

Lloyd Bacon, ace director of action pictures, directed from the screen play by Earl Baldwin, based on the Collier Magazine story by Richard Connell.

"Pop Always Pays"

Laughs are the order of the day in RKO Radio's newest comedy offering, "Pop Always Pays," announced as the companion feature attraction, with Leon Errol, Adele Pearce, Dennis O'Keefe and Walter Catlett heading the featured cast.

Dealing with the efforts of two men to accumulate a thousand dollars apiece for very different reasons, the story climbs swiftly to peaks of hilarity and maintains its rapid pace to the very end. When a fussy father learns that a spendthrift young man wants to marry his daughter, he forbids the wedding until the suitor can save a thousand dollars.

Certain that this task will be impossible, he benevolently offers to give the young people a thousand dollars as a wedding present—if, of course, they save up the original thousand. The young pair scheme to get the money by hook or crook, aided by the girl's mother. The father, finding he will soon be called upon to make good his promise and unable to raise the sum takes desperate measures to retrieve himself—and the complications keep the laugh pressure up to the boiling point.

Errol is brilliantly cast as the worried father with a houseful of troubles, while two rising young newcomers, Miss Pearce and O'Keefe, portray the young couple in sprightly fashion. Marjorie Gateson as Errol's wife and Walter Catlett as a nosey neighbor, have the other principal roles and handle them expertly.

The production values Bert Gilroy has given the film and the clever direction of Leslie Goodwins, combine to make "Pop Always Pays," a real high spot in the season's comedy offerings.

"Lillian Russell"

"Lillian Russell," Darryl F. Zanuck's great entertainment triumph, is now closing at the Belle Theatre with Alice Faye, Don Ameche and Harry Fonda in the top featured roles.

The picture portrays the life and loves of the woman who thrilled the country for thirty years with her exotic beauty, her exquisite voice and her enthralling stage presence. It also revives the famous song hits of her day.

Alice Faye superbly fills the title role and Ameche and Fonda turn in the best performances of their careers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"You're Not So Tough"

With the five dead end kids and the little tough guys sharing honors with Nan Grey and an excellent supporting cast, Universal's new comedy-drama "You're Not So Tough" is the next screen attraction coming to the McCarthy Theatre.

The dead end boys include Billy Halop, Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell, Bernard Punsly and Bobby Jordan, all from the New York cast of the play, "Dead End." They are seen as migrant workers following California's crops, but preferring to live by their wits rather than by the sweat of their brows. Nan Grey is a "dust-bowl" refugee with whom Halop falls in love.

Others in the cast are Rosina Galli and Henry Armetta. Miss Galli is seen as the owner of a Sacramento Valley ranch where the boys and Nan obtain work.

The picture was directed by Joe May, who has to his credit the recent hit pictures, "The House of the Seven Gables" and "The Invisible Man Returns."

The three stooges new comedy, "Three Sappy People," a technicolor cartoon and "Birth of a Queen," which is a graphic screen version of the building of England's luxury liner, the Queen Mary are added hits on the program with "You're Net so Tough."

"Wagons Westward"

The thrilling adventure drama, "Wagons Westward," starring Chester Morris, Anita Louise, Buck Jones and Ona Munson, plus latest Fox News events, "Screen Snapshots," and a laugh-loaded comedy, "Andy Clyde Takes in Broadway," is the current program presentation at the McCarthy Theatre and for a swell two-hour show of genuine entertainment, relaxation and pleasure, here is about as excellent screen-fare as anyone could possibly hope to find.

Leon Errol and Marjorie Gateson in the uproarious comedy, "Pop Always Pays," next at the Belle with Edw. G. Robinson and Ann Sothern in "Brother Orchid."

JAPANESE LEADER ASKS APOLOGY

Speedy Settlement of Shanghai Incident Demanded of Commander of U.S. Marines

Shanghai, July 9.—(AP)—Major General Saburo Miura, commander of Japanese gendarmes, demanded an apology today from the commander of United States Marines in the International Settlement for alleged maltreatment of fifteen plainclothes gendarmes while in marine custody.

He declared that "speedy settlement of the incident is necessary or the matter is likely to take a grave turn".

Miura previously had apologized for presence of the gendarmes in the American defence area of the International Settlement in violation of an agreement not to enter without American Military authorities' consent. In a letter to Col. Dewitt Peck, Marine Commander, Miura said that despite his previous agreement to consider the incident closed, "discovery of new facts revealing that the Americans insulted the entire Japanese army" made necessary further consideration of the case.

Gendarmes Not Part of Japanese Army

A Japanese spokesman said the gendarmes entered the area to safeguard Gen. Toshizo Nishio, Commander-in-chief of Japanese forces in China.

Col. Peck, who indicated informally that no apology would be forthcoming, said today he had asked the Japanese to explain additional violations of the agreement.

He declared Japanese attempted to drive two tanks into the zone Sunday but were stopped by a marine patrol and that Japanese drove 125 motor trucks into the area yesterday.

Col. Peck said he also had pointed out to Miura the "discourtesy" of the Japanese in failing to inform the Americans of Nishio's entrance into the American sector Sunday.

Yesterday the Marine Commander said the Japanese gendarmes "were given exactly the same consideration and treatment as any man we arrest, including a medical examination".

DEFER APPROVAL ENGINE CONTRACT

Directors of Packard Company Will Give Further Study to Matters of Proposed Contract

Detroit, July 9 — (AP) — The Board of Directors of the Packard Motor Car Company have deferred approval of a proposed contract to manufacture 9,000 Rolls Royce airplane motors for the United States and Great Britain.

President Max M. Gilman told newsmen in a statment following a meeting yesterday that "the matter of a possible contract" had been discussed but that no action had been taken because "there are many matters that require further study."

"The Packard Motor Car Company is anxious to be of public service and is hopeful that a satisfactory agreement can be reached," the statement added.

President and Defence Heads to Meet

Gilman indicated he would return to Washington soon for further conferences with the National Defence Commission. Of the 9,000 motors, 6,000 are for Britain and 3,000 for the United States.

He said the Ford Motor Company, which previously had refused the contract on the grounds it would manufacture the engines for the United States only, had turned its preliminary plans over to his firm.

Gilman last week announced plans for a $30,000 expansion program, contingent upon acceptance of the contract, and said production of the motors would begin 10 months from the day the contract was signed.

TRENT RIVER FISHING REPORTED SPLENDID

Reports from along the Trent River fishing grounds near and north of Healey Falls are quite encouraging these days. American tourists, who continue to swarm into Ontario seeking the solace of Canadian fishing grounds, are reporting splendid catches of maskinonge these days. Over the week end Mrs. Earl Breyley of Berea, Ohio, landed a 17-pound muskie, that measured 45 inches with a girth of 17 inches. A smaller 'lunge was caught the same day by Mr. R Kyle of Girard Ohio. Bass fishing is also reported at its height in the same waters.

Operators Reverse Decision On Bringing Equipment to City

'Safety Lane' Equipment Will Not be Brought Here Due to War and Labor Shortage

HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

The shortage of labor in local garages, due to the fact that many employees were entering associate branches of the motor mechanics trade and to the uncertainty of future labour conditions due to a possible home defence measure, prompted a decision during the Garage Operators' Association dinner meeting at the Queen's Hotel on Tuesday evening, not to bring the "Safety Lane" equipment to Belleville this summer. At a previous meeting it had been arranged to bring this equipment into the district to test automobiles as to their mechanical condition, but uncertainty as to the financial success of the venture and because of existing labour conditions, the matter was allowed to drop for this season.

Last evening's Garage Operators' meeting proved to be one of the shortest on record with the matter of staging their annual picnic being the only other business discussed. After considerable discussion, relative to business and war conditions as being unfavourable to holding the picnic, all objection was over-ruled and the picnic will be held as pre-arranged, with any profits shown after expenses were met to be donated to some war service fund.

The names of three Trenton garages were submitted by Kenneth Vivien, who recommended their being taken into the association. Mr. Bert Boyce, as Chairman of Grievances, also talked briefly.

Several Guest Speakers

Guest speakers for the evening included members of the General Motors Sales Branch, being Charles Hill of the Sales Promotion Dept.; Grant Coates, Assistant Sales Promotion Manager; Herman Lapp District Sales Manager and Pearson Andrews, also of the Sales Promotion Dept.

Mr. Coates spoke briefly, commenting on the recent additional taxes imposed on the motor industry by the Canadian Government, assuring his listeners of the industry's ability to adjust itself to the burden. He referred to the work General Motors were doing in the manufacture of army equipment, but assured that the domestic market was to be carried on during 1941 as it had in the past.

The showing of motion pictures pertaining to the motor industry completed the evening's program. The first picture, entitled "Turnabout Man," depicting a motorist having a nightmare in which he saw himself showing the utmost in courtesy to fellow-motorists and pedestrians, while he was driving, but for some unaccountable reason, acting the very opposite when he, himself, was out of the car.

An incite into the manufacturing details concerned in the making of automobiles under modern production methods was depicted in the second reel. The importance of the automotive industry to Canadian workers was suggested, showing 13,000 workers were connected directly with the manufacture of motor cars in Canada, having an annual payroll of over $35,000,000. The final reel of the evening's program entitled "The Other Fellow," starring Edgar Kennedy, showed the proper as well as the wrong way, to drive a motor car. Placing yourself in the shoes of "the other fellow" was suggested as a means to cure most driving ills.

ITALY IN HUN'S COMPANY

If Italy waited long before she threw discretion to the winds and plunged into the pool of slaughter that the nazis have made, she chose a time when she was bound to find herself facing at once the most crucial tests. She "got in" on the spoils in the rending of France but she has to face a very active foe, the most dread of all when it comes to dogged perseverence—Britain.

Italy has picked the time and must pay the penalty. She has gone in at a time when Italy becomes the mere foolish pawn of Germany. A mixture of fear and a great amount of fascist avarice, envy and covetousness sent her into war. What is the chief aggressor to say to little Italy if Mussolini should ask for a pittance for Italy's part in the war. Hitler will tell him to go on watching the British fleet and the British air force and the British ports in the Mediterranean and that is what Mussolini will have to do. Only it will be the British who are seeking him and his force of ships and airplanes of which he so boasted for years.

Italy has hardly got broken into the ways of war yet. Germany is in deep up to the chin or even the brow in this ruthless strike for world power.

Italy, it has been recently said, is anxious to take part in the expected nazi attempt to invade England. Britain would welcome the Italians along with the Huns.

Italy, too, stayed out so long she had to go in at last, even if she was fearful of the Balkans. She probably was afraid Germany would not think of sharing with her in whatever crumbs fell to the dictators for the moment.

Just last week Italy had to bear the grim news that a nazi submarine had sent to their death a large number of Italian as well as German internees when the internment ship was sunk off the coast of Ireland by a nazi U-boat. That would ill please the impetuous people of Italy if they were told the news but dictatorship shuts the facts from the people.

That is what the Italian has earned by keeping company with the Hun. If it had not been for Italian participation those men would not have been under arrest and would not have been on that ship. Blame the nazis, that is what Italy must do.

But the sullen Hun does not care. What are hundreds of lost internees, nazis or fascists, as compared with the sinking of a 15,000-ton British steamship as the Woodstock Sentinel-Review comments, whose words are "the cold calculating nazis will think principally of the destruction of a 15,000-ton British ship. They would willing load every British ship with men of their own nationality and then sink both ship and men if in the end it left Britain without ships so that her defeat could be accomplished."

There is no doubt of that. The slaughter of the Huns in the battle of Flanders and France proves it. That is what Italy, too, will have to suffer for aiding and abetting Germany. The company of the Hun will land both Germany and Italy behind the bars in defeat.

THE ATTACKS ON GIBRALTAR

Gibraltar has been attacked feebly by aircraft. Here is the Rock which has stood the test of time. Now the Hun and his satellite, the rather prudent and tardy Italian, may attack the fortress which is the strongest in the world and which has withstood attack and siege.

Gibraltar has had time to strengthen its defences against ships and air attack.

If the enemy who has attacked so far only in feeble plane assaults, not a bomb hitting the Rock, but all falling into the sea, should make up his mind to besiege the fortress, there are the assurances of ample food, of stout defenders and of modern equipment to hold Gibraltar. The fortress has a water supply, which is sufficient. There are guns whose purpose is to handle attacking ships and guns which can play upon an army attempting to attack from the land side.

Britain pins her faith to the Rock of Gibraltar, the Pillars of Hercules. It is the guard to the Mediterranean. If Italy wants to upset the status quo of the inland sea, she can have her try at it, but she doubtless has had enough experience to be very cautious.

Clarity at Last

New York, July 9—Things become clearer and clearer. Soon they will be so obvious that the blindest eye can see.

Saturday's newspaper published four items of gravest concern to the United States.

First: Germany declares the Monroe Doctrine untenable except as it includes Germany as well as Britain.

Third: The Petain Government receives the "consent" of the Axis powers to use its ships against Great Britain, and Gibraltar is bombed by French planes.

Fourth: Neutral diplomats predict that Nazis will open a "peace offensive" against Great Britain. If the last is successful, a united Nazi-dominated Europe will face the United States, which will be isolated, without a single friend or ally in the whole world.

Let us look at what we have done. Before this war ever broke out we passed a Neutrality Act which tied the United States hand and foot. The Administration Bill succeeded in lifting the embargo on arms to the Allies, but it retained strangulating provisions. The assumption behind both versions of the Neutrality Act and behind the isolationist movement was that the war in Europe does not concern us. It was just one of those recurrent European quarrels, which would result in the changing of this boundary or that. It was no concern either of the United States or of the Western Hemisphere.

Such aid as we could give the Allies, in the form of goods paid for in cash, in harmony with every traditional consideration of international law, was hampered by the dilatoriness of the Allies, plus a constant fear on their part that even these shipments might be halted because the huge isolationist propaganda in the United States, by the necessity of preserving their gold resources, since credit was barred, and by the fact that nothing could be transported in American bottoms.

Defenseless Frontier.

Meanwhile, France has been defeated; and now observe the nature of that defeat. The Government of France has changed and a new Government has taken its place. This Government does not withdraw, defeated, from the war, but, in effect, it joins the Axis powers, putting what remains of the French Fleet and Air Force at the disposal of the Axis, as well, we may presume, as its financial reserves.

Against whom will Pan-Europe, led by Germany, be directed if Britain fails?

Against the Western Hemisphere And in the Western Hemisphere this Pan-Nazi-Europe need acquire no new bases. There is Greenland, owned by Denmark, now a Nazi protectorate, as near to the Northwest Territory of Canada as Norway is to Britain. There are all the British, Dutch and French possessions in the Caribbean. There is Canada, with 3,000 miles of unfortified frontier on the United States. There is South America, with every cultural and economic tie affiliating her with Europe—with Germany, France, Italy and Great Britain—not with us. There is Japan in the Far East.

Nazi Share Privileges.

Threatened north and south and east and west, we have one navy, excellent outposts in the Pacific and none at all, if Britain goes, in the Atlantic The Panama Canal is vulnerable.

This situation may occur in the middle of a presidential campaign in which candidates are still discussing whether the New Deal is or is not a good thing. It may occur while this country, devoted to a most preposterous interpretation of the right of free speech and assembly, actually still allows the German-American Bund to encamp and train its cohorts, and the Communist Party to organize inside our schools, social organizations and trade unions.

This situation may occur while Mr. Ford, in charge of one of the largest complexes of factories in the United States, strikes against the foreign policy of the United States in refusing to manufacture planes for Great Britain.

Freedom is, among other things, the possibility of choice. The possible choices for the United States become fewer and fewer. Soon we may have only one choice: To join the Axis ourselves and accept Nazi control over our institutions, under some Government "acceptable" to the Germans. Perhaps we shall now play a role similar to that of France and Great Britain. Perhaps ours will be the role, instead, of Austria, or Czecho-Slovakia or Denmark.

Laval Faces Big Job.

The hundred and sixty-fourth anniversary of the declaration of American independence saw the end of a thirty-six-year-old entente cordiale, which was the Western guaranty for us of the Monroe Doctrine. It saw the collapse of the sixty-five-year-old Constitution of the French Republic. And the new constitution, according to M. Laval, is to be drafted "on the lines of the Constitution of the United States, of Italy, Germany, and Portugal." M. Laval has certainly handed himself a job.

If Britain fails, it is preposterous for us to think that we can defend the Western Hemisphere. We shall have our hands more than full defending North America. We ought to give up immediately all interest in the Far East. We shall need our navy and air force right here, for home defense.

The British Fleet, under the control of the present Government could still be saved for us, but not if we retain our present concept of neutrality. For what guarantee has British that her fleet will not be used against her and Canada? Now is the time either to accept Nazi domination, and know what it will mean to American independence and American institutions, or to show such clarity of vision and such generosity that it includes everything for Britain except active military support.

Otherwise, tomorrow we shall have isolation: Not splendid isolation, but awful isolation.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Heart Rate Greatly Increases in Healthy Persons During the Twenty-four hours

You may be one of those individuals who like to count your pulse rate to learn whether or not your heart is beating too rapidly. You find that most of the time it is beating 72 or 76, or 80, or 84 to the minute, but it may beat 10 to 12 beats oftener than this and you think you have a slight rise in temperature. The thermometer, however, shows that your temperature is normal and you wonder what has caused the increased pulse rate.

As a matter of fact, the pulse rate may change a number of times a day and yet your heart be normal in every way.

I have spoken before of reaching for my watch after awakening from a good night's sleep and finding the heart rate 68 or 70. After lying awake for a few minutes, during which tie I may remember that I neglected some work of the day before, or I may try to plan some work for the day, I take my pulse rate again and find it up to 72 or 76, or even higher, and yet I have not raised my head from the pillow. Just the mere thinking or planning can increase the heart rate.

Many find that eating a hearty meal will increase the heart rate considerably due either to the extra work put on the heart during digestion of food or because considerable gas has accumulated in the stomach which crowds against top of stomach which, in turn, pushes against the floor of the chest and crowds the heart so that it has to beat oftener.

Then come the trials, the difficulties, the problems of the day which require deep thought and anxiety, each or both of which can send the heart rate up 10 to 20 beats.

It may be for this reason that people living in the country live longer; their heart rate is not as likely to increase so much or so often as those living in the city.

However, there is no cause for worry about the heart if, at times, or most of the time, it is beating at or near the normal rate; that is, if the heart rate is within normal limits during most of the 24 hours of the day.

"Extensive and exact studies in the measurement of the heart rate of persons living in New York City have shown pulse rates ranging from 55 to 120 beats per minute in a "healthy" person in a normal twenty-four hour cycle.

PATRIOTISM BEHIND INDUSTRY

There is patriotism behind the motion picture industry. The theatre interests of Canada are providing a magnificent gesture and a worthy aid to the war cause in staging free shows across the country on Monday evening, July 15, at 8:30, for the purpose of encouraging every Canadian to invest in war savings stamps. The theatres are footing every expense of the 1,300 shows in this service to the Dominion Government and its war effort.

H. M. S. 'King Alfred'

A CORPORATION Swimming Bath is now "H.M.S." for the duration and instead of swallow dives the men at the baths learn navigation and gunnery and signals.

H.M.S. King Alfred, a "stone frigate" on the seaside front, is the Navy's cramming house for temporary naval officers and among the 500 future commanding officers of small craft that I saw there in training the other day were the first batch of the Navy's "militiamen" selected for commissions.

They, like the R.N.V.R.s ratings with them, had all done at least three months' work at sea. The only route now to temporary commissions for war service in the Navy is by way of the Lower Deck; the old school tie and the "Guv'nor's" influence at Whitehall have no longer any pull. This is perhaps the most drastically democratic thing that the present war has produced in this country.

So the baths bear the name of that ancient King of England whom we call the Founder of the Royal Navy, a name that has been sadly neglected among the warships that float, for the only predecessor of the new establishment was an armored cruiser built in 1901.

The King Alfred was set up in the first week of the present war, but the step was not the outcome of a sudden and panic decision. Two years or more before, the Admiralty, foreseeing the urgent need that would arise for rapid additions to the officers corps when hostilities came, had prepared a list of candidates, men of seafaring and yachting experience, and had enrolled them as members of the Royal Naval Volunteer (Supplementary) Reserve. They had nothing to do in peace time in the way of drills or instruction; they had no uniform. They were just ready to be called on when wanted.

But that meant, so far as the Admiralty was concerned, some preparation for handling and training them in an emergency and the official scheme as first drafted provided for two training establishments, one in the south of England, one in Scotland, to which these supplementaries (nearly 2,000 of them) could be drafted for a rapid intensive course of naval training as soon as they were called up. It was expected that each establishment could produce up to 500 additional junior officers a year for naval service—and if the need for more was shown, a third establishment could be quickly started on the lines of the other two.

That was the pre-war idea.

But when the time came and the supplementaries were called up, the northern establishment was cancelled and it was decided to pass all candidates through H.M.S. King Alfred.

The new establishment did not exist on September 1; indeed, no actual buildings were earmarked for it and beyond the skeleton staff (the commanding officer and one or two of his immediate helpers) the whole thing was very much in embryo. At first it was suggested that local hotels should be commandeered, but on the front by luck there was a block of fine uncompleted buildings, the new Corporation Baths.

By the middle of September the baths began to become H.M.S. King Alfred.

With a skeleton of a building and a skeleton staff, it might have been weeks before the place was ready for its first batch of trainees. Actually, they joined up a few later! A contractor had erected cookery plant to provide meals for 500 men a day; builders and joiners had transformed the showers baths, dressing rooms and drying rooms into neatly partitioned class rooms for groups of twenty; the great sunlounge had been given a quota of sofas and chairs to make a wardroom anteroom of it, and a vast section of the underground car park had been boarded in and rigged up as a dining room.

For the time being the probationary officers under training were billeted in houses, nearby, but today there are big dormitories, double-banked with beds, also in part of the same underground car park. It really makes one realize what an awful lot of room is wasted in the modern world providing standing space for idle cars! The dormitories are for the cadet-ratings as it is proposed to call the Lower Deck trainees. The men who are already probationary officers are still billeted.

Getting the establishment started, however, was only one of the problems that urgently confronted those responsible for H.M.S. King Alfred. The first batch of Supplementary R.N.V.R.s came along, some (the wise virgins) equipped with uniform, but the majority still waiting for the outfitters to cope with the rush of orders. And barely had the men been detailed off in classes before the Admiralty sent down urgently to ask if any of them were ready for service at sea? Now I am not going to guarantee the truth of what follows. It is one of the legends of the ship—and if it is not true, it ought to be.

The Captain dealt with the crisis pronto.

A small batch fell in.

A still smaller batch obeyed.

"You being in all respects fitted and equipped for sea", he said to them, "will proceed in accordance with instruction herewith from the Admiralty."

He turned to the one-pair remainder.

"You will take in extra trousers as requisite within twenty-four hours and you, too, will proceed in accordance with previous orders."

TAKE 2 H.M.S. King Alfred.

And that is how it came about that H.M.S. King Alfred "crammed" its first batch of young officers for service for hostilities only. Actually, of course, all of them were seafarers. All of them were navigators with their yacht masters' certificates, and if they did not know much about naval gunnery they could keep a watch on the bridge and pick up the gunnery practically on board in their watch below.

I MENTIONED earlier that the pre-war scheme provided for a possible output of 500 officers a year from each establishment. It was a slight underestimate. In the first eight months of the war this one establishment passed through three times that number of probationary officers from the Supplementary Reserve and had only found it necessary to reject one man out of all of them for the Service. On the day I visited the establishment by the kindness of Captain J. N. Pelly, R. N., the commanding officer, there were more than 400 probationary officers and 100 cadet-ratings under training, the highest number the King Alfred had touched in its brief but hectic career.

It must be made clear, by the way, that all these promotions are confined to "hostilities only" men. Those who are making the Navy their career, who have entered either for long service or the special twelve years' short service and who are recommended for commissions go through an entirely different course of training since their commissions will not be "temporary", but permanent, and some of them may ultimately rise to flag rank, a thing that is beyond the wildest dreams of those who are passing through the King Alfred.

The training at the establishment is intensive and the work is hard, but it is tacked with a will, for every man there knows that his only chance of getting a commission is to get a "pass". To help the work along the staff give extra voluntary instruction in the dog-watches; duty-instructors in seamanship, gunnery and torpedo and signals are available every day except Saturday and Sunday, while an officer-instructor in also on duty after tea each afternoon to give help in navigation work.

The work done by the trainees is mainly general, the syllabus covering the broad range of an officer's duties from anti-gas work to field training and physical jerks and, of course, including gunnery, signals, torpedo and navigation together with "service customs", though the teaching in this last is more by daily practice and familiarity than by actual classroom work.

The only "specialized" instruction is for a small class of advanced navigators, men already well grounded in the subject who can be trained on to serve as "Pilot" in small craft where no regular navigating officer is carried.

His Excellency and Princess Alice Are Proper Titles

Throughout the Dominion there is considerable uncertainty regarding correct titular designations for the new Governor General and his consort. This is understandable because the position is unusual in Canada.

The Earl of Athlone is correctly referred to as "the Governor General", and at second reference may be styled "His Excellency". The form "His Excellency the Governor General" is rarely used, the term "Governor General" being considered more dignified.

Princess Alice, as daughter of Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany, and fourth son of Queen Victoria, retains her Royal title. She should never be referred to as "Her Excellency", but invariably as "Her Royal Highness". Shortest and most usual form of address and reference is simply "Princess Alice."

The expression, "Their Excellencies" is incorrect and never used in this regime. The Governor General and Princess Alice, when mentioned together, should be referred to as "His Excellency and Her Royal Highness".

Princess Alice should never be referred to as the "Countess of Athlone", but the title "Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone", is correct, and this may be shortened to "Princess Alice". The designation "Her Royal Highness, Princess Alice", is rarely used.

When the Governor General is referred to by name he should be designated the Earl of Athlone, and it may be made slightly more formal by adding K. G. Other letters need only be added when the most formal designation is required. In this case the Governor General's full titles are: Major-General, the Right Honorable the Earl of Athlone, K.G., P.C., G.C.B., G.M.M.G., G.C.V.O., D.S.O., F.R.S., A.D.C.—Ottawa Journal.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The Royal Air Force appears to be more than holding its own in the intensifying air war over the British Isles, the continent of Europe, northern Africa and the islands of the Mediterranean.

This state of affairs makes the enemy invasion of the British Isles at once more urgent and more difficult. If the German and Italian air forces cannot achieve mastery of the air — and they appear far from doing so — the only way to protect their own territories from British air raids is an attempt to land armies on British soil.

That, however, is made more difficult by R.A.F. activity. The constant patrols now maintained by British planes make it difficult for the Germans to mass men, ships and material at a jumping off point without being observed.

Once preparations for such a move are observed British bombers will harass it in force. The effect of heavy air bombardment on an embarking army was well demonstrated at Dunkerque. There the British and French troops were able to get away with only the clothes on their backs, despite the fact the Allied fleets controlled the sea.

The German air force was largely responsible for the fact that they had to leave all their equipment behind. It does not follow that German forces could not be got aboard ships at scattered ports without the same sort of disaster but the Dunkerque evacuation taught certain lessons about the possible use of the air arm in stifling an invasion of the British Isles at its source.

FARM, FOREST WORKERS MOBILIZE

King Carol Strives to Prevent Government Falling Into Pro-German Hands

Bucharest, July 9—(AP)— The Rumanian cabinet has mobilized farm and forest workers to strengthen the nation for defence while King Carol labored to prevent the government from falling into the hands of the pro-German, anti-semitic Iron Guard.

Several million women, as well as boys and men too old for active military service, were affected by a cabinet decree conscripting all available labor to harvest the nation's crops and safeguard vital food supplies.

The cabinet also was reported to have discussed means of "solving the Jewish problem," but details were not immediately made public.

Carol Prevents Break

It appeared that King Carol had succeeded, for the time being at least, in halting a movement to break up the present government and force the resignation of a cabinet composed entirely of Iron Guardists—the Rumanian Nazi party.

Diplomats, however, looked for repercussions in a series of political manoeuvres which had the net result of removing from the cabinet Horia Sima, head of the Iron Guard, who was Minister of Culture.

The big question in diplomatic circles centred about Sima's next step.

Sima and three other Iron Guard members of Premier Ion Gigurtu's five-day-old cabinet submitted their resignations last night in an effort to force creation of a 100-percent Nazi government. They hoped to force the resignation of the Gigurtu government and to be given full powers in its successor.

Accepts One Registration

Carol accepted Sima's resignation, but refused to accept the others.

The cabinet is divided between Iron Guardists and followers of Octavian Goga, who himself once headed a pro-Nazi anti-semitic government. Sima seeks a cabinet composed entirely of Extremists like himself.

Carol sought to strengthen the hand of his own totalitarian party —the party of the nation—by a new law aimed at preventing creation of opposition groups. The law prohibits reviving any outlawed parties and forbids organization of secret societies aimed at overthrow of Carol's party.

Iron Guard Technically Outlawed

(Technically, the Iron Guard at present is outlawed along with all other political groups except Carol's party of the nation.)

Meanwhile, German circles predicted talks this week between Hitler and Foreign Minister Ciano of Italy might provide settlement not only of Hungary's claim on Transylvania but also of Bulgaria's claim on Southern Dobruja, both now part of Rumania.

Rumanian government quarters insisted that "Rumania does not recognize any justification for eventual Hungarian territoriay demands and is resolved not to accept them."

Exchange of Populations.

Official quarters here said Rumania would consdier only an exchange of populations as a means of settling Hungary's claim on Transylvania, which was a Magyar Province before the first great war.

"Such an exchange, to the exclusion of territorial cession, might have a satisfactory result for the two nations, with good economic consequences and the establishment of good neighbor relations," these quarters said.

"These would give excellent results to the two countries and to all of the countries in this part of Europe."

BRITAIN SPENDING $42,275,000 A DAY

House Votes Credit and Goes Into Secret Session for Debate on Economic Warfare

London, July 9—(CP)—Britain now is spending 9,500,000 pounds, ($42,275,000) a day of which 6,500,000 pounds is going to the army, navy and air force, Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today.

Sir Kingsley made this announcement in asking a vote of credit for 1,000,000,000 pounds. The House voted this credit and went into a secret session for debate on economic warfare.

The government has been given a blank cheque as far as appropriations go and parliament votes it money from time to time to pay the bills. The last vote of credit was 700,000,000 pounds in March.

The chancellor said 575,000,000 pounds of this already had been spent. He warned that the gap between revenue and expenditure was widening and that additional taxes must be imposed.

Italian Navy Desires to Achieve 'Glory' Comparable to That of Italian Armies in Ethiopia

London, July 9—(CP)—Informed sources asserted today that a desire of the Italian navy to achieve "glory" comparable to that gained by Italy's army and air force in Ethiopia and Spain was a factor in Italian entrance into the war.

They said the navy had shown a definitely "pro-war" attitude for some time.

These sources said they believed Italy would be unable "at present" to replace submarines at the rate British forces are sinking them, which is estimated generally to exceed the rate of destruction of German submarines.

They estimated 60 per cent of all Italian naval personnel had been conscripted.

These sources said the new 35,000-ton battleships Vittorio Veneta and Littorio "probably" had completed their trials, but suggested that Italy might "prefer" to keep them out of action in the immediate future.

The same sources estimated Italy's battleship strength at five ships, including the Vittorio Veneto, the Littorio and three 27,000-ton vessels, which have been reconstructed.

Construction Delayed

They recalled that the Italian naval under-secretary, in a statement a month ago, had said that construction of two new cruisers was being delayed "in favor" of new destroyers and submarines. This action was interpreted here as due to a shortage of material.

Italian ships are equipped with modern gunnery control and "there is no reason to suppose their firing would not be effective," it was stated.

Italian naval morale was described as "undoubtedly higher" now than a few years ago.

"Fascism," these sources said, "probably improves the discipline of the fighting service in a country like that."

While the Italian air force and army returned home from Ethiopia and Spain "covered with medals and glory," the navy has had no chance to show its worth, it was explained, and this, added to Italian dislike of British naval dominance in the Mediterranean, probably has fostered a more warlike feeling in the navy than in the other branches.

Gen. McNaughton Pays Tribute To Forces Outside Military Setup

By Constant Movement C.A.S.F. Are Trying to Leave Enemy in Doubt Says Commander

MANY MANOEUVRES

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, July 9 (C.P. Cable)—Watching men of the Canadian Active Service Force deploy rapidly over a section of the home [illegible], Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, general officer commanding the Canadian 1st. Division, told a party of Canadian newspapermen today "that by constant movement we are trying to leave the enemy in doubt that will be paid for in valuable lives."

The general told the newsmen grouped around him that he wished to pay tribute to forces outside the military set-up, declaring "they are a defensive force inside the citadel who are simplifying procedure and are facing up to facts."

The party watched the division go through various manoeuvres after which Gen. McNaughton stressed the important part to be played by the division in the new technique of warfare. He said the division was being given a particular assignment and every request for assistance was being met promptly as conditions permitted.

He said he was satisfied that the people at home were fully awake, adding that "one has a feeling that Canada is going on with a big job." Modern armies are not much good without the necessary instruments of war, he said, because "you can't put bare breasts against bayonet points."

Constantly on Alert

Tactics of improvement are going on day by day, and "we are constantly on the alert," he said, adding the warning that "there is no use basing our plans on wishful thinking."

He referred to the stepped-up mobility of a modern striking force compared with the slower moving armies of the past. He said the enemy probably could put thousands of men on a coast "quicker than we could meet them." But through superior mobility and speed better concentration "we have a better chance of repelling an invasion."

Once the democratic countries "get under way they will be much more formidable and effective in prosecuting the war than the autocracies," he said. "That is where our hope lies. We have resources far greater than the dictatorships. The only thing is that we have not reached the stage of applying them to the fullest."

POLISH FLIERS ACCEPTABLE

London, July 9—(CP)—The Air Ministry reported "very satisfactory progress" today in the training of thousands of Polish airmen as bombing crews in Britain. Some of the best trained pilots, many of whom fought in France, probably will fly fighter planes.

STORY BRANDED AS UNTRUE ONE

No Attempt Made to Scuttle French Ship in Canadian Port Say Authorities

Ottawa, July 9. — (CP) — Naval officials here today described as untrue a New York report that an attempt had been made by the crew of the 30,000-ton French liner Pasteur to scuttle the vessel at anchor in Bedford Basin at Halifax.

"The story is untrue," said a terse official navy statement.

The New York report said reliable sources stated the French crew sought to sink the vessel last Thursday night—the day following the naval engagement off Mers El—Kebur, Algeria in which British warships put out of action several units of the French fleet to prevent their surrender to the Germans.

Quick action, however, by the British authorities at Halifax thwarted the attempt to scuttle the Pasteur, the New York report said. An armed party of Britons was said to have forced their way aboard the liner just in time to close the sea cocks through which water already was pouring into the holds. There was scuffling, but no gunfire.

Eye-witnesses said that the following day the Pasteur was lying alongside a Halifax dock discharging the cargo of munitions with which she sailed from New York, June 17, the report added.

At the time she left New York the Pasteur was under orders of the British Admiralty and was flying the British flag. In her holds were a number of French .75 millimetre field guns and a quantity of crated ammunition.

The liner, third largest vessel in the French Merchant Marine was under command of Capt. Francois Marie Petiot. Carrying a normal complement of 272 men, she was painted a dull gray. There were two guns on her after deck.

WOMAN KILLED IN CAR COLLISION

Miss Mary Burns, Hamilton, Strikes Pole in Passing Another Car

Brantford, Ont., July 9—(CP)—Miss Mary Burns, 38, of Hamilton, was killed today in a sideswipe motoring collision 15 miles west of here. Her mother, Mrs. Jane Burns suffered painful injuries.

Police said the accident accurred when Miss Burns, driving west of Petrolia, was pasing a car driven by William John Dickie, 66, of Fairfield Plains bound in the same direction.

Both cars sped into the ditch, the Burns car ripping out a telephone pole and breaking it in half before turning over. Both cars were damaged badly.

Dickie and his son, William, escaped injury.

8 French Battleships Seized, Sunk, Damaged By British Navy

(By the Canadian Press)

Britain has now seized, sunk or heavily damaged eight French battleships in her efforts to keep the French navy from falling to Germany and Italy.

This action leaves only one French battleship which might be used by Germany or Italy in the near future, and even this one could not be used immediately. It is the 35,000-ton Jean Bart, which was launched only last March 6 and is said to be far from completion.

In addition there are two 35,000-ton battleships, the Clemenceau and the Gastogne, on the ways at French channel ports, now occupied by the Germans, but since these ships originally were not scheduled for completion until 1942 and 1943 it is doubted whether even with the war-time speed-up they can be of early use. They were not laid down until last year.

Britain has taken France's active battleships out of the war this way:

Richelieu, 35,000 tons by "successful action."

Strasbourg, 26,500, torpedoed and hit by air bombs while fleeing to France from action off Oran, Algeria, out of war for months.

Dunkerque, 26,500 damaged, beached and then bombed from air at Oran.

Bretagne, 22,189 and Provence, 22,189, one sunk and the other heavily damaged off Oran.

Courbet, Paris and Lorraine, all 22,189, two seized in British ports and third confined by British to Alexandria harbor.

FRESH CHERRIES OFFERED ON MART

Quart Boxes Bring 10 Cents and Currants 2 Boxes for 25 Cents

Fresh cherries in limited quantities featured the mid-week market on Tuesday morning, with quart boxes bringing 10 cents the box for the first cherries offered on the market this season. Currants were also offered for sale at 2 boxes for 25c.

Strawberries maintained Saturday's level of 2 boxes for 25c for what is known as "Gardanville Berries," a product of Prince Edward County, near Consecon, which is considerably later than the local berries. What is practically the last of the local crop sold for 10c the box, while gooseberries sold for the same price.

New potatoes were very much in evidence bringing 60c the peck, or two berry boxes for 15c, while old stock "Spuds" were being offered at $1.50 the 75-lb. bag.

String beans were offered in limited quantities, selling for 35c the half-peck, while peas suffered a further decline with vendors asking a new low of 30c per quart with peas-in-the-pod selling for 25c the six-quart basket.

Travellers to U. S. Must Carry Forms To Identify Money

Ottawa, July 9.—(CP)—Travellers to the United States must hereafter carry with them forms certifying that the money they carry with them —of whatever amount and whether in Canadian currency or not—has been released by the foreign Exchange Control Board or its agents for the purposes of their journeys.

The Board today revised its previous regulation, which permitted travellers to cross the border with as much as $100, to provide that forms must be obtained covering any sum.

The Board also reduced from $100 to $25 the amount Canadians might export to the United States monthly without licence. Permits will be granted for export of larger sums for reason of health, emergency and certain business dealers. This applies to both United States and Canadian Exchange.

The new regulations follow on the heels of the announcement of Hon. J. L. Ralston, former Finance Minister, that no funds for purposes of pleasure travel in the United States would be issued.

Judgment Reserved By the Magistrate

Marmora, July 9—Magistrate E. J. Butler yesterday reserved judgment in the case of Bruce McInroy, Marmora, charged with violation of the Defense of Canada. The accused man is charged with making statements likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty's forces.

It was alleged that McInroy at various times expressed the hope of a German victory.

Jack Cronkwright of Madoc, now a soldier in the Kingston Battery, testified McInroy had given him a ride the day he was leaving to enlist. During the drive, McInroy stated he was foolish to join the army.

E. Wellman and J. Johnson, both of Marmora, fellow employees, testified McInroy made numerous statements as charged. The accused man was employed as a road maintainer for Highway No. 7 between Marmora and Madoc.

Magistrate Butler reserved judgment for one week.

British circles said the Shengking was carrying rifle ammunition from the French concession at Tientsin to the French concession at Shanghai. They said the Japanese at Tientsin had given the ship clearance papers and had approved the manifest.

List to Starboard In Fall Fashions

(By R. J. Anderson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, July 9.— (CP)— The girls will be listing slightly to starboard this fall.

They're worn mostly on afternoon creations, which the experts say will have an apron front with side saddle effect. A dog's head brooch at the neck goes with the saddle.

A look yesterday at the previews of winter's early fashions discloses also that the pencil silhouette is the thing this season. The war note predominates with the military effect carried through the trimming and beading to the epaulette shoulders. The dominant color is black.

But the catchy line is the sophisticated juniors—the 35-year-olds can wear them if they have the figure according to the house boosters. They feature the lowered waist line.

Particularly fetching in one penthouse offering was a stunner in Ramboula brown. A brunette showed to advantage how the skirts taped more this season getting away from the "climsy lines" of the full flare. She looked good in dogwood brown, too.

There's a certain fullness in front. A honey in a plum wine cocktail suit prompted this: "If you have a tummy you can cover it".

For evening, the new combination formal and dinner dress promises to go well. Slip off the Chinese Mandarin jacket and be ready for anything. A silvery blonde showed how it is done in sapphire blue. Perfectly.

The house man waxed enthusiastic: "Note those lines. It's smart. It's stunning. It's got everything". She had.

Of the war note, the designers this season lean to straight military effects. The backs are straighter. Epaulettes in novelty jewellery adorn the shoulders. The trimming and beading go up and down in serried rows.

Black is the color for 80 per cent of this season's styles, as the experts put it :"Whenever there's a war, the style is always black—black and glitter".

There's something new in materials. Wool will be used for evening gowns—"lots of wool", say those who know. They demonstrated with a blond a red jersey top and a wool plaid skirt. She was effective,

There was a noticeable lack of tight-fitting gowns. Perhaps apropos of nothing, the style interpreter remarked:

"The models spent the week-end at the beach and got sunburned. How they suffer!"

When a Youth Gets Reckless

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

A reader writes: "I have a grandson who is just sixteen years old. He is six feet tall and has a pleasing personality. His father, (my son) has a general store in a village. A daughter, 17 years old, graduated from high school in June and will enter college this fall.

"The boy, Charles, had to repeat a year in grammar school. He entered high school last September and just barely passed his examinations. He doesn't seem to take interest in anything but having a good time. His father had been paying him $10 per week to help him in the store, but now Charles has informed his father he will not work any more. He has been going out until late at night, but refuses to tell where or with whom he goes. Parents have lost all influence over him. He is my only grandson and I love him.

"If you could help me in any way I would be very grateful."

Curtail Spending

I answered this grandmother:

"Immediately, the father should greatly limit the spending money of this boy. He might, however, win this lad by making him a partner in the firm, or putting him on a commission which would increase in proportion to the lad's personal economy of time and money. They cannot get anywhere by prying into his experiences and friendships away from home. When they have re-established more wholesome relationships with him he will volunteer considerable of such information.

"Since the sister of Charles has won glory in the field in which he has failed, he most easily gains satisfaction in his secret social pleasures and defiance of his parents.

"With the daughter in college, however, Charles may do better in high school, if his teachers will avoid reminding him of his brilliant sister every time he makes a bad response in class. No doubt he is poor in reading—nearly all students who lag or fail in high school are—and might be helped with the aid of an expert.

Don't Harp on Sister

"If his parents can win his cooperation and companionship he might take heart and work hard at school. In order to help him they will make him feel worthy and will not hold his sister up before him as a model. Instead they will play up his best in him, help him celebrate his own successes, however small, and cause him to feel he is loved and admired as much as sister."

She watches the feminine merry-go-round, regards this and that which have to do with dress, make-up, manners and carriage, makes notes on her mental cuffs and profits thereby. She is a true goddess of the beauty hunt; knows what she is about.

Bad examples teach as well as good ones. She asks herself "do I look like that?" Awkward women appear so terrible that she yanks up her own spinal column and walks with spirit. Shrieking women give her food for thought; what about her own voice and the way she uses it? Untidy women lead her to cultivate neatness.

Take a Lesson

This girl about whom we are preaching this day spots a young lady in the restaurant who has her legs twined around the chair legs, which picture promptly inspires our observer to place her own cute little tootsies on the floor. There is also present, perhaps, the cute dolly who is making herself a new complexion at the table, making also during the process some grotesque and unsightly mugs. Our heroine won't do that any more.

Hair! That's another subject for thought. The frowslies and scrambled locks are still with us, messy looking. The observing girl gets herself a new arrangement which is sleek and neat.

Shrieking Women are Out!

The time for the cold shower is in the morning. Freshens the complexion, reddens the lips, makes the eyes look dewy. There should be a quick reaction so the cold shower must be of short duration. Have a brisk friction with a towel that takes hold like a grater, finish with a talcum rub.

FASHION FLASHES

FORTUNE SMILES upon the designer who turns out frocks that look nice in town whether for lunching or for roof dining. Such a model is in black silk chiffon, the square neck of lace edged with chiffon ruchings. At the hem is a wide chiffon ruching.

LOOKING AHEAD we see silky black caracul as a major fur fashion. A beautiful advance model is of finely marked caracul, with molded waistline and side closing with a flare. Silver clasp at the low waistline.

READY TO STEP into Autumn are handsome suede step-in pumps with smart touches. An attractive black model has a panel of ring lizard up the back of the heel and the folded tongue is of the reptile. Elastic U-shaped side sections for snug fit.

TOP OFF A handsome dinner ensemble with a neat evening hat. A charming model is of black crim, the toque worn far back on the head, with a cluster of white camelias falling across the hair-line onto the forehead.

PLAY AWAY the hours on the beach and when it gets chilly, wear a comfy coat. A good number is a candlewick-chenille coat in white trimmed with red rope braid to match the red lining of the hood.

How To Be Happy Though Married For Fifty Years

One couple's recipe for how to be happy though married — even for fifty years—seems to have worked, as far as appearances go. She has a sweet, unruffled brow, and her smile is not forced. He has a merry twinkle in his eye, is not bald, and has kept his figure.

We're talking about Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Waters, who observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary a week or so ago, and were pictured as they prepared to slice their anniversary cake in the presence of children and grandchildren. Their home is in old Georgetown, not far from Washington, D.C.

If the beauty parlors could only set up a course opposed to domestic arguments, it looks as if it would work as well by following Mr. and Mrs. Waters' non-argument recipe quite as well as those creams and astringents which sell for $2, $3 and $5 a bottle or jar.

The 70-year-old celebrant of fifty years of connubial bliss might easily pass for 50, and the answer is, according to him, "We have never argued. If the wife wants to do a thing, I let her do it; if I want to do something, she never stops me."

The recipe was so simple that everyone present waited for a catch. But there wasn't any, and Mr. Waters continued, "We haven't had an argument since our marriage."

They were childhood sweethearts and fell in love soon after Mr. Waters was promoted to long pants and Mrs. Waters had put up her pigtails. Today they have three children, four grandchildren, and many joyous memories of their fifty years of companionship. After the cake had been cut, Mr. Waters expanded a little and said, "All married couples should go fifty-fifty with each other, if they want fifty years of married bliss. They should live not only with each other but for each other."

After considering the ideal home life and the youthful good looks of this couple, one ponders some of the absurd charges on which couples have sued for divorce. Of different nationalities, Mr. X. sued his wife for a divorce because her cooking never varied from the dishes of her own home land. His particular antipathy was boiled dumplings. He argued, pleaded, stormed against dumplings, but there they were on the dinner table night after night.

He explained that his country had produced some of the greatest chefs in the world and they did not favor dumplings. But it made no difference. Dumplings it was. He sued for divorce.

Mrs. Y., taking her troubles to Reno on the grounds of incompatability, defined her charges not against blonde or brunette but against Mr. Y's love of reading. He seemed to prefer the classics to her conversation, which he said was "gossipy".

Often one sees pictures of old warriors of life, like the one of Mr. and Mrs. Waters, who have been happy for fifty years. Why doesn't someone collect enough of this evidence to write a recipe book on "How To Be Happy Though Married Fifty Years."

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

NOT INCLINED TO INVITE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Eighteen months ago my husband and I moved to this city. We met some people at the house of a mutual friend, and while I invited them to call, they have not done so. Now, very recently, I have been invited to the home of this lady to an afternoon party. I declined, partly because I did not care to go to the party, and partly because a member of my family was ill in a hospital.

In view of these facts am I socially obligated to invite this couple, or even the lady, to my house for a party, even though I do not feel so inclined?

Kay.

It seems to me that this woman tried to make a gesture to you that carried with it her friendly desire to know you and to have her friends know you. I don't quite understand, from your question, why you changed your mind about wishing to know her. Was it because she and her husband did not first make a welcoming call? Strictly speaking, they should perhaps have done this, but social life is so casual and informal nowadays that they probably did not think this necesasry.

Since you seemed to have enjoyed this woman when you met her at the home of a mutual friend, this would seem to me to have been a fine opportunity for you to have established yourself in this particular circle.

However, since now you do not "feel inclined" to invite this woman to your house, you have no social obligation to do so. I am sure that she would not wish to be invited if you feel no enthusiasm about inviting either her or her and her husband. In other words, you simply create a social situation that need not be created and that had better be dropped for lack of interest.

SHOWER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for a sister of the bride-to-be to give a bridal shower?

2. Is it proper for a bride to wear street clothes at the church ceremony, when her home is too small to accommodate the guests?

3. If there are any attendants at the church, how should they be dressed?

C. D.

1. It is not considered good taste for a close relative of either the bride-elect or of the groom-elect to give a bridal shower. The reason is, of course, that a shower given under these circumstances gives the definite impression of being too obviously planned. Bridal showers are usually, and best, given by a group of the bride's closest friends.

2. Yes, at a small informal church wedding the bride may properly wear street clothes, probably her going-away costume.

3. The bride at this kind of wedding usually has only one attendant, and this attendant wears clothes of the same type worn by the bride.

A NICE SHOW of advance fashions was arranged recently. The bloused back continues for late Autumn coats. A typical model was of black dull woolen, the bloused back marked by tucks that continue to below the waist. A triple border of silver fox in back balances the triple silver fox cuffs.

Here's What the Champions say:
"Make Jams and Jellies with CERTO... it's quicker... it's easier and it's SURE!"
3 out of 4 Prizewinners in Jam and Jelly making contests USE CERTO
Mrs. J. S. Wardner of Belleville, Ont.—Prizewinner at both the Shannonville and Tweed Fairs, says: "I always keep a bottle of Certo on my pantry shelf. I can make perfect jams and jellies with so little trouble and effort. I appreciate the confidence Certo gives me in making prize-winning jams and jellies."
Why Certo Saves You Time, Work, Money—Yet Gives You BETTER Jams and Jellies.
So quick—so much less work
It's so quick and easy to make jams and jellies with Certo. For jam you need give only a one-minute to two-minute full rolling boil . . . for jellies only a half-minute to a minute. As Miss L. Miller, Prizewinner at Vermilion Fair (Alta.) says: "The Certo method is ever so much faster."
More Jam or Jelly
In this extremely short boil very little juice can boil away. So you get up to half again more jam or jelly. "You make more from the same amount of juice, as you do not need to boil it down," writes Mrs. T. O. Farnsworth, Prizewinner at Compton County Fair (Que.).
CERTO is concentrated FRUIT PECTIN . . . the natural jellifying substance extracted from fruit in which it is most abundant.
Fresher Taste and Colour
Owing to the short boil there is no loss of fresh taste or natural colour such as happens in the old-fashioned long boil. Mrs. Mabel Colwell, Prizewinner at Saskatoon Exhibition agrees: "The colour and flavour are much superior," she writes.
Results assured
With Certo you get a free book of tested Certo recipes. Only follow them exactly and you will have success. "I have never had a failure with Certo," writes Mrs. R. Clubb, Prizewinner of the Morris Fair (Man.).
FREE BOOK OF 72 RECIPES
Under the label of every bottle of Certo there is a book of 72 tested recipes for jams and jellies. Different fruits need different handling, so Certo gives you a separate recipe for each fruit. . . . Be sure to follow each recipe exactly.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

BURNS

This is the time of the year when doctors are likely to have to attend an unusually large number of cases of burns among children. In many localities, despite all efforts, fireworks are still sold indiscriminately around Independence Day, with resultant painful injury to youngsters. And it's the camping season, when many boys and girls are having their first experience with open wood fires or camp stoves and in their excitement or ignorance they're throwing caution to the winds. Also, there are cases of bad sunburn to deal with. A surprising number of parents forget how tender a child's skin is, with the result that severe burns follow a visit to the beach or country.

Nothing can be more painful than a burn, and nothing moves me to more pity and anger than a bad case of burn on a child. For burns are due nearly always to sheer carelessness, and usually the blame lies with a parent or adult rather than with the child victim.

Medical men classify burns as first, second, third or fourth degree burns. For example, we consider a first degree burn as one in which the skin is reddened but not blistered. It is much the same sort of burn as a mild case of sunburn. A second degree burn is one in which there is definite blistering. The outer layers of the skin are affected, but the inner layer is undamaged. A third degree burn is very serious. In this the skin is seared and there is some damage to the underlying tissues and muscles. The worst of all is a fourth degree burn, in which the whole part is charred to the bone.

Even a small child can stand a first degree burn covering a large area, for often it is a mere reddening of the skin. But if the burn is second degree, it is apt to be serious. In fact, if a large area is affected, death may result. Always if the burn is third or fourth degree, you have a very sick child, even if the area burned is quite small.

Unless the burn is slight, a doctor should be called. Even then it's a good precaution, for he probably can prevent a bad scar that would be left by improvised home medication. In the meantime, these first aid measures are advised:

If slight, cover with cloths wet in strong solution of baking soda in cold water or strong tea. Dry gently and spread with white of egg, thick.

If deeper, with blisters, skin broken and swelling, cut away clothing, if any, gently. Break no blisters. Cover with mixture of equal parts of limewater and linseed oil or olive oil, or simply the oil, and light bandage. If patient is suffering from shock, with pulse weak and head confused, give mild stimulant in hot water, and place hot water bottles at feet. Quench thirst with pieces of ice held in mouth or swallow of cold milk. With such cases by all means get a doctor as quickly as possible.

Nowadays there are many good prepared remedies for burns. Such as the salves with tannic acid as a base. It's a good idea to have these in your home medical chest or to take them along on your camping trips.

Five Yankees on Firing Line As American Loop Opposes Nationals in All-Star Game

Red Ruffing Will Start on Mound With Bill Dickey as His Receiver

DERRINGER FOR NATS.

All-Star Game Will be Played in Detroit in 1941 With Fans Picking Team

St. Louis, July 9—(AP)—On the theory that what was good enough five times out of seven was good enough again, Manager Joe Cronin of the American League All-Stars sent five New York Yankees to the firing line today against the National loop's best in the eighth midsummer baseball show.

Cronin's choice of Yankee pitcher Red Ruffing victor in only seven of 13 starts, and four of his everyday fourth-place playmates immediately solidified the opposition and turned his own forces into such chaos that last-minute revision of his lineup is not unlikely.

Louis (Buck) Newsom, vocal pitcher for the Detroit Tigers who has won 12 game in a row, threatened to deny the 33,000 spectators a chance to watch him if Cronin stuck to his decision of five Yanks, two Boston reliables and one each from Washington and Chicago as the starting nine.

Meanwhile silent Bill McKechnie of the Nationals nominated players from six different clubs for his starters and said he hoped to use all 25 players on his roster. He couldn't make up his mind whether to start Paul Derringer or Bucky Walters, both of his league leading Reds as the starting hurler until a final peek at them in their warmups.

Failure to name Barney McCosky of Detroit, Rip Radcliff of the Hometown Browns, and Dixie Walker of the Brooklyn Dodgers—all leading candidates in their respective positions this season—drew special censure.

Major League magnates last night recommended some method be devised by which the fans may indicate whom they would like to see play in the annual dream game, returning to the 1933 system of all-star selections. Detroit was awarded the 1941 contest.

The National League fathers endorsed helmets for batters but did not make the innovation compulsory. Agitation for the protection was started by the recent beaning of Joe Medwick, Brooklyn, outfielder.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

New York, July 9. — (AP) — Scooparade: Postmaster-General Farley has been patrolling Wall Street for two weeks trying to raise enough millions to buy the Yanks. . . . also, the firm which does the Club's accounting has received a rush order for a complete financial statement on each of the farm clubs . . . . So there is something in the air besides the gentle zephyrs . . . The 300 shares of stock owned by President Ed Barrow are currently valued at around $400,000 . . . If Farley does take over, it is pretty certain he'll ask Barrow to remain as General Manager and Joe McCarthy as manager.

CONNIE HARRIS DOES FINE JOB OF RELIEF HURLING

Corby's Defeat Uptown Juniors 10-6 With Harris Taking Over in Fifth From Carson

CARSON REMOVED

Spice Added to Contest When Carson and Hook Tangle Over an Argument

With Con Harris stepping in to do a perfect piece of relief hurling, the Corby's A.C. downed the Uptown Juniors 10 to 6 at Coleman Flats last evening, thus taking another step forward in the league standing.

'Lum' Carson started for the Corby nine and although credited with the night's win, was replaced by Harris in the fifth after Red Townsend's kids scored four in the third and two in the fourth. The junior Uptowns collected but two safeties and were blanked by Harris, who relieved Carson in the fifth. Youthful Mike Powers hurled the entire game for the juniors and yielded up an even dozen hits, including homers by Moon and Reid. Some spice was added to the pastime when Steve Hook and Carson engaged in fisticuffs in the third base coaching box in the eighth, the latter being ejected from the game by Umpire Harold Bawden.

Corbys scored six runs in the first three frames only to have the junior nine knot the count with third and fourth inning rallies. Corbys continued to score and win, however, as Harris stopped the Uptowns in the fifth. Jim Barriage with three singles, Cy Barriage with a brace of safeties, Harris and Simpson all hit consistently for Corbys, as Moon and Reid hit for the circuit. Goyer and Cooke hit home runs for the Uptowns, as Sword, Powers and Whiting came through with timely blows. On Wednesday Shell meets Uptowns while Corbys journey to Point Anne.

The line-ups:

Junior Uptowns—Ethier 3b, Goyer cf, Sword ss, Cooke, Donovan and Hook rf, Mansfield 2b. Callaghan 1b, Whiting lf, Bradden and Townsend c and Powers p.

Corby's A.C.—J. Barriage lf, Cy Barriage 2b, Kiser rf, Reid 3b, Moon 1b, St. Louis and Philp cf, C. Barriage ss, Simpson c, Carson and Harris, p.

Uptowns ..	004 200 000—	6	10	3
Corbys	231 010 12x—	10	12	1

Umpires—Bawden, plate, Young bases.

Ball players are a superstitious gentry, but no more so than the golf pros . . . . For years Bobby Jones would play only with balls stamped in black. . . Tommy Armour held out for green markings while Dick Metz uses only red tees . . . Billy Burke always smokes the same number of cigars to a round.

Somebody asked Bob Feller to name the five most dangerous hitters in the American League . . .He listed Charlie Gehringer, Taft Wright, Rip Radcliff, Joe Dimaggio and Ted Williams . . . honorable mention: Jimmy Foxx, Bobby Doerr and Joe Gordon.

Hannibal, Missouri, which has been a bit shy of champs since it turned out Mark Twain, thinks it has another in Robert (Butch) Howell who recently played 270 holes of golf in one day. . . . He averaged 35 strokes a round, two over par, and wore out six caddies along the way.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

All is in readiness. Tonight along about 9.00 p.m. some proud boy will be shouldered and he will finally realize he has won the fifth annual Kinsmen Club-Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby, the Coyle trophy, a gold medal and other accessories, but will all this excite him? We hardly believe so, but the moment the winner senses the fact he has realized his youthful aspirations and will represent Canada at the International Soap Box Derby, then is when the winner of tonight's Soap Box Derby will receive the greatest thrill of his youthful career. Yes, all decks have been cleared and everything is in readiness for the 5th annual Belleville Soap Box Derby, from which emerges the Canadian Soap Box Derby champion and who will represent Canada at the big world derby at Akron, Ohio, next month. Although other "kid kar" races have been operated in Toronto and Montreal, these races were not sponsored by a newspaper nor recognized by the world Soap Box Derby officials and the Chevrolet people, but the Belleville race qualifies under all of these regulations and is the pioneer race of its kind in the Dominion.

The scene of the race is Derby Hill, (North Front St.) Belleville, first race at 6.30 p.m. There are 75 starting cars, with three cars to a heat, which means 25 initial races from which 25 winners will emerge. Then there will be nine elimination heats leaving nine winners to be followed by three semi-final heats and the winners of these three semi-final races will then line the starter's stand to speed down Derby Hill for the 1940 Kinsmen Soap Box Derby championship, which means exactly 38 different races. Incidentally General Chairman Jim Fraser tells us that each driver will be given a white monogrammed driver's sweater and a metal crash helmet as gifts of the Chevrolet Division of the General Motors. As there is only a limited amount of frontage space lining the Derby Hill race course, the patrons are advised to hasten to Derby Hill as early as possible tonight to avoid disappointment. The time is 6.30 until 9.00 p.m. and never a dull moment. Remember the time and the place.

Yesterday we stated that Belleville was one of the pioneer centres of lawn bowling. However, we had our dates mixed somewhat. It was in 1886 that a team of Belleville lawn bowlers journeyed to Niagara-on-the-Lake and on the picturesque old Queen's Royal grounds met in common competition lawn bowling teams from Toronto and what is now Hamilton. It was following this two-day tournament that the Ontario Lawn Bowling Association was born. In Belleville lawn bowling was enjoyed many years prior to that first meeting of a provincial group, this city being the pioneer and cradle of the pastime in Eastern Ontario. Tomorrow sees district men's doubles championship here in Belleville.

Do you remember when Howie Morenz, Stratford, Ont., who later became hockey's most colorful figure, turned professional with Montreal Canadiens 17 years ago today? He was sold to Chicago Black Hawks in 1934, going to the New York Rangers in 1935-36, and back to the Flying Frenchmen in 1936. He died March 8, 1937, from complications following a hockey injury.

Softball lovers, especially those who are desirous of seeing a good girls' team in action, will have an opportunity to see the Simpson girls' team of the Toronto Sunnyside League in action against the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" in Trenton on Thursday evening. The game is being played under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Air Force and all receipts are to go to war work. Tickets are on sale at Toots Holway's and the game will be played at Bayside Park in Trenton Thursday evening. Captain Moffatt and Cpl. Laurie Gibson, the Flyers' kicker-outer of pucks who has deserted the hot corner for catching at softball dropped in to say they hoped a goodly number of Belleville fans would take in the Simpson-Flyer game Thursday in Trenton. At that these senior girls in Toronto play a high class brand of softball and will doubtless give a good account of themselves. Incidentally this game will cancel the Flyers-Oilers match that was to have been played here in aid of the 34th Battery boys' sports equipment fund. However, Captain Moffatt assured us the Flyers would come to Belleville next Tuesday night for this game.

Red Townsend's juniors battled the Corbys A.C. rather closely in the early stages at the Flats last night, but when Skipper Gerald Barriage sent Connie Harris in to replace Lum Carson on the Corby mound, the youthful juniors could do very little with Harris' deliveries, getting exactly two hits in four innings, after pouncing on Carson for six runs in two frames. There was never much doubt as to the ultimate result after Harris ascended the hilltop and it took a fistic outbreak between Steve Hook and Carson to add a little ginger to the proceedings. Carson was legally out of the game, but went to third to coach Hook, who wasn't in the game at the time, walked out and took Carson to task for appearing on the coaching line. Words opened and punches followed, but cooler heads settled the matter without much physical damage resulting. Down at Picton the Point Anne "cementmen" hammered the ball hard and often to win 20 to 7 last night, every member of Bubby Gaulin's outfit collecting at least one good solid base blow. The win solidly fortifies the cementmen in the second slot. "Ding" Luffman did not exert himself too much to win.

The lawn bowlers enjoyed some keen bowling during their weekly Monday club troubles last night. These weekly tournaments are exceedingly popular, although Games Chairman Cliff Argue has to line the players up occasionally. Last night winners at three games high were Ernie Vanner, Fred (Consistent) Harper, Ossie Hales, R. Richards, Mrs. Stan Joss, while Cliff Argue was high with two wins and R. E. Casement with one win.

Joe Cronin named five members of the Yankees to start in today's "all-star" game at St. Louis, Red Ruffing, Bill Dickey, Joe Gordon, Charlie Kellar and Joe DiMaggio. Either Paul Derringer or Busky Walters will fling for the National League outfit. Incidentally the major league moguls are going to give the selection of the annual "all-star" team back to the fans in 1941, which is a move in the right direction and actually what the "all-star" game was first originated for, namely to get the patrons more interested in the individual players. To date the American League has won five to the National League's two in seven.

SPORT SPICE—See a new score board has been erected at Coleman Flats, which should come in handy during the play-offs, despite efforts to move the series to the Fair Grounds. . . . From London, Ont., comes news that the senior intercollegiate football series may be played after all. . . . Perhaps not on as big a scale as other seasons, but sufficient to give the patrons a little relaxation. . . . Because he wasn't named as the starting pitcher for today's major league "all-star" game, Detroit Tiger Buck Newsom says he won't even go to St. Louis. . . . Maybe that's as close as he'll get to seeing the national league players in action this year, so perhaps Buck'd better buckle in.

CHURCHILL AND HIS ENEMIES

The Nazi government, to show how it feels about the action taken by Britain to prevent the French fleet being used against it, describes Prime Minister Churchill as "the greatest scoundrel of all times"

It is the finest compliment Mr. Churchill has yet received.

The disappointment felt by the Nazi is but proof of the hope they had that they could use the French fleet in the attack on Britain, notwithstanding they had promised it would not be so used.

Mr. Churchill may be proud of his enemies. — Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

BISON ROOKIE WINS SEVENTH IN ROW FROM WINGS

ORIOLES FOURTH

Tied With Montreal Royals After Beating Bears by 15-14

(By The Associated Press)

Buffalo Bisons appear to be a permanent fixture in the Second Division of the International League this season, but once more they have come up with the circuit's Rookie sensation.

Last season they had Ray Mack and Lou Boudreau two of the principal reasons why Cleveland Indians now are in the thick of the American League pennant fight. And the recall of those two by the Indians was one good explanation of how the herd happened to finish third and get knocked out of the playoffs in the first round.

This year the Bisons hero is 21-year-old Hal White, a righthanded pitcher who wasn't even considered as a possible starter when the season began. He never was used for more than an inning or two in relief role until June 7. Then he relieved Lee in the second inning and pitched creditably to get a decision over Baltimore. That gave Manager Steve O'Neill the idea of letting the youngster start, and since then Hal hasn't been beaten or knocked out of the box in six games.

Beat Rochester on Five Hits

White's seventh straight victory was a five-hit 4-1 triumph over the League leading Rochester Red Wing" last night. It was his best performance yet with the exception of a two-hit shutout against Syracuse June 25. The youngster fanned seven and didn't issue a walk until the ninth. In addition he fielded brilliantly and helped his cause along with a double.

Another neat pitching performance, but on a slightly different order, helped Syracuse Chiefs to a 4-3 12-inning victory over Jersey City Giants, the fifth straight loss for the Jerseys. Art Jones, relieving Jack Tising in the eighth, blanked the Little Giants with three hits in the last five frames and won out when Johnny Juelich bounced a single off Bob Sturgeon's shins in the 12th to score Gene Hasson from second.

Baltimore and Newark went to the other extreme with the Orioles winning out in the ninth 15-14, to tie Montreal Royals for fourth place.

Montreal had no chance to defend fourth place but got some consolation by walloping its "parent" club, Brooklyn Dodgers, 12-8 in an exhibition game.

THE SIMPLER LIFE

The country today is more of a Main Street country than it was ten years ago, in the sense that the flow of population to the cities and towns, down to places of 25,000 inhabitants, has slackened. As we have seen in a preceding paragraph the increase in such places has been perhaps only half as fast as in the country as a whole.

This is obviously speaking in population arithmetic only. Psychological forces in the last decade may conceivably have been running counter to the population figures. People living in the small towns and on the farms may be more urban-minded than they were in 1930 under the influence of another decade of radio, realistic literature, the new frankness in newspapers and periodical press. Yet that is mere conjecture. It may well be that ten years of depression have educated many people away from the old megalopolitan ideals to the simpler wants and thoughts of small places.—New York Times.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

TRANSFER HOLDINGS TO MOSCOW

Bucharest, July 9—(AP)— The possibility that British companies might transfer their Rumanian oil interests to Soviet Russia was discussed in diplomatic quarters here today. It is estimated that approximately $100,000,000 of British capital is invested in this country's oil industry . Rather than let these holdings fall under German control through possible developments the British interests are believed to be willing to transfer them to Moscow.

INSTALMENT 2.

"I must get the girls to be a little more affectionate with dad," Mrs. Ballard's thoughts ran. "I'll ask them to make a little more fuss about him. Of course they're young and they don't think. You and I'll go to China," she said aloud, "when the girls are married."

"Here's the situation," he began presently: "The plant has been in the red for seven months; we can't go on that way for three more months. I scraped together what I could and put it into Yellowgold Olio Incorporated, and that went flat. Then I got all the plant would carry from Patterson to go on with, and plastered this house. Now he says he can't renew . . ."

"Will, do look at that cat!" Sally Ballard interrupted him in a low tone of intense enjoyment. "He's been looking right at the bird for ten minutes without moving a hair. Suddenly he saw me watching him and he began to roll about and lick his paws as much to say, 'I wouldn't eat your bird if you gave it to me!' Oh, Toodles, Toodles," she went on, dragging him toward her to scratch his head, "what an ole bluffer . . ."

"I believe I'll turn in," William Ballard said. His wife did not look up from the cat's magnificently frilled face as she said absently: "Good boy. I believe I'll wait for the girls."

The engagement of Felicity Fellows Ballard, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson Ballard, to Archer Joseph Ross was announced a few weeks later. Lissy seemed less thrilled about it than Joyce was; to Joyce it was a source of deepest satisfaction.

Not that Archie was particularly interesting. But it would mean a wedding and bridesmaid's dresses, and that Lissy lived somewhere else. And then it meant that one of the three Ballard girls was settled; that would be pleasant. "My sister, Mrs. Ross." Joyce liked the sound.

At nineteen, tall, with red lights in her brown hair and brown eyes, playing a little tennis, riding sometimes, talking a great deal and secretly determined to be a great actress, Joyce had found her chief emotion one of fear that life would somehow pass her by. Eighteen had flashed by and become nineteen; twenty was close ahead, and even now she had never had the feeling of really living, of really doing the dashing and self-expressing and free things of which her whole life had been one long dream.

So that Lissy's engagement had its cheering side; things would now happen. Archie might ask some stunning young New York attorney to come out and be his best man—a Yale man; no, a Princeton; no, a Yale—and he might see Joyce for the first time in apricot organdie ruffles with a frilled saucer hat and bangs!

The original plan was for a quiet wedding, with "just the members of the immediate families and a few old and intimate friends for guests" as the newspapers glibly put it. It was Lissy's mother who stood out for white.

"Just a plain white frock, darling, that you can wear afterward. I want my first bride to be a white bride!"

"Well, if it were June, mother, it could be sports. But in March you can't wear summer things!"

"No, dear, but the plainest little satin?"

The plain little satin soon had a train and a veil. And since the sisters were to be there, anyway, and would want new frocks for the great occasion anyway, why not have them alike, as attendants?

About four weeks before the wedding Joyce's father said to her one night:

"Funny thing happened today. I don't know whether to tell your mother or not."

Joyce looked up abstractedly. Paul von Schwerin had called on her this afternoon and she was almost out of her senses with excitement. It was the first time—there was no use fooling herself, no matter how she fooled Margaret and Eileen about her admirers!—it was the first time any man had called on her. She had met him at the house of Margaret's cousin Marie Louise Towners, at a casual tea. It had been a girls' tea, no men Margaret's set had not reached the age when men friends drop in for tea. But Paul had come in, and he and Joyce, just introduced, had fallen at once into a delightful, an absorbed conversation that seemed to her more completely unreal every time she thought of it and she had thought of it almost without interruption ever since.

That had been Sunday. This was Wednesday, and he had come to call this afternoon. Big and lean and brown and infinitely attractive, he had been here by the fire for an hour, not wanting any tea; no, nor anything else, just wanting to jabber in his delightful idiotic way, and ask her if her people came up to the lake in summer, and where she had been all his life, and things like that. Oh, it was too thrilling!

Joyce's breath was taken away. This was the way things happened, was it? You met a boy at a tea, a delightful rich boy just home from college—oh, this was better than all her wildest dreams, and Paul was simply adorable! Joyce could hardly wait for dinner to be over and the evening to get itself somehow spent, so that she could be alone in her room, to dawdle over her undressing, thinking about him, and finally to jump into bed and go on thinking about him in the dark.

Because of all this she could not pay much attention to what her father was saying. It was not important anyway. It was merely that Archie's father had come to see him in the office. Joyce was conscious that her father said something else, and was still, rustling the pages of his paper; she contentedly leaped back into her own thoughts.

Later when she was undressing her mother came into her room.

"Sit down, darling," Joyce said springing into bed, jerking the covers up, settling herself for a chat "Dad go out?"

"No, he's still reading the paper," Mrs. Ballard said. "He was telling me — I don't suppose it means a thing!"

"Mother, did you see Paul von Schwerin? Isn't he cute?"

"He seems a very nice boy."

"I met him at Margaret's cousin's. I had no idea he was coming up. Mother," Joyce said earnestly, "is there any chance of our going up to Tahoe this year "

"Oh, darling, I don't think so. Not with Lissy's wedding and all. Daddy says we'll have to economize dreadfully for months and months! Archie's father called on dad in the office today," she added.

"What about?" Joyce asked.

"I don't know that I ought to tell you this," her mother said hesitatingly. "It's just that it seems — so queer. Joyce, a man couldn't break his engagement at this point, could he? I mean a man like Archie?"

"Good heavens, no!"

"Well, of course he couldn't!" Mrs. Ballard said hastily.

"You don't mean he went in to break the engagement? Why, the invitations are going to be out next week!"

"No, no, it wasn't that. He didn't—well, it was funny," Mrs. Ballard said. "He wanted your father to put some money into his business. He suggested that dad invest about—I don't know how much, I think it was twenty-five thousand for Lissy.

"Ha!" Joyce ejaculated noncommittally, a little premonitory chill at her heart. "And is dad going to do it?"

"He says he can't."

"I think old Ross has a nerve!" Joyce said, after thought.

"It isn't that, exactly. It's the European idea. They're Scotch, you know."

"I never heard the Scotch did it! Wedding portion, hey?" Joyce mused. "Does Lissy know?"

"Oh goodness, no! And she must not, No-o-o," Mrs. Ballard said musingly. "It really doesn't mean a thing. But he suggested that dad invest this money for Lissy. He said that he had had no suspicion that his son was all ready to marry a rich American girl, that Archie had been expected to marry his brother's daughter in Edinburgh—something like that, Evidently there was some sort of family understanding or something. Dad said that Lissy wasn't rich—I don't know, I imagine it was all rather embarrassing and—and funny. At the end he said that he hoped there woudn't be any need for Archie to go to Scotland right away . . ."

"No, he meant before they're married."

It was out. Mother and daughter faced each other; Joyce's cheeks grew red.

"He couldnt!" she said with a glance in the direction of Lissy's room. "It's February now. They're going to be married in four weeks."

"I don't see how he could. But dad said he spoke as if some business arrangement had to be made with the family at home; he said his brother had money to invest—"

"It would seem to me—" Joyce said cautiously, although she knew that Lissy and Archie were at the Palmers' dinner, and could not possibly overhear her, "that the best thing for dad to do would be to get the money somewhere, and invest it for Lissy! I mean it's nervy of him to force us into it, and it would make Lissy boil—she'd break the engagement if she ever found out!"

"Well, don't you bother your precious head about it tonight," Mrs. Ballard exclaimed suddenly. "It'll all come out right, and Lissy'll be married next month. She stood up. "Devereaux Patterson's going around the world," she said..

It was another shock. Joyce looked at her mother with bright stricken eyes and said nothing.

"He told Dodo so today."

"Dodo feel badly?"

"I imagine she does. He's to be gone a year. His uncle is giving him the trip. It's too bad," Sarah Ballard said simply.

"Yes," Joyce agreed briefly. "It's too bad."

"Of course there never was anything serious between him and Dodo," Mrs. Ballard offered half-heartedly. Joyce did not speak. She repeated vaguely: "It's too bad." She gave Joyce a troubled kiss and went away. She had barely left the room before Joyce, with her heart bounding for joy, had snapped off the light, snuggled down in the soft covers, and returned to dreams of Paul.

But that was not the end of the Ross matter. A day or two later Joyce tore herself from her own happy musings to discuss Felicity's affair with her brother.

The one son of the family had to make eight o'clock lectures at college five days a week; he spent that time in the jumble and noise of fraternity house life. On Saturdays and Sundays he was therefore allowed to sleep as late as he liked in his own comfortable room at home. Joyce intercepted Edna in the upper hallway, took the tray from her, and entered Ben's room just as the clocks were striking eleven.

VACATION SCHOOL OPENS SESSIONS

Classes Being Held in Three United Churches of the City

Under the supervision of Miss McTannis Semmens, B.A., the Belleville Vacation School, began on Monday morning in the three local United Churches with a complete staff of leaders in each department. Enthusiastic children, five to twelve years of age, entered whole heartedly into the various activities provided for them, chose their favorite interest groups, selected projects to be completed in the handicraft periods, and sang the rounds, songs and hymns with zest.

Two primary departments were in full swing at Holloway and Tabernacle Churches where Mrs. Branscombe and Mrs. Youdale were in charge. Children in these departments ranged up to eight years of age. Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Heath, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Nyeswander, Mrs. Brown, Bernice Saunders and Jean Archibald were the assistants in these departments.

The children above eight years of age met at Bridge St. Church. Mrs. G. Ferguson is the principal and has a full staff assisting her there. Mr. Anglin, with Mrs. R. Gibson as pianist is the director of music. Mrs. Mars is in charge of girls' recreation and Mr. Bowerman is directing the boys' handicrafts and games. The girls' handicrafts are in charge of Mrs. Conder, Miss Anglin, Mrs. J. Buchanan and Margaret Leslie.

For the study period the children are divided into two groups according to age and the study is led by Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Bews. Three interest groups impress the study in various ways and are under the direction of Mrs. Campbell, Mr. Archibald and Helen May, assisted by Norman Reid and Jean Sprague.

The rooms are informally and attractively arranged for the children's work and play and quiet chapel is set aside for the group worship. A spirit of enthusiastic co-operation for a pleasant and profitable fortnight pervaded these busy centres and it is to be hoped that the children of the city, who are welcomed without regard to race, class, creed or church affiliation, may avail themselves of the opportunity of "a camp at home."

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Amazing weather facts! Do you know that the energy coming to the earth from the sun is equal to the burning of one hundred million tons of soft coal every minute? This enormous energy makes possible the evaporation of and the subsequent condensation and falling of nine hundred and sixty million tons of moisture every minute; the never-ending movement of over five million tons of atmosphere from equator to poles and back again in which there may be a speed of 500 miles per hour in local twisting tornadoes or a 231-mile speed in a storm; and a temperature of 134 degrees where the sunshine is most effective.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 9 (CP).—All groups but gold registered gains on Toronto Exchange today. Trading was slow at the start but picked up later bringing turnover up to 55,000 shares.

Nickel and Hudson Bay advanced fractions. Kerr Addison and Broulan were up and Hollinger, McIntyre, Chesterville and Preston lower.

Bell Telephone featured the industrials with an advance of 6½ to 136½. Utilities and senior oils were firmer and steels and foods unchanged.

WALL STREET

New York, July 9 (AP).—Recovery symptoms were observed in the stock market today although financial doctors failed to make any definite prognosis.

Steels, motors and other leaders pushed up fractions to a point or so at the start, with dealings a bit livelier.

While optimistic busines strends continued as a prop for sentiment, brokers said, speculative forces generally inclined to proceed carefully pending more light on tax problems, the war and domestic politics.

Bonds worked up selectively and commodities were mixed. "Free" Sterling steadied, but Canadian currency dipped in terms of the United States dollar.

Most Canadian issues were fractions higher. They included Canadian Pacific, Dome, Walkers and Distillers Seagram. In the bond market Canada 4s went up 1⅛ cents.

Produce Markets Continue Quiet

Toronto, July 9—Continued slow trading depressed butter prices fractionally on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Eggs registered gains in all sections of trading, while cheese remained quiet and unchanged.

Buying in butter was scarcely sufficient to establish quotations, and the market stayed unsettled in tone. First-grade Ontario creamery solids eased to a range of 21 1-4c to 21 1-2c. There was no real pressure on the part of holders to sell, however, as receipts were not unusually heavy.

Grade A large and Grade A medium gained 1 cent in the graded section of the egg market. Selling prices to retailers advanced 1 cent on all except Grade C eggs, which were unchanged. A premium of 1-2 cent was obtained on Government inspected eggs. Receipts were still on the light side, but dealers' requirements were fairly well covered.

3 NEW MEMBERS

Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia will head the navy department. The other new ministers Colin Gibson, (Hamilton West) and W. P. Mulock (York North) are appointed Revenue Minister and Postmaster General respectively.

Agriculture Minister J. G. Gardiner will be responsible for organizing national war services with someone yet unnamed taking over his agricultural portfolio.

Outside the House last night Mr. Gardiner said he hoped to complete the national registration of every able bodied person over the age of 16 by the end of August. Thus the government will be able to plan where they will best fit into the war effort under compulsory mobilization of manpower.

Takes Over Transport

In addition to his present department, Works Minister Cardin will take over most of the Transport Department. Hon. C. D. Howe, who has been acting both as Minister of Transport and of Munitions and Supply, will continue in the latter post but retaining radio and civil aviation from the Transport Department.

Last but not least, Hon. J. L. Ilsley moves up from the Revenue Department to the Finance Ministry, as generally expected.

These shifts and appointments were announced by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons yesterday as the climax to a heavily detailed review of the war organization of the government as a whole.

While recording the scores of outstanding citizens appointed to the public service on war duty solely on a basis of specialized capacity, Mr. King confessed his inability to draft into the cabinet business and industrial leaders inexperienced in public life.

It was an "open secret" that he had tried to bring into the cabinet such outstanding persons, he said.

Many People Consulted

"I have found that those I approached felt that such special services as they could render could be given more effectively, either in an administrative post or in an advisory capacity or by their continuing to occupy an eminent and independent position in the community," the Prime Minister said.

There was a reluctance to undertake elections involved in accepting a cabinet position. There were also serious objections to severing business ties, whereas a person could act in an advisory capacity and still give some attention to business.

Mr. King said the government had also considered establishing an advisory committee to the cabinet, composed of persons prominent in various fields, but gave up the idea because such persons would object to political implications and also feel their responsibility was greater than their power.

In any case, the government now was continually consulting such people whether they were part of the administration or not.

Weekly Parleys Suggested

To bring all points of view to the aid of the government, Mr. King finally invited Conservative leader Hanson and his desk-mate, Hon. Grote Stirling (Con. Yale), a former Defence Minister, to become associate member of the war committee. If they accepted he said he would also invite the leaders of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and the new democracy group.

As an alternative, he suggested weekly conferences between the war committee and the opposition when matters could be discussed confidentially.

Mr. Hanson, attacking the Prime Minister's statement as an attempt to bolster up "the shattered fortunes of his government", gave no immediate answer to the invitation. At such a time he could not lightly refuse it, nor was it one he could accept without grave reflection.

Accused of Partisanship

He blamed the Prime Minister's failure to enlist business leaders in his cabinet to an insistence on loyalty to the leader of the administration. He accused Mr. King of continuing a partisan government in the face of national crisis.

"Only a government representative of all the people should lead his nation in wartime", he contended.

Danger of industry controlling government and the war effort, instead of the government mobilizing industry, was seen by M. J. Coldwell, (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar). The consumer, working man and farmer should all have a voice on the numerous boards and committees if there was to be a truly combined war effort.

Gov't Owns Corporation

The House also heard the Prime Minister announce the setting up of a government-owned corporation, The Allied Supplies Limited, to manage British munitions and munition plants here and similar British-Canadian joint efforts. Hon. Charles Dunning, former Finance Minister, is chairman and Harold Crabtree of Montreal, president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, president, of the new company.

First reading was given the naval department bill and a measure providing the death penalty for treachery.

As debate on the budget resolutions proceeded in the evening Finance Minister Ilsley announced that the government would include refugee children as income tax exemptions on the same basis as other dependents. Consideration would also be given to provide some exemption from income tax and national defence tax for men in the forces.

The Prime Minister's lengthy statement was read in the Senate last night by Government Leader Dandurand, provoking the suggestion from Conservative Leader Meighen that Senator Dandurand must make digests of the "interminable communications" which came from the Commons.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, July 9 — (Special) — Darkness and rain finally called a halt to the softball game between the Miller Bros. and Wooler last night after the game had gone nine innings with the score tied 13-all. The two teams were fighting for second place in the Trenton and District Softball League but as the game ended in a tie, both fell into third place and the Doughnuts moved up with an edge of a half a game.

Seven homers featured the struggle that kept on practically even terms from the first inning. Both teams scored in the first frame but the Woolerites took the lead in the second with five runs. Millers evened it in the third with five runs and from then on both teams kept on even basis.

Stacey on the mound for the Woolers, held a very slight edge over his opponent. He struck out three, walked four and gave up 12 hits, three being homers. Coughlin, doing the hurling duties for the Millers struck out five, walked four and gave up 13 hits, four being homers.

Anderson, fast moving shortstop for the Miller Bros., wielded the most potential bat of both teams by clipping out three homers. Davis and Long with three hits each were also strong at bat for the Millers. Both Adams and Austin collected a homer and a single for the Woolerites.

SUCCESSFUL

A few minutes later aircraft of the fleet air arm flew lower over the harbor to drop torpedoes in the shiny new warship flying the French tricolor. Both attacks were successful and the big ship now lives with a heavy list to port and down by the stern, obviously in no condition to be used by Hitler and Mussolini.

Attempted to Cripple Craft

The British navy attempted to cripple the French craft only after the French Admiral refused the same terms offered earlier to the French Commander at Oran to permit Britain to take the ship for the duration of the war, to demilitarize her in the French West Indies or the United States, to demilitarize the ship in Dakar, or to fight it out.

The measures Britain has taken have removed a source of "grave anxiety", he said, thanking the naval staff which planned "these operations immediately following the completion of the evacuation (from France) in the face of the enemy troops and refugees totalling not less than 600,000."

Mr. Alexander disclosed that the Royal Navy had engaged in two further operations since its attack July 3 on French units at Oran to ensure that France's fleet be kept from German and Italian hands.

Seven French capital ships now have been accounted for, he declared.

Dropped From Motorboat.

The depth charges which crippled the Richelieu were dropped from a motorboat close under the stern to damage propellers and steering gear," Mr. Alexander said, while aircraft dropped torpedoes.

All the attackers escaped safely, he said.

The motorboat, the First Lord told the House, was a ship's boat under Lt.-Cmdr. R. H. Bristowe which was sent into the harbor and carried out its mission "with great daring".

These four alternatives were offered the French commander, Mr. Alexander said:

1. That the Richelieu sail with a reduced crew under escort to a British port;
2. That she sail with a reduced crew to a French port in the West Indies where she could be demilitarized;
3. That she be demilitarized in Dakar within twelve hours;
4. That she would be sunk within a time limit.

No satisfactory reply was received within the time limit, he declared.

The other naval action since the attack at Oran mentioned by Mr. Alexander was the raid by British aircraft July 6 on the battleship Dunkerque.

Fliers Score Six Hits.

It already had been disclosed that British fliers scored six hits on the damaged, grounded, 26,500-ton French capital ship July 6 and Mr. Alexander said the aerial attack would incapacitate her for a long time.

Telling of the raid on the Richelieu, the First Lord said:

"On July 7, the flag officer entrusted with these operations sent one of his captains ahead in a sloop in order to present the terms in person.

"On arrival, this ship was informed by French authorities that they would be fired on if she approached close to the port and it was only after an interval that the French consented to receive this communication by signal."

Aerial reconnaissance after the attack established that the Richelieu was listing to port, down by the stern and surrounded by a large quantity of oil, he said.

While the motorboat still was in the harbor, Mr. Alexander related, her engines broke down and she lay helpless for a time but the crew succeeded in getting one engine running just as they were discovered. The boat was pursued but managed to escape by crossing harbor defence nets which fouled the propeller of its pursuer, he said.

London, July 9—(CP)—The prized nearly-completed 35,000-ton French battleship Richelieu was presumed today to have been sunk, seized or damaged by the Royal Navy in its continuing worldwide drive to prevent French warships from falling into the hands of Germany or Italy.

A "successful" action against the Richelieu early yesterday was announced and further details awaited an official statement expected this afternoon.

The Richelieu was believed to be the most formidable vessel in the French fleet. Although she is but one of a class of four new heavily armored but fast ships under construction, the Richelieu was the only one almost ready for service.

The last word on the Richelieu was that she had put out from Brest into the Atlantic last week, possibly on a trial run. It was understood her armament had not been completed.

The Richelieu class ships have these imposing specifications: Speed, more than 30 knots; guns, four 15-inch, sixteen 6-inch quick-firing, 18 anti-aircraft guns; Armor, 16 inches at waterline, deck armor 8 inches; aircraft, four, with two catapults.

Part of Campaign

Action against the Richelieu was part of the navy's systematic campaign to prevent vessels of the French navy from being useful to the Germans and Italians. The British attack on the French fleet off Oran, Algeria, last Wednesday was described by First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander as only the "first steps" of this drive.

The Oran action, in which the Royal Navy sank one battleship, heavily damaged and beached another, heavily damaged a third, sank a seaplane carrier and burned two destroyers, was termed a "particularly cruel episode" by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the French National Committee in London, in a broadcast last night.

Gen. de Gaulle, whose followers are continuing fighting with Britain against Germany, nevertheless told the French "it is better" that the ships were destroyed.

"Our enemies" he said, "would have used our ships either against Britain or against the French Empire."

Britain's defence regulations net enmeshed Brian Bernard Carroll, 31, treasurer of the British Union of Fascists, and Admiral Sir Barry Domville, former director of British naval intelligence, and Lady Domville.

They were arrested last night and Admiral Domville, who retired in 1936, was taken to Brixton prison and his wife to Holloway prison.

Chairman of "Link"

Admiral Domville, 62, was chairman of the pro-German organization known as "The Link," dissolution of which was announced some time ago.

He was a frequent guest of German Nazi leaders—twice of Hitler himself. He was in Germany last year only a month before war broke out.

German air raids against Britain continued last night and this morning. Raiders cross the eastern and southern coasts of England and the northeast coast of Scotland, bombing and damaging buildings near the coasts. There were "very few" casualties, the government reported.

Earlier it was announced eight German planes and one British craft were shot down in furious air battles yesterday.

One person was killed in a southeast town where four high explosive bombs fell, and two persons were injured slightly in a Scottish town where incendiary bombs caused "little damage."

Two bombs were dropped in Wales "without effect," it was announced.

German Raids Continue

Miss E. Howland, 36, who worked in a house over which a German fighter plane was pursued by British Spitfires before they brought it down in flames, was found dead last night, apparently killed by a stray machine-gun bullet.

Planes were first sighted over northwest England and then bombs were dropped on a Welsh town where six persons suffered superficial injuries.

These raids followed announcement of widespread and heavy damage through German-held areas on the continent, including docking facilities and railway yards.

At home tea was placed on the ration list, cutting the supply per person to about enough for 25 cups a week, but leaving restaurants free to serve as much as they liked. Also placed on the ration list were margarine and cooking fats.

Had Row with Hoare

Admiral Sir Barry had a row last August with Sir Samuel Hoare over the activities of "The Link," which Sir Samuel said was being used as an "instrument of the German propaganda service." He also said it was receiving money from Germany.

At the time of Sir Samuel's statement—which Sir Barry subsequently called a "damned lie"—the admiral was in Salzberg seeking to form in Germany organizations similar to "The Link."

On his return to Britain he called Sir Samuel's statement a "most scandalous attack on our organization which is doing its utmost to promote good will between England and Germany."

AIRCRAFT CARRIER ILLUSTRIOUS SAFE

Amateur Photographer Takes Picture of Ship in a Bermuda Harbor

New York, July 9—(AP) — The New York Daily News today published a photograph of the British caption saying it has been taken by caption sayinf t had been taken by an amateur photographer on a United States liner in a Bermuda harbor a day after the Germans claimed it was struck in battle.

The Illustrious is one of the six new aircraft carriers that Britain laid down in recent years. She was launched in 1939 as were her sisterships Victorious, Formidable and Indomitable. The two others in the class are the Implacable and Indefatigable.

Except that these craft are of 23,000 tons and are 753 feet long, the public knows nothing of them. Jane's Fighting Ships publishes no data. It is not known how many of the six are actually in service.

The layman only has a pretty shrewd idea that these craft are the finest aircraft carriers ever built.

Committee Advocates American 'Trusteeship' Over Possessions

New York, July 9—(AP)—An American "trusteeship" over French and Dutch possessions in the western hemisphere "until full independence is restored to those countries," was advocated yesterday by the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies.

The committee, in three new basic objectives adopted in a move to make itself a permanent organization headed by William Allen White, Emporia, Kansas, editor, also advocated:

1. Unrestricted sale to Great Britain of surplus food supplies, planes, guns, ships and ammunition "not necessary to our national defence."

2. Evacuation "when necessary," of mothers, children and old people from the British Isles to the western hemisphere.

3. Removal of restrictions banning United States citizens from joining Allied forces.

4. Encouragement of congressional action to give the President authority to accomplish these objectives.

BRITAIN'S CHALLENGE

No Casualties Occur on British Warships in First Mediterranean Battle

By GUY RHOADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A considerable force of Italy's skittish fleet apparently was home in port today after suffering at least one heavy blow from a British battleship as the Italians fled behind a smoke screen after a brief engagement yesterday.

To counteract quickly any "mendacious reports" that might arise in enemy sources, the Admiralty in London announced this morning that the Royal Navy suffered no casualties in the encounter which took place roughly in the middle of the Mediterranean.

Italians Confess Losses.

As a matter of fact the Italians did confuse things by announcing loss of a destroyer and a submarine without saying how. They admitted casualties of 29 killed and 69 wounded — presumably resulting from a British hit on what the Admiralty

3 Women Evacuees From London Slain Near Lone Farmhouse

Tunbridge Wells, England, July 10—(CP Cable)—The bodies of three slain women were discovered today in the woods at nearby Crittenken, not far from the lonely farmhouse to which they recently were evacuated from London.

The trio were Mrs. Dorothy Fisher, 45, her daughter, Freda, 21, and their maid, Charlotte Saunders, 46. They apparently had been shot. Officers of Scotland Yard's flying squadron were called to the scene and began an immediate investigation.

King Carol Moves to Crush Effort Of Pro-Nazi Guardians to Seize Gov't

Tries to Win Support of All Factions for United Front Against External Danger

GUARD LEADER HELD

Bucharest, July 10 (AP) — The Ministry of Propaganda announced today the arrest of Gen. Ion Antonescu, leader of Rumania's Iron Guard, as King Carol moved to prevent the Nazi organization from wresting control of the government from him.

Antonescu, who had been trying to unite various Iron Guard groups, was seized yesterday at Predeal, in the Transylvania foothills, "because of an unfriendly attitude towards the present regime," the Ministry said.

The King strove to win the support of all factions and quell any internal threat to his totalitarian "party of the nation" to present a united front against outside danger to Rumania's existence.

King Carol has forbidden revival of any outlawed political parties. Informed quarters said this degree was aimed primarily at the Iron Guard.

There have been numerous indications all is not well between the ruler and the Guard although the new cabinet of Premier Ion Giurtu includes four members of the long-outlawed group and like the Guardists, has a pro-Nazi, anti-semitic program.

Declined to Allow Him to Serve

Gen. Antonescu, War Minister in the former pro-Nazi Goga cabinet, at first was slated to become Vice-Premier in the Giurtu government but the Iron Guard declined to let him serve.

Informed sources said the Guardists wanted to save him for the Premiership in case they succeeded in plans for a 100-per-cent Iron Guard government.

Some Extremists are known to desire Carol's abdication and formation of a new state on the rigid Nazi-Fascist pattern.

Despite a statement by Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu that Rumania's relations with other countries now are satisfactory, the army has brought mobilization to full strength and forces still are massed on three frontiers.

A government decree last night forbade the sale outside Rumania of stock in any foreign-owned Rumanian company. This action was taken after reports spread that the $100,000,000 British oil interests here might be transferred to Russia.

These reports arose simultaneously with disclosure that for weeks British-produced oil has been going to Germany, except for small quantities to Yugoslavia, Hungary and Bulgaria, because the war in the Mediterranean prevented British exportation and the companies were forced to continue royalties to the Rumanian government.

Former King of England Named As Governor of the Bahamas

London, July 10—(CP)—The British press and public exhibited satisfaction today at the appointment of the Duke of Windsor as Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Bahamas.

The news apparently appealed to the romantic side of most Britishers, who saw their former King in the roll of goodwill ambassador to the New World.

Newspapers published long descriptions, accompanied by maps, of the islands off the Florida coast where the Duke and his American-born Duchess, the former Mrs Wallis Warfield Simpson, will reside.

The Mail pictured the Bahamas as "Isles of Pirate Gold" and the playground of rich Americans. An Exchange Telegraph news agency dispatch from Nassau said the population of the islands welcomed the Duke's appointment with enthusiasm.

The only editorial comment appeared in The Times, which said:

"The West Indies as a whole may well receive the news as full of welcome significance at a time when events in Europe and the friendly interest of their great neighbor in the north have demonstrated their high importance in the international reckoning."

The Duke and Duchess are now in Lisbon, Portugal, to which they fled last month from their home in France ahead of the Nazi invasion. It was presumed they would go directly to the Bahamas, although the date of their departure was not disclosed.

The Duke will succeed Sir Charles Cecil Farquharson Dundas, who will become Governor of the Uganda protectorate in Africa.

The Bahamas, some 300 miles off the Florida coast, include 20 inhabited islands with a population of 67,720 and numerous small uninhabited islands and rocks.

NINE MILLIONS SAVED BY ACTION

Result of Ontario Government's Move to Force All Employable Persons Off Relief

Toronto, July 10—(CP)—A saving of $9,000,000 is seen in the Ontario government's move announced yesterday by Acting Premier Harry Nixon to force all employable persons off relief and into jobs. This saving would be shared the Federal and Provincial governments to the extent of 40 per cent and 20 per cent by the municipalities. Of 132,000 on relief in the Province, 100,000 are classed as employable.

Total relief bill this year for the Province is estimated at $12,000,000.

Mr. Nixon repeated his dictum of yesterday that jobs are available for many and must be taken. Six cases are now being considered of those who have refused to accept jobs.

Those who do take jobs and then quit them to go back on relief will also be subjected to investigation, Mr. Nixon explained.

In Toronto there were 50 requests for farm labor help in the immediate area. These were not filled. In the Belleville-Trenton area there were requests for 100 mechanics, sheet metal workers and fitters. None was immediately filled due to a lack of skilled workmen.

Hitler Urges Hungary Not At This Time to Try 'To Secure Her Rights'

Munich, July 10 (AP).—Hungary's leaders were told definitely by Hitler and the foreign ministers of Germany and Italy today that Hungary must not upset the Balkan applecart at this time by trying "to secure her rights" from Rumania, informed German sources said.

Premier Paul Teleki and Foreign Minister Stephen Csaky, who came to discuss Hungary's demands that Rumania restore at least part of war-lost Transylvania to her, conferred first with Foreign Ministers Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano and then were received by Hitler.

A brief communique issued by the German News Agency said the discussions "proceeded in the spirit of the traditional friendly relations among the three states."

ORIGINS, CONDUCT OF THE WAR TO BE PROBED BY GOV'T

Resolution Voted Before Senators and Deputies Met in Joint Session

TO GIVE WIDE POWERS

Vichy, France, July 10 (AP).—The French National Assembly decided at a secret session this morning that the nation's new constitution, when drafted, will be submitted to the people for their approval in a nationwide referendum.

The assembly met this afternoon to vote on a proposal to give Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, as chief of state, full power to promulgate a new constitution guaranteeing "the rights of work, the family and the fatherland".

The constitution "will be ratified by the nation and will be applied by the assemblies which it will create", according to the bill up for assembly passage.

(The assemblies referred to apparently are corporative bodies to be set up on the Italian Fascist model to advise the government and exercise some of the powers of a legislature.)

The precise manner of ratification for the new constitution is to be fixed by the constitution itself.

The national defence and foreign affairs committee of the senate voted unanimously to ask the government to investigate "the responsi-

WIFE IS PROUD OF HERO HUSBAND

Husband Who Put Out of Action Battleship Richelieu is 'Very Determined Man'

Somewhere in Britain, July 10—(CP Cable)—A smiling woman heard with pride today how handsome, husky Lt.-Cmdr. R. H. Bristowe put the French battleship Richelieu out of action and commented: "I just hope it gets Bobby some leave. I haven't seen him for six months."

Cmdr. Bristowe always has been popular in this town, where he brought his bride three years ago In a pub where many a foaming glass was drunk to his fe[illegible] everyone took his action as a [illegible]er of personal pride.

Cmdr. Bristowe, who had served in the navy since he was a boy, retired four years ago to become a broker but was recalled on the outbreak of war. He is six feet two, broad shouldered, and has brown wavy hair.

Mrs. Bristowe said she first heard the news from a friend who phoned after listening to the radio. She added: "Bobby's a very determined man and when he sets out to do a thing he does it."

Battle Creek, Mich., July 10—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario, who for the last two weeks has been convalescing at the Battle Creek Sanitarium from an attack of bronchial pneumonia and a kidney ailment left today.

It was not learned definitely where he had gone. His physician, Dr. M. A. Mortensen, confirmed that the Premier left the sanitarium by automobile this morning but declined to disclose his destination. He said the Premier appeared to be fully recovered.

MORE SHELTERS CUT OUT OF ROCK

Two Churches in Malta Struck by Italian Bombs—Mass is Said Underground

Valetta, Malta, July 10 —(CP—Reuters)— Entire streets of homes in some areas of this British Mediterranean island have been demolished by repeated Italian air raids and city dwellers have been removed to rural communities.

Some of these villages are growing into "towns" as business follows the population.

Authorities said thus far 82 civilians, including 20 children, have been killed in the air attacks which continue "regularly by day, intermittently by night."

Two churches have been struck by bombs and Mass is said underground as in catacomb days.

The number of shelters cut in the rock is increasing rapidly, but despite this and the efficiency of the siren warning system, officials say, there is a "great inclination" on the part of the populace to watch air battles from roof-tops.

Maltese Exhibit Great Coolness

The attacks are met by the Maltese with a mixture of piety and scorn and Maltese troops manning the island's defence alongside British soldiers are exhibiting great coolness and accuracy of fire.

Maltese anti-aircraft gunners put pictures of their Patron Saints on their guns and kiss their ammunition before they load, adding prayers to the Saints to "smite" the enemy before he can destroy their homes.

Air fights over the island always are viewed by big and enthusiastic galleries of Maltese and the repulse or destruction of invaders is greeted with storms of cheering.

Eyewitnesses say Maltese soldiers show "tremendous scorn" for Italian airmen who "fly high in order to escape, if possible, retaliatory action and whose bombing is most inaccurate."

Dockyard workers man their own defence batteries and farmers have formed sections of parashots.

FRENCH FISHING FLEET

The ships still fly the tricolor and the sailors enjoy shore leave, along with members of the crews of British and Canadian ships in port.

U. S. WON'T USE ARMS FOR WAR OF AGGRESSION

Pres. Roosevelt Asks Congress for Nearly 5 Billions of Dollars for Further Defence

LESSONS OF WAR

Message Says 'We Will Not Send Our Men to Take Part in European Wars'

Washington, July 10 —(AP)— President Roosevelt asked Congress to authorize an additional $4,848,171,957 for defence today in a special message asserting that "we will not use our arms in a war of aggression, we will not send our men to take part in European wars."

Mr. Roosevelt's request brought to approximately $10,000,000,000 the funds and contract authorizations asked this session for land, sea and air armaments. Previously the President had asked and the Congress voted about $5,000,000,000 in the two categories.

"The principal lesson of the war up to the present time is that partial defence is inadequate defence," Mr. Roosevelt declared.

Sum Means Sacrifice

"So great a sum means sacrifice. So large a program means hard work—the participation of the whole country in the total defence of the country. This nation through sacrifice and work and unity proposes to remain free."

"1. To carry forward the naval expansion program designed to build up the navy to meet any possible combination of hostile naval forces.

Land Force of 1,2000,000 Men

"2. To complete the total equipment for a land force of approximately 1,200,000 men, though of course this total of men would not be in the army in time of peace.

"3. To procure reserve stocks of tanks, guns, artillery, ammunition etc., for another 800,000 men or a total of 2,000,000 men if a mobilization of such a force should become necessary.

"4. To provide for manufacturing facilities, public and private, necessary to produce critical items of equipment required for a land force of 2,000,000 men, and to produce the ordnance items required for the aircraft program of the army and navy—guns, bombs, armor, bomb sights and ammunition.

19,000 More Planes

"5. Procurement of 15,000 additional planes for the army and 4,000 for the navy, complete with necessary spare engines, armaments, and the most modern equipment."

Selective Training.

Mentioning that Congress was considering enactment of a system of "selective training" to develop "the necessary man power to operate this material and man power to full army non-combat needs," Mr. Roosevelt commented—but without specifying what plan he favored:

"In this way we can make certain that when this modern material becomes available, it will be placed in the hands of troops trained, seasoned, and ready, and that replacement material can be guaranteed."

"New Enslavement."

At one point Mr. Roosevelt declared: "We fully understand the threat of the new enslavement in which men may not speak, may not listen, may not think. As these threats become more numerous and their dire meaning more clear, it

150 Planes Battle Over England, 10 Nazis Downed

Three Large German Bombers Shot Down in Three Minutes as R.A.F. Pilots Manoeuvre to Encircle Nazi Raiders — Germans Envelope Planes in Smoke to Prevent Detection

BATTLE IN TWO PHASES

Bombing Squadron Over Land Accompanied by Messerschmitt Fighters and Kept in Close Formation Until Broken Up by Spitfire Fighters—Some Casualties, Especially in Wales

LONDON, July 10 (CP)—Ten German planes were reported shot down this afternoon in a great air battle over England's southern coast and the English Channel involving nearly 150 planes.

An air raid warden at a southeastern English port said two formations of German raiders, each nearly 50 strong, attacked a convoy of small ships and he believed one ship was sunk.

"I saw three bombers go down in less than two minutes as the British fighter pilots manoeuvred to encircle the Nazis." he declared.

The warden was authority for the estimate of the forces involved and German planes destroyed.

The warden said that in a colossal dive-bombing assault, the Germans enveloped the ships in a cloud of smoke.

Anti-aircraft guns (presumably on the ships or the nearby coast) helped the fighting planes break up the raid and smoke poured from several of the raiders as they retreated toward Boulogne, on the French coast.

Accounts of another phase of the battle, over land, said more than 30 German bombers, accompanied by German Messerschmitt fighting planes, kept in close formation until swift British Spitfires split them up. Then they released their bombs, shaking buildings for miles around, and turned back toward France.

The government announced that "a few persons" had been killed on the south coast of Britain when German bombers struck there.

Anti-aircraft batteries went into action elsewhere along the coast as raiders made attacks which have become almost daily routine. Many casualties were reported to have been caused in Wales by German bombs.

Denies Charges Children of Wealthy Favored in Evacuation Scheme

Official Says 'More Than 75 P.C. of Children Selected Belong to Families Who Could Not Send Them Without Aid

WHAT LIST SHOWS

By GLADYS ARNOLD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 10 (CP Cable) — Charges made in the press and elsewhere that the children of the wealthy are being favored under the scheme to evacuate them to the Dominions from the United Kingdom were denied today by an official of the Children's Overseas Reception Committee who said that "more than 75 per cent of the children selected for evacuation belong to families who could not send them abroad without government assistance."

The scheme is especially intended for those who otherwise could not escape from the dangers of the war, it was added The official explained that no objection could be taken to parents paying full passage for their children and sending them to homes selected by themselves.

A list of youngsters embarked to find a haven in Canada shows that they are from families in which the breadwinner might be a soldier, sailor, butcher, bus conductor, hairdresser, poultry farmer, chauffeur, school headmaster, head waiter, or grocer.

Boys Await Journey

If reports that the whole scheme may be abandoned prove correct it will be a heart-breaking disappointment for many kiddies. Take the care of David, 13-year old son of a fabric buyer. He has had his suitcase packed for days and the key on a string around his neck He refuses to leave home to play for fear he may be away when the call comes for him to set out for Canada.

David is a tall, slim bright scholar. His report card shows him eighth in a class of 45. He is a Boy Scout and his blouse shows merit badges for cooking and first aid. If he has anything to say about it, he hopes to find a Canadian home near the Rockies.

In a neat cottage just outside London, Robert, 12 years, and Michael, 6 1-2, excitedly are anticipating the hour of departure. Robert, who thinks that Canada spells "adventure," is all fire and smiles. he is certain that Michael, who is fair-haired and dream-eyed, will be a poet.

U. S. Army Tests Oil-Burning Diesel Engines to Double Tanks' Range

Wahington, July 10 —(AP)— The United States army is experimenting with oil-burning Diesel engines in an effort to double the distance its tanks can strike without refueling.

Success of the experiments, General Chaffee indicated, would mean armored vehicles could operate more than ever as self-contained units, like the old battle cavalry, striking deep into an enemy's communications and thus paralyzing him.

The veteran cavalry officer discussed also the possibility that it might be necessary in some circumstances to refuel tanks by air, presumably by dropping containers attached to parachutes.

Existing battle plans of the army provide that refueling the tanks immediately behind the battlefield shall be done by trucks loaded with 10-gallon containers which can be thrown away as they are used. Farther back from the front are to be fuel tank trucks.

RECRUITING DRIVE IN NORTH IRELAND

London, July 10 (CP).—A vigorous recruiting drive will be opened shortly in Northern Ireland to fill two new battalions being formed to augment the troops and constabulary which are "aligned in thousands against possible invasion", it was announced today.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

DRIVER IS CHARGED WITH DRUNK DRIVING

A scant few minutes after the automobile which he was driving had collided with a pole near the C.P.R. crossing on South Front St. Samuel Masters, Bloomfield, found himself in the clutches of the law and today was charged with drunken driving. Shortly after 2.00 a.m. today Sergeant Arthur Booth broadcast over the local police radio the description of a motor car reported to have been in an accident near the C.P.R. crossing. Within a matter of a few minutes Constables Arnott and Wright, who had picked up the radio message, arrested Masters, who was held and charged today.

PARKED AUTOMOBILE STRUCK FROM REAR

During a few moments of absence from his parked automobile, which he left on Pinnacle Street shortly after 5.00 a.m. today, G. J. Campbell, Cannifton, was surprised upon his return to find the vehicle had been damaged by a hit and run driver. Police were notified of the incident, and although a search of the city followed, no trace of what might prove a hit and run driver followed. Mr. Campbell parked his automobile on Pinnacle St. while he proceeded to the C.N.R. on business. The parked car was struck from the rear during the few moments of his absence.

HIVE OF HONEY BEES SWARM ON CAR

Pedestrians literally swarmed to safety along Picton's Main Street on Monday afternoon when a swarm of honey bees made their way into town and took possession of a fender of a car belonging to Mr. James Livingstone. The car was parked in front of J. Walmsley's shop when the bees came swarming up the street from the east and were about to land on another motorist's car when the driver, sensing the danger, stepped on the gas and quickly vacated the immediate vicinity.

Mr. Livingstone was not in his car at the time and when he returned he was delayed some time before William Rocke, local bee fancier, hived the wandering bees. Bee swarming seems to be the order of the day in and around Picton as on Sunday a swarm landed on the lawn of Mrs. Thos. Owens, while at Cherry Valley bees took possession of a tree in a cemetery.

MOTORIST DOES NOT BELIEVE IN SIGNS

Conclusive proof that many people do not believe in signs, even when their observance means keeping abreast of the law, was seen yesterday afternoon when motorists were observed using the footpath reserved solely for pedestrian travel at the entrance to what was once known as Fireman's Park. Placed conspicuously in the centre of the walkway is a large sign bearing the words "pedestrians only" but this did not deter the reckless motorist who insisted on using the pathway much to the danger of small children and others for whom the walk is intended.

Dear Mr. Nathanson,

On behalf of the Government, I should like to express to you, and through you to the Motion Picture Industry, our warm appreciation of the effort now being put forward by the Industry to contribute to the success of the War Savings Campaign.

The special film showings which are to be held throughout Canada on Monday evening, July 15, will have, I am sure, a very wide appeal and will serve in a striking way to focus public attention on the campaign. The proceeds from the showings themselves will be a most helpful contribution.

As the project will involve a great deal of work and of sacrifice on the part of a large number of people, I should be grateful if you would convey to all concerned, both in Canada and the United States, our sense of obligation to them.

Yours very truly,

The three charges were preferred by Game Inspector Herb McCabe of Belleville, as the result of recent investigations.

12 CIRCUS BEASTS DIE IN FLAMES

2 Trained Elephants Stampede and Break Main Water Supply Line

Ventura, Calif., July 10—(AP)—Twelve circus animals, movie veterans all—seven tigers, three camels and the expertly-trained elephants "Sally" and "Queenie"—died in a spectacular fire last night.

The flames started in a hay barn and roared through an elephant barn, camel barn, hayshed and machine shop at Louis Goebel's lion farm at Thousand Oaks.

Sally and Queenie, driven mad by the flames, stampeded through their pens and broke the main water supply line. The blaze grew, unchecked, until the break was mended.

Sally burned to death. Queenie, badly scorched, had to be shot.

"The camels were killed when the roof caved in on them," said Goebel. "The most pitiful sight of all was the Tigers running back and forth in their cages, their coats on fire. We managed to get close enough, in spite of the heat, to shoot two of them, but we didn't have a chance to put the others out of their misery."

Five lions locked in rolling caves were removed from the burning buildings. Among them was Leo, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer fame.

Goebel estimated the loss at "around $15,000."

WATERS MINED ORKNEYS TO ICELAND AND TO GREENLAND

LACK OF BENCHES DRAWS COMMENT

People Who Visit Fireman's Park Complain About Lack of Places to Rest

The almost complete lack of benches at Fireman's Park is drawing a lot of unfavourable comment from persons who have been accustomed to spend their afternoons at this popular place, with several complaints being heard yesterday afternoon of benches having been taken away and not returned.

It seems there were twelve or fifteen benches and tables at the park during the spring months but recently all but three have disappeared. Several weeks ago, it is said, four or five benches were taken to the west end of the city for a picnic party and have not been returned, while last Sunday almost all the remaining benches were taken to Victoria Park to serve during the band concert, but the ones responsible for their removal not yet having brought them back.

The need for benches at this park was apparent yesterday afternoon when several aged men were noticed lying on the grass because of the lack of seats, while others, rather than take the long walk to Victoria Park, only stayed a short time and then went home. That this park is popular among tourists passing through the city was seen when two ladies stopped their car and looked about for a bench upon which to eat their lunch, but with all the three benches now remaining in the park occupied, they were forced to spread a blanket on the grass and eat their lunch from this uncomfortable position.

PRIVATE SWORD KILLED BY BOMBS

The name of a former Belleville boy, that of Private L. H. Sword, who went overseas with the 2nd Field Workshop of the R.C.O.C. was included in the latest casualty list as released by the National Defence Department. Pte. Sword was the son of Staff Sergeant Andrew T. Sword of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals. The only information received by the family, now residing in Toronto, came from Ottawa. The telegram stated that Private Sword had been killed by "enemy bombs."

Private Sword was born in Belleville 27 years ago and attended Queen Mary School, moving to Toronto with his family while in his teens, where he continued his education.

Before joining an active service force, Private Sword spent eleven years with the Canadian Militia, nine of them with the Toronto Scottish and the last two with the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals.

Surviving Private Sword are his parents and two brothers, William and Reginald, both of Toronto. An aunt, Mrs. Stephen Sword, resides in Belleville on Moira St., west.

WM. RICHARDS, TWEED, INJURED

Suffered Concussion When Car Overturns Rounding Sharp Turn in Road

Tweed, July 10 —(Special)—Testing the family automobile, that had just been repaired, 28-year-old William Richards of Montreal, and was spending his vacation with his parents here, was critically injured, when the motor car he was testing left the road near Stoco, five miles east of here, and pinned Richards beneath the wreckage, as it turned over. Richards was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where he was attended by Dr. G. S. Cronk and it was found he was suffering from concussion and severe internal injuries.

Richards was spending his vacation with his parents here and started out alone in the family automobile, which had only recently been repaired, to test the vehicle. In rounding a sharp turn in the road the car apparently got out of control and turned completely over into the ditch, pinning the driver beneath the running board. When the car turned over the door on the driver's side swung open and Richards was hurled out and fell beneath the rolling vehicle where he was found in an unconscious condition. Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed, investigated.

6 Children Killed By Illuminating Gas

New York, July 10 (AP)— Six children of Mrs. Louise Nicosia were killed by illuminating gas in their Bronx home today as a result of what police said was a suicide attempt by their mother who was revived and may recover. The child victims were Frances, 4; Dominick 5; Anna 7; Joseph 8; Angelina 11; and Carmela 12.

Police found a note written in Italian and signed by Mrs. Nicosia in which she said she had been ill and suffering for a long time and that the children were suffering, too, because she was not able properly to care for them. Her husband, a baker, was away visiting his ailing mother.

Donald McGowan, Stirling, Wins Kinsmen Club Soap Box Derby

Driving in His First Race, McGowan Earns Right to Try At Akron, For World's Title

First Time Youngster Outside of City Has Copped the Title and Fully Deserved Honors

HAS SPLENDID CAR

Weight Evenly Distributed and Time of Each of McGowan's Heats Exactly the Same

Unheralded and driving his first race, 13-year-old Donald McGowan of Stirling, won the fifth annual Belleville Kinsmen Club Soap Box Derby, sponsored by the Ontario Intelligencer, besting 74 other youthful drivers from all parts of Eastern Ontario down Derby Hill in Belleville last night. Upwards of 5000 persons lined the Derby Hill race-course to see young McGowan ride to triumph in winning the Canadian Soap Box Derby championship of 1940 for which he was presented the M. E. Coyle Trophy and earned for himself the right to compete in the World's Championship Soap Box Derby at Akron, O., next month, when young McGowan will race with and against the cream of the world's Soap Box Derby contestants.

It marked the first time in five years that a resident outside of Belleville won the Kinsmen Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby and although McGowan's track time was somewhat lower than that made by Ernest Young last year, McGowan's accomplishment was in no way mitigated as he drove to triumph and victory in his streamlined yellow and red colored "kid kar" like a veteran and engineered each race through to the finals in true championship manner. McGowan's time in his first appearance on the track was the fastest of the entire race, when he negotiated the course in 36 2-5 seconds. Tumultous applause and an ovation seldom afforded an outside winner, greeted McGowan as he was presented the Coyle Trophy and a gold medal by Jeff Umphrey of the Chevrolet Divison of the General Motors.

Kinsmen Thanked

When presented to the crowd by Announcer Tommy Mason, after winning the Canadian Soap Box championship last night, young McGowan in a clear but excited voice, thanked the Kinsmen and all officials for the splendid treatment he received. "It was swell to win and I want to thank everybody," remarked the 13-year-old Stirling champion. President Jeff Marvell of the Kinsmen Club added his congratulations and the big race terminated for another year.

Second to McGowan was Dennis Rossatte of this city, who received a silver medal for his splendid effort, while Billie Boulter, Belleville, was third and received a bronze medal. Seventy-five youthful drivers competed in the fifth annual Kinsmen Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby that saw entries from Belleville, Rossmore, Trenton, Kingston as well as the champion Stirling driver all anxious and keyed for the winning of that coveted trip to Akron and an opportunity to compete in the International Soap Box Derby championship.

Crowd Well Informed

Colorful as other years, the Kinsmen mingled with the milling crowds to sell balloons and add a circus-like kaleidoscope to the picturesque event. Announcer Tommy Mason kept the large crowd well informed of all happenings during the race, while motorcycle patrolmen patrolled the course before and after each heat to insure safety, Martin's ambulance being present in the event of possible accidents. Two crashes were witnessed at the starting ramp, while two dead heats were included to add excitement and make the event one of racing history and colorfulness. Heat No. 14 saw George Woodhouse and Douglas Day race a draw, while the third semi-final heat was declared a dead heat between Jack Jones and Billie Boulter. In a re-run of these two ties Boulter and Day advanced, the former winning a place in the finals.

Course Record Broken

During the evening Ernie Young, 1939 Canadian Soap Box Derby champion, drove his Zip 2nd down Derby Hill in a trial run to establish a new Canadian course record. Young drove the course in 31 3-5 seconds, clipping a full second off his 1939 record. The drive was purely an exhibition and had no bearing on the 1940 race however.

Prior to the race the youthful drivers paraded up Derby Hill before the large assembly, headed by the Belleville Municipal Band. The drivers were bedecked in their white racing jerseys and metal crash helmets, presented them by the Chevrolet Division of the General Motors. Also in the parade were the previous winners of the Belleville Kinsmen Soap Box Derby, Ernie Young, the Wilson brothers and Walt Turner.

Two fast-moving trucks speeded the winners of each heat back to the electric starting ramp atop of Derby Hill, hauling the racing cars and youthful drivers to assure the maximum speed possible. Thirty-six indivdual races were presented, exclusive of Ernie Young's exhibition. Last night's race terminated many weeks of preparation on the part of the youthful drivers who had laboured feverishly at the construction of their "kid kars" and dreaming of that much-desired trip to Akron and the World's Soap Box Championship. "This year's crop of cars in general were far superior in construction than was generally the case before, which proves the popularity of this type of entertainment," predicted C. B. Colling, the originator of Soap Box Derby racing in Belleville.

Braking Devices Excellent

The braking devices on the cars this year were much superior to that of former years as not a single crash resulted behind the finishing line. "The entire race went off in such a splendid manner and we wish to thank Chief Kidd, Inspector Gardner, Chief Lynch and all of the police and firemen for their splendid assistance in making our fifth annual Kinsmen Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby the ideal success it enjoyed. The public also responded to our efforts and we as a club are truly thankful to all those who helped make this annual event the success it enjoyed last night," President Jeff Marvell stated in public thanks at the conclusion of the race, which seemed to be the consensus of opinion of all Kinsmen present.

The officials of the race were: Judges, Grant Coates, H. Lapp, Claude Watt and Jeff Umphrey, all of Canadian General Motors, Ltd., Oshawa, Mayor Thompson, J. B. Boyce and Alderman W. Harvey, James Anderson of the Toledo Scales Ltd.; Starter C. B. Colling; Timers L. A. Young, R. D. Arnott and Don Thomas.

Heat No. 1—Earl Cook, Belleville.

Heat No. 3—Gerald Draycott, Belleville.
Heat No. 4—Bernard Meagher, Belleville.

N. Y. Times Comments On British Action Against French Fleet

New York, July 10 (CP) — The New York Times, in an editorial on the action which Great Britain was forced to take against the French fleet, said today:

"The British navy has won a double triumph by compelling the peaceful surrender of the French fleet at Alexandria and by crippling the great battleship Richelieu off West Africa. If Germany or Italy had obtained the use of that fast and powerful French battleships, the whole balance of sea power might have been changed at once.

"The potential danger to British sea power remains, and will remain until the forthcoming attack on the British Isles has been repulsed. But at least for the present the British are now free to use the Nelson touch against the Italian navy, which, according to Signor Gayda, has been 'assigned' the duty of harassing British shipping and immobilizing a large part of British naval strength.

"There seems to be enough British naval power in the Mediterranean to keep the Italian fleet in hiding somewhere in mare nostrum, or to make it fight, which it did not do at Oran. The Admiralty announced last night that contact had been made with part of the Italian fleet. In any case, the British now have nothing to fear from the French except the presence of the damaged Strasbourg and the smaller ships at Toulon, and the possible use of French bases like Bizerte by the enemy. The aircraft carrier Bern still defies surrender at Martinque; but her commander now has a precedent, in the common sense shown by the French at Alexandria, for yielding without a fight, and for sparing France another needless tragedy."

'Derby Hill' Highlights

It was a tumultuous ovation that 13-year-old Donald McGowan received from the throngs lining the finish line at the conclusion of last night's final heat which saw the modest Stirling lad win the coveted Coyle Trophy and Gold medal which is emblematic of Derby supremacy in Belleville.

The Kinsmen Club, sponsors of the race provided refreshments for the drivers at the King George School during the afternoon when the drivers and cars received their final inspection by officials. Every driver participating in the race received a cone of ice cream and a bottle of pop.

Those professional type all-steel crash helmets and the white racing sweaters worn by the participants in last night's race were the gift of General Motors, Chevrolet Division. The sweaters and helmets were presented to the boys at the King George School during the final inspection of the cars.

Over two miles of snow fence were erected along the street and sidewalks along Derby Hill (North Front Street) by the Kinsmen's Club to keep the patrons off the race course and to protect the drivers, who were also insured in the event of an accident.

Ever on the alert for any possible accident which might occur to the drivers, officials of the Derby had an ambulance waiting midway down the hill to take care of the injured should there be any need for medical attention to any of the drivers.

Although Donald McGowan showed is heels to all the other entrants in the race to finally come out on top the course was run at a slower time this year than last, when Ernest Young raced the same course in 32 3-5 seconds. Last night's winner went the course in 36 2-5 seconds in his first heat.

As an interesting sidelight to last evening's Derby Ernest Young, winner of the Derby last year, ran the course in an effort to cut his record which he established just one year ago, and was successful in clipping just one second off his previous time. Last night he went the course in exactly 31 3-5 seconds. So fast was he going at the finish line that he could not brake the car quickly enough in the limited space and as he swerved to avoid missing a standing truck, one tire was torn off the racing car.

With two trucks making alternate runs in taking the winner of each heat back to the starting point of the racing course, it was possible to run the complete race in record time. Last year one truck did the whole job, but considerable time was saved with one truck working each end as it was possible to scoot to the other end of the course immediately the racers completed the course without waiting for the truck following behind the racers, turn and make the trip to the other end with the winner of the heat.

The entrance to the overhead bridge and behind the starting equipment presented a novel picture at the beginning of last night's race as the boys all had their cars lined up in the order in which they were scheduled to run. Three abreast the cars were even then lined up far beyond the approach of the bridge as the seventy-five entrants waited their turn to strut their stuff.

The Belleville Municipal Band deserves a word of praise for their splendid efforts in entertaining the crowd and supplying the marching music for the gala parade, which preceded the great event.

The drivers all lined up at Riggs Motor Sales at 5.30 and formed the parade which marched through the main streets of the city before proceeding to the scene of the race. Heading the parade were Mayor Thompson, Alderman Harvey and Jeff Marvell, President of the Kinsmen Club. Following them came members of the Kinsmen Club carrying a big banner advertising the Derby. The Belleville Municipal Band and 'Jamie' Clark with his pipes supplied the music for the parade which was featured by the display of cars, which had won the race in former years. The drivers who were to take part in the race followed in the van.

In the eighteenth heat, Carl Badgley did some fancy wheel work to avoid a crash with the other drivers in his heat. There was a three-car crash off the ramp in the fifth heat as the cars either piled up or turned around but no one was injured and the boys had another try.

Ticket number 1429 won the Kinsmen's prize of a trip to the World's Fair which was an interesting sidelight of the evening's fun. The lady V.A.D.C. mechanics who recently completed the General Motor's course in motor mechanics sold the tickets through the crowd and the winning ticket was selected by draw. Mr. Pete Tryon of Gananoque, won the prize.

The different expressions which passed over the boy's faces as they raced their cars down the hill were varied as they were serious. At the outset and while waiting for the starter's signal their faces were serious to the extreme while at the finish line, in some cases a look of utter dejection appeared on the face of the losers while the winner of each heat was all smiles as he rode back to the top of the hill to appear in the semi-finals.

The telephone and loud speaker system installed for the occasion gave the patrons an up-to-the-minute picture of what it was all about. With announcer Tommy Mason getting his information direct from racing officials by telephone there was no guess work and everybody at all times were kept well acquainted with the names of the participants in each heat.

The work of the city police together with the provincial police and the city firemen in maintaining order and keeping the runways clear of spectators at all times needs a word of praise.

And, incidentally, every boy who drove a car down Derby Hill, was protected by insurance, just in case someone received injuries. The Kinsmen are particularly thoughtful in providing this protection, although, fortunately, last evening it was not needed.

It was a happy winner that was paraded through the streets long after the race was completed. Donald McGowan, with his treasured trophy in his arms and wearing a great big smile, stood on the back of a truck and as it passed through the streets received the ovation of which rightfully goes to a deserving winner.

Stirling Greets Don McGowan After the Contest

Stirling, July 10—(Special) — When a few weeks ago Don McGowan began working to build a car for entry in the Canadian Championship Soap Box Derby held last night in Belleville, some who knew of his ability, said he'd build a winner, others thought his chances remote. But last night when he returned home snugly hugging the cherished trophy symbolic of victory, all wanted to do him honour for he had brought fame to the little village of Stirling. Don climaxed several weeks of hard work and study last night with victory upon which his mind was set. The news of his victory proceeded him on his homeward journey and his fellow towns people were on hand to give him a royal welcome. Perched high in a shining-red truck that passed through the streets with horn blaring was the hero of the hour and the car that had given him the victory but best of all was the shining silver trophy in his arms and the gold medal pinned to his little chest and the confident shout of his playmates that Akron was the next stop.

When the truck finally came to a stop people displayed such interest that he requested them not to handle his car and signified his intention of placing it under lock and key until after the big Akron race. Affectionately patting the nose of the tiny race car, he exclaimed "I really think we have something here and we'll make a real showing at Akron."

A good number of Stirling youngsters were on hand to witness the race and lend their support to Don, who never seemed the slightest bit doubtful about the ability of his machine as he scored clean-cut victories in heat after heat during the contest.

Studied and Planned Carefully

Having an unusual talent for building such things as model aeroplanes, boats, etc., etc., Don made a careful study of building this car upon which depended so much. Reasoning that equalized distribution of weight was essential smooth performance and free motion, Don fashioned his car after a full-sized rear driven motor car which placed the driver a little bit further forward on the chasis but directly midway beween the front and rear axel. Thus with the weight carefully measured and evenly balanced upon the four wheels there was added momentum to the drive.

Another matter that was given careful study was that of lubrication —the matter of a greasing job to many was just a need chore, but to Don it was much more. He tried all types of oil and selected the one having just the right texture for absolute freedom of action. Then the matter of the amount of oil needed was studied a system of spraying the points of friction adopted as the best to prevent clogging.

Brilliant Student

Don, a small quiet lad popular with all his friends and neighbours is naturally mechanically inclined and one of the most brilliant students in manual training and shop work which he takes along with his regular classes at Stirling School. He also bears promise of becoming an excellent musician for in spite of his tender years he is a valued member of the Stirling Citizens' Band.

He first displayed his completed car on the streets of his home town on Friday and Saturday last and little interest was shown except by his young friends. But last night when he returned a national hero to all Canadian boys he had to keep people away from the little machine. Don is proud and happy to be the one who brings fame and publicity to his home town of Stirling.

GONE TO STIRLING.

THE
M. E. COYLE TROPHY AWARDED TO CITY CHAMPION
[illegible]TOWN SOAP BOX DERBY
1937

The M. E. Coyle Trophy, emblematic of the Canadian Soap Box Derby championship, that was won by thirteen-year-old Donald McGowan of Stirling, at Derby Hill in Belleville last night. McGowan was one of 75 youthful drivers of motorless "kiddie kars" in the fifth annual Kinsmen Club - Ontario Intelligencer Canadian Soap Box Derby championship held in Belleville, July 9th. Upwards of 5,000 people saw young McGowan flash under the finishing wire a winner, the first out-of-Belleville champion since the race was incepted five years ago. The newly-crowned champion was presented the Coyle Trophy, a gold medal, and will compete in the International Soap Box Derby championships as the result of his victory.

'Great to Win' Says Donald to Milling Crowd

Donald McGowan, 13 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John McGowan of Stirling was just about the happiest boy in Canada last night when driving a car sponsored by the Stirling Motor Sales, and which will be sponsored by the Ontario Intelligencer at the All-American finals in Akron, he won the Soap Box Derby sponsored by the Kinsmen's Club at Derby Hill. Donald drove a masterful, well-timed race in each heat and in the final crossed the finish line with plenty to spare.

Kid Kar racing against stiff competition is a new thing for Donald and although success was his in his first attempt to attain what must be every boy's dream, his sudden rise to fame did not detract one iota from his pleasing personality and modesty. When he crossed the finish line at the conclusion of last night's race he was showered enough attention to turn a much older boy's head but Donald remained the same delightful lad that had come to Belleville earlier in the day full of hopes toward the evening's event.

Looks Forward to Trip

"How does it feel to win the Derby and a trip to Akron, Ohio?" asked Tommy Mason of Donald as he was hoisted onto the announcing truck after the race, to say a few words to the crowd over the microphone.

"Great," replied Donald.

When presented with the Coyle Trophy by Jeff Umphrey of the General Motors, Donald replied with "I certainly thank you for this in every way I can, and I just feel fine."

The runner's-up, Dennis Rossatte and Billy Boulter also came in for praise and were hoisted to the sound truck to say something to the crowd, with Dennis saying in a manner in which proved his good sportsmanship. "Sorry I did not win the race, but glad that Donald got it," he told his listeners. Billy Boulter was almost overcome with shyness as he tried to say something over the air but managed to get out that "he would be back again next year and hoped that he would do a little better."

Donald, like all good mechanics was anxious about his car after the race, as the crowd gathered around and it was only after Kinsmen mounted guard over his machine that he would consent to go up on the sound truck. Riding triumphantly in his victorious car, Donald was pushed to a nearby service station after the race was over, where the car was taken over by his father.

SEES CHURCHILL AS SECOND PITT

Churchill, Britain's great prime minister (who is the most hated of persons among the nazis, something of which he is no doubt proud) has been likened by the New York Times to William Pitt, who led England in the early days in the wars with Napoleon.

"The leadership of Winston Churchill has now been tested in two months of desperate struggle. We have yet to learn the results of the home front in speeding up the production of airplanes, tanks and other war materials. ... There is every evidence of a spurt in production all along the line in present day England; and what is more, there is every sign that galvanized leadership is having its reward."

The Times praises his broad wisdom in choice of leaders, his sane decision in naming labor leaders to key positions in the war effort. "Perhaps that is one of the many reasons why the British people are now united under his leadership, irrespective of politics, regardless of class, until now they are truly a garrison of more than forty millions, grimly resolved that their fortress shall not surrender."

One of the great feats of Churchill is his ability to rally the people to face one disaster after another without flinching. What people would have stood the tragedy of the break through the French lines near Sedan which threw an avalanche of Huns upon France and Belgium, or the Battle of Flanders which Britain by heroic effort made at the last into the triumphant withdrawal at Dunkerque! Then there was the fall of France, "which must have been the bitterest blow of his lifetime," according to the Times.

His words go far. "He has fired their spirits with imperishable words and has given heart to his people and their friends throughout the world. Is it stretching parallels to feel that William Pitt is alive again?"

He has kept up the courage of the British people by keeping up his own, says the Times.

Churchill is of the heroic stuff of which the British people are made. His name will live as long as English history lasts. Like Pitt, he creates influences which rally the people to their greatest achievement. Pitt's influence lasted until Waterloo and long afterward. Churchill's, Britons are confident, will last long after Hitler's name is but a byword to the world.

GERMANS LOSE SLEEP OVER AIR RAIDS

Can the Germans take what they have been so anxious to give others? Could they stand the treatment they handed out to Poland or to Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium or France?

British people have been enduring nazi plane strafing now and then since the first of the war and latterly almost daily and they show no signs of cracking. But newspapermen back from a weekend in Germany tell how the Germans cannot endure the loss of sleep caused by air raids.

The last war saw the Germans escaping most of the "cost" back of the frontier. The Germans overran a part of Belgium and France but Germany was largely untouched. Those were the days when there was nothing like the modern air raid. This time the Germans are getting some knowledge of air raids, though the British have been most careful not to bomb anything but military objectives and supply centres. But these raids on military objectives are proving too much for the nerves of the people who would not mind anyone but themselves getting full measure of the horrors of war. The Germans are not getting the taste of what they did to civilian elements of the nations. What they are feeling is the reaction to the tireless British air raids on military objects.

The Hun is so selfish, all he wants is to escape himself but does not mind inflicting horrors on millions of innocent people who have a right to their civilization and development more than the Hun for the Hun is now an outlaw.

What does the average Hun think of the "invincibility" of Hitler who cannot prevent raids on military objectives and who cannot protect their nerves and make only Frenchmen, Norwegians, Poles, Dutch, Belgians and Czechs suffer the horrors of modern war? The Hun is no superman. He has tried to terrify the world by placing screaming sirens on bombers, he has won a large part of his success through "the fifth column," and he would have the world think he can endure all. Events these days are pointing out how very susceptible is the Hun to fear.

SPEED UP OF ARMAMENTS OF BRITAIN

Britain has done magnificently in her building up of armaments but she has been warned of false confidence by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production.

He said this week, "I am an optimistic man but here are the hard facts of our aircraft production for June and the record we achieved is a very fine increase in everything that has gone before.

"The fact is we produced more than double the total of aircraft produced for the same month last year when preparations for war were going on full blast and also turned out far more than twice the number of engines, thus increasing surplus stock.

"We have bought immensely increased quantities of aircraft and engines from the United States in recent weeks. The fact that the total value of aircraft orders we have placed with the United States amounts to well over $1,000,000,000 is significant."

Beaverbrook also declared that orders totalling $50,000,000 have been placed with aircraft factories in Canada and added that deliveries are increasing.

The total effort of the British people and of the Empire is being put into the war to crush Hitler, save civilization, restore those nations which have passed into the twilight or darkness of the Huns to their former freedom and bring about a happier world where grasping totalitarians will not be at liberty to menace mankind.

The Monroe Doctrine—1940

The German Government professes to be unable to understand why our State Department recently addressed a note of warning to it with regard to the Monroe Doctrine. The explanation is perfectly simple. Germany has imposed a harsh armistice on France, and unless defeated in this war may impose an equally harsh peace, involving the transfer of French possessions. Some of the French possessions lie in the Western Hemisphere. For more than a hundred years it has been the policy of the United States, acting under the Monroe Doctrine, to oppose to the very limit of its ability the transfer of any part of the Western Hemisphere from one non-American Power. That was the point of our State Department's note of warning. It is to be hoped that Hitler understands it, despite this profession of bewilderment. In blunt words: any attempt by Germany, either now or when this war is over, to take possession of territory which has belonged to France in this hemisphere will be regarded by the American Government and the American people as a hostile act.

Secretary Hull has taken advantage of this German statement to point out another pertinent fact about the Monroe Doctrine. It is a doctrine in defense of self-determination—that is, in defense of the right of every nation living under it to decide its future for itself. It therefore bears no resemblance whatever to the imitation "Monroe Doctrine" about which we hear so much from Germany and from Germany's anti-Comintern partner in the East. When Germans talk about a "Monroe Doctrine for Central Europe and Japanese talk about a "Monroe Doctrine for Asia," they mean that they want to stake out an area from which the influence of all other Powers is barred and within which they can rule and plunder as they please. That is not the meaning of our own Monroe Doctrine. It demands and receives scrupulous respect for the rights and privileges of every one of the American republics, great and small. If Japan and Germany will apply the same doctrine to themselves—if Japan will permit the Chinese to decide their own future for themselves and withdraw her armies, if that is what the Chinese desire; if Germany will grant the same rights of self-determination now enjoyed by the Peruvians and the Argentinians to the Czechs, the Australians, the Poles, the Danes, the Dutch, the Belgians, the Norwegians and the French, neither Germany nor Japan need fear a quarrel with the United States. —New York Time

FASTEST RAILWAY TRAINS

From New York state the other day an accident was reported in which the famous locomotive No. 999 suffered some damage. It is 47 years now since she hit newspaper front pages with a speed record, hauling a passenger train over a regular run on the New York Central. A picture of the flyer used to adorn the covers of school scribblers in those days. The 999 touched 112 1-2 miles an hour while making up time.

As a world record, the mark was eclipsed by the Philadelphia and Reading in 1904, with 115 miles an hour over a five-mile stretch, and only three years ago a London, Midland & Scottish express attained speed of 114 miles an hour on a test run from London to Crewe and return. Also in 1937, Engineer William Prodger of the Canadian Pacific drove the then new streamlined train between London and Windsor at 120.

These marks are all for short distances and average speed for a full run is much lower. The L. M & S. train here mentioned did 80 miles an hour an the average and a world record for sustained speed was claimed. But a German Diesel train running between Berlin and Hanover before the war covered 158 miles in 115 minutes, an average of 82.3 miles an hour. The fastest regular run in the United States is said to be on the Pennsylvania between Valparaiso and Plymouth, at 75.6 miles an hour, but the Burlington claimed 98.7 miles an hour for 14 miles—if that qualifies—and the Cheltenham Flyer of the Great Western in England averaged 81.6 miles an hour over a 77-mile run in 1932. France was putting into service before the war a train between Paris and Nice, 600 miles, which was to average 81.25 miles an hour, but the railroads of that country are probably not interested in speed records now.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Sun Stroke and Heat Exhaustion

During very hot weather, most of us try to keep out of the sun because we wish to avoid sunstroke, but we should try to remember also that heat exhaustion or heat prostration may occur right in the home, where we are shielded from the rays of the sun. Sun stroke and heat exhaustion are two different ailments and require somewhat different treatment.

In sunstroke you may feel tired and dizzy before the regular symptoms occur. These are headache, feeling of oppression, sometimes a tightness in the chest, great thirst, restlessness, frequent desire to pass urine, hot skin, a "sicky" feeling, flushed face and high temperature, finally unconsciousness.

Treatment in sunstroke is to lay the patient in a cool, shady place, off the ground if possible or on the ground on newspapers or clothing if no bench or table is available. Cold cloths are then applied to back of neck, face, and chest, clothing removed, body sprinkled with water. The head should be kept high and patient fanned with a towel or piece of clothing. When patient is able to swallow, some cool water containing a pinch of salt should be given.

In heat exhaustion due to working in a hot, ill ventilated room, there is at first usually faintness, headache, dizziness and a staggering gait. The face is pale instead of flushed and skin is cold and damp, and low temperature (not high) is present. Unconsciousness may or may not occur.

Prevention of heat exhaustion as practised in factories is the taking of a tablet or table salt (one-quarter teaspoonful) with each glass of water. It is the loss of the salt from the body in the perspiration that causes the symptoms of heat exhaustion.

In the treatment of heat exhaustion, patient is laid in a cool spot, cold applications made to the head and heat (by hot water bags or other methods) applied to the body. If patient is conscious he is given as much water as he can drink containing a quarter teaspoon of salt to each glass of water. If he is unconscious, the salt solution is used as an enema. In hospitals the salt solution is injected under the skin.

In these cases of heat exhaustion, having the patient smell aromatic spirits of ammonia or giving him 15 drops in water to drink every fifteen minutes helps to restore full consciousness and stimulates heart action.

Every Citizen A Forest Sentinel

Montreal, July 10.— "War-time has placed a new and higher value upon the forests of Canada" declares the Canadian Forestry Association in a statement today. The new value in this case goes almost wholly to wage-earners, merchants, supply houses, and others furnishing the employment and services that enter into the manufacture of lumber and paper. These always are the chief gainers from forest activity and suffer most when forest industry declines.

"Now that the Dominion Government has issued a call for the organized defence of Canada, it will provide a new reason and a new opportunity for every citizen to include the protection of the forests from fire with his patriotic training. The defence of Canada applies to forest fire prevention as well as external enemies. Defending the forests is an immediate personal contribution that every citizen can undertake. It is sometimes forgotten that forests never destroy themselves. They are laid in ruins nearly always by the carelessness of human beings. Thousands of forest rangers work from morning till night to save the splendid resources of this province from reckless actions of fishermen, campers, smokers, berry-pickers and settlers.

"Every forest fire is a blow to our home-land, and the consequences of fire grow steadily worse as the timber supplies becomes less and the distribution of forest wages grows greater. The Prime Minister of Canada, Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King, stated recently: 'The safeguarding of the forest resources in a time of war becomes a form of patriotism which no nation or people can afford to neglect'."

RAILWAY TRAFFIC INTERRUPTED

Lucerne, Switzerland, July 10 — (AP)—Railroad sources reported interruption of traffic on the rail line through the Brenner Pass between Germany and Italy today.

The cause was not ascertained, but it was reported that a single track section of the line had been damaged by bombs of British air raiders.

BIG PARADE IS URGED

London, July 10—(CP Cable) — The Daily Express in an editorial today urged a great big parade held of empire troops now in Britain.

Explaining that many of them find nothing to do all day and are tired of strolling in London, the paper said:

"Let us ask them to inspire the British people by marching through the streets not only of London but the big provincial cities."

Underground Differences Between Partners

Underground Differences Between Partners

New York, July 10—The attempt of the French to come to terms with their conquerors by setting up a Fascist Government in France may give them for a short time the illusion that they are not really conquered, but have become one of the victorious gang. But sooner or later it is to be expected that ideology will prove to be less important than conflicting national interests, unless the Fascist ideology goes a lot further to the left than it has done already and merges into something indistinguishable from international socialism. This, too, is possible. But it has not happened yet.

Interests Not Identical

The building of Pan-Europe — Pan-Fascist Europe—is being accomplished by the Hitler regime, but it is being done by a partnership, not by an individual, and with Russia as a not altogether silent partner. As long as there is anything left on the globe for the Fascist powers to conquer, the Axis will probably stick together. But it is a mistake, I believe, to think that eventually the various tendencies now latent and submerged will not manifest themselves openly.

The interests of Germany and Italy, of Italy and Russia, and of Russia and Germany are not identical. Mussolini certainly still cherishes his dream of a Roman Empire. In practical terms that means a Latin union: Italy, France, Spain, Portugal, with control of the Mediterranean, Adriatic and Aegean Seas and the whole of Northern Africa and the Near East. In this Latin Union Italy considers herself the leader by reason of her Fascist "regeneration" and by reason of her "demographic dynamism."

Italian vital statisticians have been ready to present to every foreign correspondent figures to prove that Italy is rapidly becoming a more numerous nation than France, by reason of her birth rate. I believe that it is true that there are some two million more Italians today between the ages of 20 and 45 than there are Frenchmen, even though the populations of the two countries at the outbreak of war were approximately the same. Italy is "younger" than France, from a demographic viewpoint. And the French loses in the war, which are between one and two million men, will increase the discrepancy. The Latin Union idea has existed for a long time. In 1935 it looked as if it might be possible to wean France away from England into close co-operation with Italy. Pierre Laval, in France, was the chief proponent of this idea. Laval was anti-English and thought highly of the "natural" "racial" ties between France and Italy.

The success of the Eden policy at Geneva, or rather the half-success, which resulted in sanctions against Italy with the collaboration of France, but sanctions so half-heartedly applied that they were valueless in stopping the Ethiopian War, actually drove Mussolini into alliance with Hitler — an alliance that neither he nor the Italian people really welcomed. Mussolini at that time became convinced that his Latin union could be achieved only by the conquest of France and her forcible detachment from the British alliance. The Italian-French union, which in 1935 might have been effected on some basis of equality—so runs the argument—now is effected forcibly under the leadership of Rome.

For this idea of the Roman Empire of Latin race, the collaboration of Franco and of a Portuguese Government that can be sundered from Britain, is also essential.

Undoubtedly Mussolini at present is, to an extent, supporting France, he does not want a greatly weakened France. He wants France as a partner against a Germany which is becoming far too powerful for Italy's interests. Laval, one of the triumvirate ruling France, and Mussolini see eye to eye. They have seen eye to eye for a long time.

Hitler's Dream Differs

For Hitler also dreams of a Roman Empire—only his Roman Empire is the Empire of Charlemagne, the "Roman Empire of the German nation" that inherited Rome after its collapse.

Already, in Spain, we can see a conflict between the two conceptions. In that unhappy country the German Gestapo is working for a German-controlled Spain, while Franco's brother-in-law, Serrano Suner, though he is outwardly co-operative with the Germans, is secretly hostile to the domination exercised there by the Nazis.

Interests Will Clash

The eventual interests of Germany, Italy and Russia clash on the Adriatic, in the Balkans, in the Near East, on the Black Sea. Hitler will certainly get through to the Adriatic. In a speech which he made before the outbreak of the war Hitler laid claim to the whole former Empire of Charlemagne, by innuendo at least, and he certainly and openly lays claim to the whole of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire except for the lands south of the Brenner on actual Italian Peninsula. These he relinquished formally, and from these he has been repatriating the German population.

The underground conflict of interests is felt all through the Southeastern countries. Hungary, for instance, is vigorously pro-Italian and veiledly anti-German. Rumania, desperately afraid of Hungary and Russia, looks to Germany. Yugoslavia and Bulgaria may rapidly recover their old pan-Slav leanings. Neither country is in the least afraid of the "Reds," whatever their leaders, Kings or Regents, may think. And Turkey is resolved to stay on good terms with the Soviet Union, whatever her other interests may be.

Uneasy About Russia

It is in view of this that a section of the Nazi Party — the one headed by Goering —has been asking itself for a long time: "Is it worth while to destroy Great Britain? Would it not be better to come to terms with Britain, put Russia out of the picture by turning on her, and thus have an overwhelming advantage against Italy and her Balkan and Southwestern European satellites?"

Certainly this group in Germany is watching with some uneasiness the movements of Russia. The German-Russian agreement of 1939 allotted the Baltic and Bessarabia to Russia as spheres of influence. But the Russians have occupied considerably more than was agreed upon, and circles in Germany as well as the Italian Government are worried for fear Russia may take, one way or another — directly or through Bulgaria — the whole Western Black Sea coast, as well as Charnak — the entrance to the Dardanelles.

In this situation Italy wants the defeat of Britain in order to get a free hand for the Latin Union in Asia Minor and the Mediterranean, and undoubtedly the present Government of France thinks that, by collaboration with Italy, France herself may share eventually some of the spoils. The Italian hope is that the collapse of the British Empire will throw rich booty into the hands of the Italian-led Latin bloc.

But Hitler, of course, has not fought this war for any such reason.

Would Copy Communists

Italian fascism is, ideologically, genuinely anti-Communistic, and the idea of a Roman Empire, Fascist and Catholic, is a Vatican dream. But the radical Nazis — Goebbels, Himmler, Ribbentrop and now apparently Hitler himself — have found that the most effective war propaganda has been that copied from the Communists. And this group are for going with Russia as the best means of establishing leadership over the whole continent of Europe and eventually the world.

Struggle World-Wide

What Mussolini himself may do is a matter of speculation. If the German-Russian combination should get too strong—if he should fail to drive Germany against Russia, while he is mopping up for Pan-Latinism and the Catholic Corporate State, Christian but anti-clerical—then he might go red himself.

At any rate, the struggle is not likely to be over in the next few weeks. It is much more profound than that, and it is world-wide in eventual scope.

WILD LIFE CONSERVATION

Many of Canada's valuable fur-bearing animals are subject to marked fluctuations in numbers, according to the department of mines and resources, Ottawa, which with the assistance of the bureau of animal population, Oxford university, and the Hudson's Bay company, is making a study of wild life populations. This survey takes the form of an annual questionnaire distributed to resident traders, trappers, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and officers of government departments stationed in the Northwest Territories. The investigation is carried on from year to year because the situation is changing continually and it is hoped that the work will produce data from which a forecast can be made relating to the expected abundance of each important species. The results of the study may also suggest measures to prevent unnecessary depletion of any species of wild life during the periods of scarcity.

Canada's fur trade has undergone great changes since the French regime in Canada. The railway first revolutionized conditions throughout the country, then more recently the advent of the motor car has influenced the extension of highways to the limits of settlement, and beyond. Boats now ply the lakes and rivers, and the airplane is used for the transportation of furs from the more inaccessible districts. The advance of lumbering, mining and agricultural settlement, together with improved methods of capture, have driven the fur-bearing animals farther and farther afield, and caused serious reductions to their numbers.

To guard against further depletion and to ensure the prosperity of Canada's great wild life heritage, the Dominion and provincial governments have adopted strong measures of conservation. With respect to fur-bearing animals, limitations of catch or close seasons are in effect in districts where natural conditions provide a suitable habitat, and in strategic places sanctuaries have been provided from which the surrounding country may be naturally restocked.

POLISH SHIPS BREAK AWAY

London, July 10—(CP)— Two Polish ships which French authorities in West African ports attempted to hold broke out of their harbors and are now in British ports, the Admiralty announced today.

The ships were the 3,133-ton Stalowa Wola, which escaped from Dukar, French West Africa, and the 6,345-ton Pulaski which escaped at night from the inner harbor at Konakri, another French West African port.

RADIOPHONE SERVICE OPENED

Melbourne, July 10 (AP)—Radiophone service between Australia and the Philippine Islands was opened today when Prime Minister Menzies and Postmaster-General Thorby exchanged greetings with Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The Royal Navy's big protective operation, ensuring that the French fleet remain out of enemy control has been practically completed. The French admiral in charge of French fighting ships at Alexandria agreed to British terms to demilitarize the ships and the big battleship Richelieu was attacked and damaged at Dakar in West Africa.

This achievement leaves the navy free to go about its task of controlling the Mediterranean and protecting British shores against attack. The Italian fleet has maintained a discreet reserve in Mediterranean waters so far.

If an early German attack on Great Britain is contemplated — and there are reasons to believe it is— the role of the Italian fleet in the near future may be simply that of keeping as large a number of British ships busy in the Mediterranean as possible. That role involves inaction rather than action.

Should the German attack not come for some time or should it come and fail, however, Italy will feel more and more pinched by British naval activities and the Italian fleet will be forced to fight or admit it is no match for the British.

Vocational Guidance Committee Of Kiwanis Club in Charge

MANY SPEAKERS

The Vocational Guidance Committee of the Kiwanis Club under the chairmanship of Ted Willing, was in charge of the luncheon of the Kiwanis Club held on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel at which ten graduates from the Vocational School of the Belleville Collegiate and five graduates from St. Michael's Academy were the principal guests as well as businessmen from every line of endeavour in the city. Bill Anderson occupied the chair with Eddie Shapiro as sergeant-at-arms and several healthy fines were collected. It was announced that Wilfred Laporte will be the new director to replace Ivan Scott, who has asked and received six months leave of absence due to pressing business. Wilf will make a swell director as he has on every occasion shown his interest in club work and is a most regular attendant at the luncheons.

The work is proceeding for the Kiwanis Street Carnival according to Jack Trudeau in charge of Ways and Means and this year's edition of the event will be the best on record. The club is most anxious to raise a large sum so that it can carry out the project of war work that has been laid out. Every member has been asked to co-operate to the fullest on any task assigned and if this is done the success of the venture is assured, the President stated.

Plans are going forward by Dr. R. A. Flynn, Inter Club, Chairman for an inter club picnic with Peterboro and Belleville Clubs participating.

Dr. Reg. Anderson spoke to the graduates representing the professional men of the city. "To you who have graduated from secondary education I wish to speak on the opportunities and privileges of a university education. You may have heard that the field in professional work is overcrowded and your time at university would be wasted, but if you take an interest in your chosen profession and exert energy there are plenty of opportunities in this great land of ours, Canada," assured Dr. Anderson.

"Canada is forging ahead in the nations of the world and will soon hold opportunities, that are yours if you will work for them. Regarding a university education, I might say that the acquaintances and friends you make there are exceedingly valuable in later life. It is these associations that are learning as well as the academic atmosphere and I urge you of the 1940 Collegiate graduating class to seriously consider a university education if at all possible," concluded Dr. Anderson.

Everyone a Salesman

"Everyone is a salesman, regardless as to his wares or merchandising, because we have to learn to sell ourselves and that is the goal you boys must attain— sell yourselfs," urged Charles Richardson, who spoke representing the commercial men. "Today commercial salesmanship is merely the act of explaining what you have and its benefits to the purchaser or prospect. You must learn to stress the need of your merchandise to the prospect, but I warn you a saleman today must spend many hours in studying his goods and adapting himself to the needs of the public.

"A salesman has a service to offer the public and it is only through study and work such can be accomplished and always remember, when you launch upon life in the business world—'Thought without Action' is valuless," explained Mr. Richardson.

"Every type of business today means hard work. It means you are going back to school again to learn business and get an insight behind the 'red front' of the store," were the opening remarks made by Jack McVeigh, who spoke on behalf of the Retail Merchants of the city. "The methods of present-day merchandising must be achieved through initiative and the phsycology of approach to the public. You must be prepared to accept regimentation and discipline, as the ladder of success has many rungs and they must be climbed one at a time," explained Mr. McVeigh.

Mr. Deacon Heard

F. S. Deacon, well known Belleville manufacturer, was the next to speak to the boys' graduation class of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School for 1940. Mr. Deacon opened his remarks by extolling upon the many great qualities of men, who got their start in Belleville. "You are well born, of Belleville stock, which means success if you are willing to work. There will be great possibilities and opportunities in Canada following this war and I urge you to be ready to make sacrifices and work hard to attain your goal," suggested Mr. Deacon as he told of several Belleville boys who had made their mark in life in most every field of endeavour. "There was the late Ed. Lloyd, who left here as a boy to become the head of the largest electric plant in Chicago and the Booth brothers who brought out Ipana tooth paste and other drug goods and I could tell you of scores of former Belleville boys who once sat on the threshhold of manhood as you are today. There is no limit to your possibilities if you want to work hard," urged Mr. Deacon.

Bert Boyce Asks Question

"If I was leaving school today what would I do? I've asked myself that and here are the answers," was the opening remark of Mr. J. B. Boyce, who represented the motor industry of the city.

"If I were you boys I would determine what I desired in the business world and make that my chief objective. With no objective in life you have no future to look forward to. Cling to the basis of the Golden Rule, these are the chief tools in your kit. Courtesy and kindness pay great dividends in business life. There is no such a thing as a self-made man. A team of horses will pull much more than three individual horses ever could. Have faith in your fellowman, yourself and God, because you can't succeed on hate, jealousy or by harbouring malice in your heart. Enthusiasm produces action and power and makes your employment a pleasure rather than labourious work and above all concentrate on self-control, it is the highest form in man. There is no such a word as can't, but you must have the desire to accomplish things if you wish to be a success," pointed out Mr. Boyce.

The thanks of the club were extended to the five speakers for their encouraging and helpful words of wisdom and advice by Kiwanian Harold Seldon. Eddie Shapiro acted as sergeant-at-arms, while the speakers of the day were introduced by Kiwanian Ted Milling. Harold Carruthers acted as song leader with Leo B. Riggs accompanying on the piano.

Soldier Grateful For Gifts

England, June 23, 1940

Editor, The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir,

I wish you would publish this letter in your paper to show my friends who have sent me cigarettes and other things how much I appreciate what they have done, and also that I might be able to thank them all in a way that other people may see that gifts like this are very thankfully received by those who are so many miles from home and people whom they may have been associated with for quite some time before they joined the army to fight for their country. With these few words to you to show why I am writing this letter I will start it hoping you will excuse me for being so bold in asking you for this favor. Thank you.

A Letter to My Friends in Belleville, Ontario

Dear Friends,

I wish to take this opportunity in thanking you all for your generous gifts which have been very gratefully received by me and hope you will excuse me for having your names mentioned in the paper, but this is one good way I think in showing my thanks to all of you for your kindness in sending me cigarettes and tobacco. I also think that every soldier who has received these things from their friends feel the same as I do about receiving parcels from their friends who live in the city of Belleville. With these few words I will try to remember all those who sent me parcels when I write their names below this short letter.

Mr. J. B. Boyce, Mr. Fred Chapman, Stewart-Warner Alemite Employees; Bill Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Marshall, Bill Page, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Giffin.

If I have forgotten anyone in this list I am very sorry and wish to apologize for my poor memory but I think they are all in this list so with many thanks to you my friends, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Infuse 6 heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh, boiling water. After 6 minutes strain liquid into 2-quart container; while hot, add 1 to 1½ cups of sugar and juice of 2 lemons, strained; stir until sugar is dissolved; fill container with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding cold water or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

'THE CONCRETIA' BEING SCRAPPED

South Bay, July 10—The Concretia, last of Great Lake vessels constructed of cement, is being scraped and only her frame work remains. This veteran ship was well known to lighthousemen and mariners of this vicinity, as the Concretia was formerly the Government lighthouse tender for the Duck Islands.

Built during the last Great War, the ship was unique in construction being built of cement, and was one of few such vessels built for fresh water service.

FASHION FLASHES

SMART SHOES report interest in the dinner hat. A colorful model is of black crim trimmed with three large red velvet roses placed across the forehead and set in green leaves. The stems in back are tied with a mauve velvet ribbon bow.

IT WON'T BE LONG before we think of early Autumn coats. A good looking model is of soft black woolen with a tiny turn-down collar, the bodice worked in tiny tucks. Belt and buttons of the fabrics. Round pockets are embroidered with green and gold thread and are edged with big dangling gilt sequins.

SEEN AROUND these days is the silk frock with a woolen jacket trimmed with the print. The jacket is usually of the longer tunic silhouette. One such ensemble consists of a navy blue silk dotted in light blue, mauve and pink. The jacket has tailored, notched revers and buttons of the print.

WE ADMIRED a girl wearing a pink chiffon dress and a hat which was a padded roll of dull gold sequins with a lacy veil in beige.

SAIL AWAY but take along some togs to protect you from the spray. A useful item is a wide cape of water-proofed white fabric with a big hood.

Pack Beauty Kit On Holiday

By HELEN FOLLETT

Holiday bent the girls are flying hither and yon. The home body has hung up the dishcloth for the time being, piled into the family bus along with daddy, the kids and the family pup. Let us hope that she has taken along her hand lotion so her poor mitts can get care during their vacation from household chores.

The typist, the clerk, the maid of all works; all on the wing. They're ducking away from the job, but there's one job that must go on and that's the 100 year war against Time, the old meanie who gets in his work if you don't attend strictly to your beauty duties.

Avoid Spills

Beauty kits for travelers are made in condensed form, every cosmetic packed carefully so there will be no spillage. A good investment because they take up almost no space at all, and nothing is forgotten. There are creams so necessary to offset the ravages of sun, wind and atmospheric dust. There are powder, rouge, lipsticks. For the finger nails, an orange wood stick, needle point scissors, emery boards, cuticle cream, polish, polish remover and a little roll of absorbent cotton.

Metal curlers must not be forgotten. If sight seeing is on the program there will be need of a foot powder. And, as always, the deodorant must be included.

Women with large features and large figures make a mistake when they wear bright colors. What they do wear should be for the purpose of accenting the frock or hat. Dark colors are slenderizing. The tiny hat makes the nose look larger. Light colored hosiery and fancw footwear call attention to fatted calves and feet that are not like little mice.

The coiffure should be arranged close to the head, and not down on the neck which appears less plumpish if the frock has a V cut instead of a round one. Plumpies have a lot of dress laws that they must obey if they are to appear at their toppingest best.

"There are creams so necessary to offset the ravages of the sun."

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, July 10

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE INTERESTING chain of astral figures would seem to indicate a sudden windfall, blowing in with unprecedented precipitancy, from a surprising and possibly mysterious source and culminating in a rather spectacular crisis.

Those whose birthday it is may be wise in "expecting the unexpected," as all auguries point to sudden disruption, radical change, far-reaching effects on the future destiny, amid new surroundings, strange contacts and revamped objectives. Such adventures may have spectacular denouements, promising success, progress in entirely novel directions.

A child born on this day may have much originality, inventive and creative ability, with a high spirit of adventure and romance, although it may be strangely intuitive, subtle and perhaps suave.

For Thursday, July 11

A VERY lively day is forecast from the dominant lunar aspects, although things may not move spectacularly but may develop with steady progress into satisfactory achievements. The forces and faculties are fairly well stimulated, with business and constructive work marching on to the cherished ends. Cooperation with fraternities, educational, social or humane groups are particularly favored.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of definite progress in the direction of moderate objectives, under the spur of alert, decisive and potential forces and faculties. Group work is favored.

A child born on this day should be enterprising and ambitious, with keen and highly-stimulated intellect, possibly inciting to sharp and offensive verbal expression, to its detriment, although it may be sensitive and sympathetic. The legal profession demands such specific gifts.

DON'T DRENCH FOODS WITH WEAK SAUCES

ADDING large quantities of weak-flavoured catsups or sauces soon uses up a bottle and runs up expense. From the viewpoint of economy and for your own enjoyment of fine flavours, you will be wise to use a concentrated relish such as H. P. Sauce. Many people claim this is the most savoury sauce in the world: It has such rich, fruity goodness.

Prove the value of H. P. Sauce yourself. Try it in soups, stews, meat pies, salads, macaroni and cheese dishes. Use it with steaks, chops, tenderloins, fish, fowl and other things. H. P. adds a piquant, relishable flavour to all foods. A little goes a long way.

No Discourtesy Intended When Bride Exchanges Gift

One bride, living in a three-room apartment, finds that she received fourteen dozens of after-dinner coffee cups, and nary a tea cup. Another received ten silver trays, and nary a vegetable dish. Another bride received eight sugar tongs, but no incidental silver serving-pieces that would be so convenient for her. A bride whose apartment has the sleekest of modern furniture looks at the four over-decorated lamps with fussy shades, and wonders. A bride with a four-room apartment despairs as she contemplates the five clocks that were given her.

What's to be done? Nowadays most of us have no attics, that forgotten space where formerly unwanted wedding presents blushed unseen. And closet space these days is so priceless that we can't spare room in them to pack away articles that probably never will be used. The bride of taste, although deeply appreciating the sentiment of the relatives and friends who sent gifts, is devastated when she thinks of marring the perfect harmony of the decoration that she has planned so lovingly by gifts that are conspicuously out of place.

Many readers complain to me that they are "hurt" when a bride even considers exchanging the present they have sent. To me, this is an unfriendly and unwarranted point of view. Although the wedding gift was sent with a sincere desire to please, if it doesn't give pleasure to the bride, if it is one of many duplicates, if it does not fit in with her decorative scheme, the giver should be grateful at having the unwanted article exchanged for a needed one. With this point of view, the giver's sincere desire to please is then even better expressed in the article chosen by the bride. No discourtesy is intended, and it is unfriendly of the givers to interpret it as discourtesy or lack of sentiment.

With an understanding bow to the dilemma that most brides must face, many thoughtful people now send, with their presents, a note saying that the gift may be exchanged at So-and-So's store if the gift happens to be a duplicate or if it doesn't fit in with her decoration plans. This makes it easy for the bride, especially for the sensitive bride who hesitates to exchange presents for fear of hurting the feelings of the givers.

A special problem is the monogrammed gifts, if several of these are duplicates. Here again, with today's practical point of view, many thoughtful people have come to the aid of the perplexed bride. Exchange is made possible by sending silver and linen gifts unmarked. With the gift a note is sent saying that the gift may either be exchanged, in case it is a duplicate, or that arrangements have been made at So-and-So's shop to have the gift marked with the style of marking to the bride's choice.

However, there is one thing a bride must not do. She must never exchange presents given her by her own family or the bridegroom's family, unless they have voluntarily given her permission to do so.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Teacher Wisely Discourages Girlish "Crush" Of Pupil

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"The person who has had the greatest influence on my life is my English teacher, Miss Nettie W. While she has never paid any more attention to me than she has to other girls in her class, I adore her.

"When school closed I took my graduation money and sent her a gift, a lovely silver bowl. But she returned it to me, saying she was glad that I had enjoyed her classes but she could not take so valuable a present from a pupil.

"Every time I call her up I get the same word from her family, that she is either out or busy. Why won't she see me? I think of her constantly and am not interested in any of the picnics or parties that my graduating class has organized since graduation. Some of the girls laugh at me in my affection for 'Dear Teacher.' Mother has asked me to write you about it.

"Stella".

The trouble with you, my dear Stella, is that you seem to be suffering from a "crush" on your teacher. Lots of girls have that until "Mr. Right" comes along. Such girls are probably of the type that passes up parties and boys to make good grades in school. In this very susceptible stage of emotional development, they hang their affections on "Dear Teacher."

Evidently Miss Nettie knows all about "crushes" and doesn't wish to encourage you in wasting your affections on her. Believe me, that sort of devotion is not the most sensible thing in which a young girl may indulge. Go out with the rest of the group that were graduated in your class. Go to their parties, their picnics, cook hot dogs in the open.

Lots of girls have had "crushes" on their Miss Netties, Miss Marys, or Miss Jones and they've got over these just as soon as the right sort of boy tells them how lovely are their eyes, or that they're good sports, or that their bathing suits are becoming. Listen to these compliments, my dear, and stop worrying over your teacher.

You don't tell me how you live, whether in an apartment or a home with a backyard. If you happen to have a backyard bigger than a pocket handkerchief, get a few fireproof bricks and stones and build an open-air fireplace. You will have to have fireproof brick for the chimney lining, otherwise any old brick will do. Give a few parties to your classmates. Any girl can be popular if she invites her friends in for one of these cooked-in-the-open suppers. At the moment I'm engaged in building one myself, which may account for my enthusiasm.

If your plans for hospitality go no farther than a flat, pack a basket with a few picnic accessories, get up a party of your classmates and go to a public park where these open-air fireplaces abound. And, stop worrying over "Dear Teacher."

Women's Institutes And Red Cross

The splendid work and organizing capacity of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario, is being demonstrated again in their latest venture in which Women's Institutes are undertaking the making of jam for the use of the Canadian troops in hospitals or overseas and for evacuated children and adults.

The Ontario Division of the Red Cross is co-operating by supplying 4-lb friction top cans, packing cases and labels. These cans have been received by the Belleville branch of the Red Cross and may be obtained from Mrs. Stuart Lazier, 75 Victoria Avenue.

When School's Out We Need a Nerve-Saver

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Most families will be at home all summer. Since school let out the mother may have been under increased nervous strain because the children are home all day and every day. In many homes there are more irritations during vacation, more quarreling among the children, more hours of noise and commotion.

Also there may be more strain on the nerves of the children; more strain on the pre-school child who used to be left at home while his older brother or sister went to school; even more strain on the child who had been going to school. For many, if not for most children, the regularity of going to school and the variety of the day's experience afford good emotional outlets.

On the other hand, release from school can have a very relaxing effect on the school child in the well-ordered home.

Plan Summer Program

Let me urge you, my fellow parent, to work out a program with the children and for the children during the summer. Let your children share in arriving at this program. Then they will be the more ready to abide by it. Besides, that family atmosphere is most wholesome in which all members feel they have a part.

Of course, human nature is such that children won't always, not even generally, choose to assign themselves regular jobs which mean hard work and self-denials. Often the parents will have to assign these responsibilities and employ some coercion to guarantee their fulfillment. No use to fool ourselves that all these jobs can be made atractive by clever motivation; just see that they are done. Even then, the assignment should appear to the child more just and reasonable if he felt free to talk with his parents beforehand about its nature and purpose.

Each child over five or six should have some definite daily responsibilities during the summer, which he can't escape, no matter how many maids there are. In the average home (which has no maid) the child or children should have a definite share in the regular cares of the house. If there are two or more children over ten or twelve (boys or girls), much of the house work can be done by these children, the mother supervising calmly and having abundant time for relaxation and recreation.

Get Done Early

Let the main house chores be done right after breakfast, with opportunity, perhaps, for a free hour or so in the morning and two or three free hours in the afternoon. A quiet period of about two hours early in the afternoon is very desirable. A good time then to sleep, loll or read. I wish children would read more during the summer, and that more of them and their parents would go to the public library.

Some of the school-age children should take music lessons and do regular practice during the summer.

BABY'S UPSET STOMACH QUICKLY CORRECTED

BABY'S little "Tummy" is often easily upset. It is easily righted again, too, if you know just how to do it. Let Mrs. M. S. Alway, of London, Ont., tell you: "Baby's Own Tablets are a great help at the first sign of upset stomach, during teething time or when a cold is coming on. They work quickly yet gently to carry away poisons and promote quiet sleep. Walking floors at night is unknown in our home."

And Mrs. W. R. Sharp says: "I nursed my baby shortly after being alarmed over a motor accident and that upset her almost to the point of convulsions. I gave her Baby's Own Tablets and she soon stopped crying—went to sleep and when she awakened was her own good self again."

Equally effective for diarrhoea, colic, teething troubles, simple croup, constipation and simple fever. Sweet-tasting, easy to take, prompt in their action yet harmless. Analyst's certificate in every box. Buy a box today for sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if not satisfied.

Rules Of Good Sportsmanship

The Dionne Quintuplets have gotten together, and drawn up a set of rules for their conduct in the nursery. They did it of their own free will, although I must admit the rules they have set up, are basically what we have been trying to teach the five of them for the last six years. I must also say that their rules are a source of great satisfaction to us all for it shows that the children have been learning the lessons we have sought to teach.

The idea of children six years old having the wisdom to adopt conduct rules for themselves may sound strange to some of you. But we have always encouraged the Quins to think for themselves. Children would do a great deal more "self-policing" if parents or elders encouraged them to think and to develop self-reliance. Too many parents never give their young children a chance to think.

There are eight rules in Quins' "code". The children chose them after careful discussion, with frequent appeals to me and the nurses. Some of them overlap naturally, for the Quins aren't very precise in their use of language yet. Nevertheless their intent is clear, and I wish a lot of grownups had as much consciousness of social rights.

The first rule chosen was "Always share things", I believe it was Marie, gentle little Marie, who first picked this one. That one rule, by itself, summaries most of the other rules. The second rule is "Politeness all the time". (I am trying, as best I can, to follow the Quins' own wording in French). This was Cecile's contribution to the communal set of laws, I would have known this, I think, even if Nurse Dubeau hadn't told me. I suppose you can say that these first two rules are almost synonymous. Still, I think there is room in your code of ethics and mine, as well as the Quins', for both of these. They don't contradict each other.

I'm not sure which of the five youngsters sponsored the third rule: "Never ask to do a message just because another Quin has a message to do," but I suspect it was Emilie who proposed it. It sounds like her.

If you haven't been following the stories of the Quins, you might be a bit puzzled by this. The children love to help around the nursery. They have been taught that work—helping—is the thing. For example, drying the dishes is considered a big treat by the Quins. Consequently, when one of the five is chosen to do a message, the others may feel disappointed. This rule is intended apparently, to take care of this situation.

I shall have more to tell you about the Quins' rules tomorrow.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with Puds Simkins just walking along, and Puds said, G, a glove.

Meaning a brown one laying on the payment by itself, and I quick picked it up, saying, G, somebody must of lost this, and Puds said. Sure, all we have to do is wait right here with it till they come back looking for it and they'll proberly give us a reward for finding it. I'm the one saw it, he said.

And I'm the one picked it up, I said.

Making us equal pardners, and we kept on waiting there for somebody to come passed looking as if they had lost one glove, only nobody did, nobody even having a generel worried expression, and I said, Well heck, you cant tell just by appearances, we better ask people, only we better jus ask them if they lost anything without mentioning what we found, because if we say it was a glove somebody's libel to say yes and we'd have to give it to them even without a reward even if it wasn't theirs. Ask this man, I said.

Meaning a man in a check suit. Puds saying to him, Did you lose something, mister? and the man saying, Sure, I lost a hundred and 50 bucks on a bum tip on the market, do you think you can do anything about it?

And he kept on going without waiting for an answer, wich there wasn't any anyways, and Puds said, That's a bum sistem, maybe we better mention it's a glove and trust people. You ask this lady, he said.

Being a big lady with a little hat, and I held out the glove at her, saying, Is this yours, lady? and she said, What, that terrible derty thing?

Meaning certainly not, and me and Puds looked at it closer and noticed it had 3 holes in it and decided somebody proberly must of thrown it away.

London, July 10 (CP)— Vernon Bartlett, Independent Member of Parliament and political commentator for the News Chronicle, wrote today that it appeared probable Hitler would launch a new "peace offensive" before attempting to storm this island fortress.

Referring to the activity of the Royal Air Force's coastal patrols in reconnoitering the coasts of Norway, Belgium, The Netherlands and France, Bartlett said: "They have not, I believe, reported much that is unusual in the way of troop or transport concentrations."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c

Five Hurlers of Nationals Dole Out But Three Hits in Defeating Americans by 4-0

Crowning Blow for Winners Came in First When Max West Punched Three-Run Homer in Bleachers

FINE STRATEGY

Fourth Run of Contest Scored Off Big Bob Feller in the Eighth Frame

(By Harold Claassen, Associated Press Writer)

St. Louis, July 10—(AP) — At noon it was a hunch—nothing more—that caused Manager Bill McKechnie to insert Max West of Boston in the starting line-up of the National circuit in the annual major league all-star baseball game.

Thirteen minutes after the contest was under way, it was a brilliant piece of strategy as West deposited a three-run homer in the right field bleachers and started his mates toward a 4-0 triumph over the American League.

McKechnie's belief that Mel Ott of the New York Giants, listed to start in right field until shortly before game time yesterday, would be of more value in the late innings when that garden would be the sun field prompted the deacon to make the change.

Steadier in Sun

"It was my hunch that Ott, who is older and more experienced, would be a bit steadier in the sun and that is the only reason for the change," McKechnie said.

West's knock-out punch before a man was out in the first combined with an assortment of all star pitching produced the third National League victory and the first shut-out of the competition.

Five hurlers the Nationals summoned to the mound—Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters of the Reds, Whit Wyatt of Brooklyn, Larry French of the Cubs and Carl Hubbell of the Giants—doled out but three hits.

Appling's double off Derringer in the second brought about West's removal. The Boston clouter tried to make a leaping catch and slammed into the concrete retaining wall. He suffered a bruised hip but is expected to play again Thursday when action is resumed in the big leagues after a three-day layoff.

Herman Got Three Hits

After McKechnie pulled his first team the "seconds" scored the fourth run off Cleveland's great Bob Feller in the eighth but they needed an error by catcher Rollie Hemsley to chase the tally across.

Aside from Appling's robust clouting the losers' chief contribution to the entertainment of the 32,373 fans was the fielding of Joe Gordon, Yank middle sacker.

JERSEY CITY'S PRESENT SLUMP DUE TO HITTING

Little Giants Ten Games Off the Pace and at First of Season Picked to Repeat

LEAFS DEFEATED

Montreal Scores Fifth Straight Win at Expense of Canadian Rivals

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City Giants, who started out this season looking like a good bet to repeat as International League champions, find themselves 10 games off the pace today and in dire need of a few victories to keep in the first division.

The little Giants have won only half a dozen games in their last 25 starts and are tied with Montreal for third place, one game ahead of the fifth place Baltimore Orioles.

Weakness at the plate seems to be the main cause for Jersey City's present slump, although the pitching lately has left much to be desired. Only one regular player, first baseman Jimmy Vernon, is batting above the .300 mark.

Yesterday the Little Giants dropped their sixth straight game, 3-2, to give Syracuse a clean sweep of their four-game series. The Chiefs got to Roy Henshaw, Jersey starter for nine hits and all three runs in the first seven innings, Less Hinckle 30-year old Rookie went the distance for the Chiefs.

Newark Bears took advantage of Jersey City's loss by turning back Baltimore 6-4 to widen the breach between themselves and the skidding Jerseyites and move nearer to the league leading Rochester Red Wings, who lost 4-0 to Buffalo Bisons.

Bisons made it four straight over the League Leaders behind the eight-hit pitching of Floyd Giebell, who went the route to chalk up his sixth victory.

Sports Roundup

New York, July 15.—(AP)—Patty Berg, who was to have officially turned pro yesterday, has postponed the ceremony until tomorrow or Friday . . . From the coast comes word Jack Dempsey has sold his Barbara Hotel at Los Angeles at a terrific loss—which may be the tip off why Jack finds it necessary to tour the provinces consorting with wrestlers . . . . highest paid manager in the minors is Jack Lelivelt of Seattle—15,000 potatoes per.

Jimmy Dykes is so sore at some of his White Sox he forbade the players to leave town during the three-day all-star game respite . . . Olivia de Havilland, the film star has placed herself under the wings of Big Olin Dutra on the coast and told him to get her ready for the tournament . . . The Dodgers, who are playing the Owl circuit this week, had to take along four Brooklyn semi-pro to catch up the slack caused by the All-star game and hospital list . . .Dave Castilloux, the Canadian Lightweight King, openly charges Sammy Angott is ducking him and Baby Arizmendi is singing a similiar hymn of hate.

Ken Keltner who (a) asked for the unemployment insurance and (b) was one of the Cleveland cry babies, is getting it going and coming these days. The White Sox bore down so hard in a doubleheader Keltner went to bat nine times and didn't get a foul. Jimmy Dykes yelled: "There's only one thing worse than you, Keltner, and that's the war". . . . .

Don McNeill, the tennis star, is all dressed up with no place to go . . . recently he completed four years of study for the foreign diplomatic service at Kenyon College. . . . Now he's thinking of learning another trade, the demand for ambassadors being what it is.

The National League gives Cronin thanks for playing all those bombless Yanks.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

The proudest and happiest boy in Canada last night and no doubt his feelings continued today following a sleepless night, was 13-year-old Donald McGowan of Stirling. Donald won the fifth annual Canadian Soap Box Derby race on Derby Hill before some 5,000 patrons, who gave him as enthusiastic a reception as though he had been a native son of Belleville. It was the first time in five years that a Belleville boy had failed to cop the top honors and win that coveted trip to Akron, Ohio, and a shot at the International Soap Box Derby title. When young McGowan won, it proved the true Canadian spirit of sportsmanship, that is sometimes noticeably lacking even in larger events of a similar type. However, when Don flashed under the finishing wire a winner and was given such a warm reception, the spirit of the Kinsmen Club's Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby should have been instilled and imbued in the most skeptical.

Actually Ernie Young's trial run against time in his successful attempt to shatter the Canadian Soap Box Derby record was what we awaited, although it was a treat to witness the expression of appreciation upon Don McGowan's face as he flashed over the finishing line a winner. However, Young, who was not eligible to race last night after winning in 1939, accomplished exactly what he set out to do, break the Canadian Soap Box Derby track record, which he himself had established in 1939, when he drove the Derby Hill course in 32 3-5 seconds. In his "Zip 2nd" Ernie flashed over the finishing line in 31 3-5 seconds, clipping one full second off his 1939 record to establish a new course record. Incidentally Traffic Officer Doug Ellis paced Ernie down the course and that officer later informed us that he clocked Ernie at exactly 33 miles per hour, which is no mean effort in a motorless vehicle. However in pulling his machine to a stop, Ernie braked his "kid kar" so abruptly that the right front tire was torn completely off the wheel.

Do you remember when Leather-lunged Joe Humphreys, dean of sports announcers, died at his Fairhaven, N.J. home four years ago today, at 63. Humphreys introduced from the ring most of the world's greatest fighters during his 40 years as an announcer.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees denounced in no uncertain terms the "rebellion" of a group of Cleveland players against their pilot, Oscar Vitt. "The owners of the Indians should have backed up Vitt with a new two-year contract," said Marse Joe. "Do you know what's wrong? The parents of the United States obey their children. In that way, we breed a race which does the sort of thing these Cleveland men did to Vitt."

Apparently "Stub" Barrett's K-Nines in the Ladies' Softball loop thrive on work, because last night they took on 'Lum' Carson's Vikings and downed them 21 to 16 and turned around and beat Barney Smith's Corbin lassies 20 to 5 to win a doubleheader and thus hop right up into second place in the league standing. It was the Vikings' first reverse in four starts and the K-Nines also handed Corbins their worst reverse of the season. A nine run rally gave the Barrett-led nine a margin needed to win over the fast-moving Vikings. Mary Lickfold hurled for K-Nines and Rita Rabbie for Vikings. N. Corneal had two homers for the winners and Marg Orr one in a game, that saw many extra base hits clouted by both teams. The night cap affair proved surprising when the K-Nines turned on the hard-hitting Corbins to soundly trounce them 20 to 5. Marg Orr blasted two circuit blows, while Norma Clarke broke out in a hitting rash to count four safeties. Corbins missed the services of Sylvia Reddick, however.

K-NINES ADVANCE TO SECOND PLACE BY DOUBLE WIN

Defeat Vikings in First Game 21-16 and Then Defeat Corbins 20-5

HEAVY HITTING

Mary Lickfold and Marge Orr Are Winning Hurlers in Evening's Contests

Winning both ends of a double-header played at the Armouries last evening Leo Barrett's K-Nines advanced to second place in the Ladies City Mercantile Softball League. The K-Nines emerged winners over the league-leading Vikings by a 21 to 16 score in the opening game and continued in their winning ways to route the Corbin "lockmakers" 20 to 5 in the nightcap affair. Both games were of the seven inning nature.

A nine run splurge in the fifth inning of the initial contest cinched the game for the Barrett-led outfit against the Vikings, while the hitting of Marg Orr and Wilma Clarke and N. Corneal and H. Richardson resulted in a 20 to 5 win over the Corbin nine the worst set-back experienced this season by Barney Smith's "lockmakers".

Mary Lickfold hurled the opener for the dual-winning nine in the opened, while Miss Orr pitched the second game. Rita Rabbie hurled for the Vikings and Miss Reid for Corbins.

Marg Orr of the K-Nine hit two circuit blows in second place and one in the first. H. Richardson and Betty Marsh also clouted four base blows. The Big-Z nine and Mets met Thursday. By winning both ends of a doubleheader last night, the K-Nines advanced into a tie with the Big-Z team for second place, the Viking nine leading the parade.

STEAMER IN DISTRESS

Dakodate, Japan, July 10—(AP)—The Japanese naval radio intercepted an SOS today from the steamer Antonia, in distress off the northeast coast of the Philippine Islands.

The stricken vessel was believed to be the 502-ton Philippine steamer Antonia owned by Aboitiz and Co., of Cebu, P.I.

Lloyd's register of shipping also lists the 13,867-ton Cunard White Star liner Antonia and a 3,357-ton Dutch oil tanker of the same name.

It was merely a case of National League pitching being too good for the American League slugsmiths in the eighth annual majojr league "All-Star" game at St. Louis yesterday. Max West, of the Boston Bees, put the senior league ballsters well out in front with a first-inning home run with two aboard. Bill McKechnie's National leaguers welcomed Red Ruffing's opening-inning slants with a barrage of hits and put the game on ice as Derringer, Walters, Wyatt, French and Hubbell literally halted the American League sluggers, leaving them standing in amasement in the batter's box. The National League hurlers allowed only three hits, Luke Appling getting two and Buck Newsom one.

SPORT SPICE—Manager Gerald Barriage informs us that the score was tied between Uptowns and Corbys on Monday night when Conn Harris took over the pitching duties, so therefore Harris gets the credit of the win and not Carson. . . . Shakespeare—"Might better chew tobacco than chew the rag and we've still got your valentine, chum." . . . Bill McKechnie was more than elated with the efforts of his National Leaguers yesterday, especially his mound corps. . . . The next big baseball event is the world series, but there's a pay-off in that, which might make some difference when the batters step up to the plate and see the $ sign dangling before their eyes. . . . The "All-Star" series now stands five games for the American League and three for the National. . . . It was a big night in Stirling last night, the entire populace turning out to welcome home Soap Box Derby champion Don McGowan. . . . A parade and all that goes to a newly-crowned champion were the order of the night. . . . After all a Canadian championship doesn't come to a village the size of Stirling too often.

You Can be Very Sure THAT THE SUIT you buy from this complete summer selection is perfectly styled for comfort and good looks.

. . . we know you will get plenty of wear from it this season and many seasons to come.

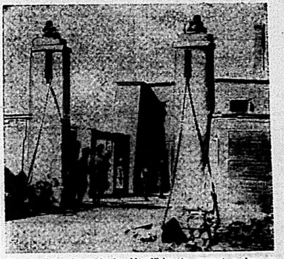
MOATED FORT ABANDONED TO ITALIANS



Here is the gateway to the old moated fort of Kassala in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, from which British forces retired after inflicting heavy losses on Italian troops. Reports indicate that the British command decided that strategic importance of the post was not sufficient to warrant a sharp engagement with the enemy. The fort was built by the Italians and abandoned by them after defeat in the Italo-Ethiopian war in 1896. It was taken by the British when Lord Kitchener conquered the Soudan.

RIVALS FOR MEXICAN PRESIDENCY

Gen. Almazon

Gen. Camacho

Up to 100 persons were slain and thousands were injured in rioting which broke out as the republic of Mexico went to the polls to elect a successor to retiring President Lazaro Cardenas. Two main contestants for the presidency are Gen. Manuel Avilo Camacho and Gen. Juan Andreu Almazon, and bothcandidate were expected to claim large majorities immediately. Official count will not be made for some days and will not be announced until congress meets on Sept. 1. Observers predict months of unrest and bloodshed, with revolution a possibility, irrespective of which candidate is officially elected.

AT THE BELLE

"Brother Orchid"

Edward G. Robinson is back in action as the cinema's classiest killer in "Brother Orchid," Warner Bros. picture which is now on the Belle Theatre screen. Featured with him is blonde Ann Sothern, with whom he has a slight case of merger.

"Brother Orchid," a tale of hysterical homicide, tells the story of "little John" Sarto, who gets mad at his mob when they rub out a party without even sending him a memo on it. So he quits the rackets and goes gunning for culture with murderously mirthful results.

His search for culture leads him to Europe. A sucker for anything that smacks of "class," he soon drops his bankroll buying such gold bricks as a glass doorknob, palmed off on him as the world's largest diamond, a sleek black racehorse that turns white when it starts to rain, and a sixteenth century bed made in Grand Rapids. Fleeced of his last dollar, he returns to the States to recoup his fortune.

The mob, instead of welcoming him home, take him for a ride. He manages to escape with his life and find a new mode of living which has "angles" all its own.

"Pop Always Pays."

How a young man, faced with the necessity of saving a thousand dollars before he can marry the girl he loves, goes to extreme measures to raise the money, makes the hilarious basis of "Pop Always Pays," RKO Radio's newest comedy feature announced as the second feature attraction.

Leon Errol heads the cast as a fuss-budget father who imposes the thousand dollar requirement on his would-be-son-in-law, whom he considers a spend thrift. Not dreaming that the boy can raise the required sum, the father promises to equal the amount as a proof of his generosity.

But through the connivance of the girl and the girl's mother, the boy soon gets close to his goal—whereupon the father's troubles begin when he in turn tries to raise a thousand.

Adele Pearce and Dennis O'Keefe have the romantic roles in the new offering. The Belle News of the Hour will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Pioneers of the West"

The story deals with the efforts of the pioneers to make a home for themselves in the west in spite of marauding Indians and scheming politicians who seek to wrest from them the homes they have established at great cost.

Bob Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo were never better and their hard-riding, fast-shooting action roles come to their assistance in a spectacular manner.

Beatrice Roberts, a lovely and charming leading lady, effectively portrays the role of "Anna, the frontiersman's daughter. Noah Beery is outstanding as Judge Platt, unscrupulous political leader.

And for your added enjoyment, a mystery so bewildering that it has to be solved twice is the situation facing the Roving Reporters, Michael Whalen and Chick Chandler, in their latest escapade, "While New York Sleeps," plus the third in the series of Canada Carries On the Home Front, showing Canadian women in offices, radio stations, machine shops, air fields and on farms due to open next at the Capitol.

AT THE McCARTHY

"You're Not So Tough"

"The more the merrier" is the way Nan Grey regards her picture making.

In less than a year Nan appeared in "The Tower of London", "The Invisible Man Returns", "The House of the Seven Gables", "Sandy is a Lady" and her latest, Universal's "You're not So Tough", coming next to the McCarthy Theatre.

"You can't get experience between pictures", Nan continues. "A screen player, like any one else, learns by doing. A large variety of roles is necessary to furnish the experience which brings knowledge and polish to an actress".

Nan played a princess in "The Tower of London", a young English girl in "The Invisible Man Returns" a Colonial Miss in "The House of the Seven Gables", and a young wife and mother in "Sandy is a Lady". In "You're Not So Tough", which features the Dead End Kids and Little Tough Guys, she will be seen as an "Okie" girl following California's harvest seasons.

Nan entered pictures as a result of visiting California on a vacation. Friends arranged a screen test for her and she was immediately successful in getting a contract.

She was born in Houston, Texas, July 25, 1920, where her father is an official in a motion picture operators organization. She has blue eyes, natural blonde hair, weighs 115 pounds and stands 5 feet 5 inches.

As an added comedy hit on the same program with "You're Not so Tough" the three stooges, America's three funniest comedians will be shown in the comedy "Three Sappy People" which is rated the best in which these three laugh-getters have yet appeared.

Bund Head Questioned

Wilhelm Zunze, leader of the German-American Bund in the United States during the absence of Fritz Kuhn, who is serving a jail term, is shown before a Senate judiciary committee in Washington which questioned him in connection with legislation requiring registration of foreign organizations with the U.S. state department.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 3.

"Wake up, Benjamin my beloved," Joyce said, putting down the breakfast tray, "Chester telephoned and he's stopping for you at noon. Where're you going?"

"Don't burst in on me with bad news like that!" he said affectionately. "Here, wait a minute, kid!"

He leaped from bed, disappeared into the bathroom, returned after a moment with his wet hair combed and his cheeks cold and fresh from icy water. Joyce had straightened his bed, set his tray conveniently. Re-established, with his back against the pillows, he first took a skimming look at the headlines of the sports pages, flung the paper aside with a satisfied ejaculation and beamed at his sister. "Well, kid, how's everything?"

"Everything's fine. But we think Lissy's wedding's off."

"Oh, everything. You weren't home until late last night or you would have heard some of it. Archie has to go to Scotland. His father came to see dad and he wanted him to put up some money for his business. Alexander Ross' Sons, you know. The grandfather started it. It's spices and tea and all that. Well, anyway dad said he couldn't. He's sort of hard up just now, mother says. So Mr. Ross seemed sort of worried and he said that then Archie might have to go to Scotland for the money; he has a brother there. He said there was a sort of understanding that Archie and one of his cousins would marry, so now he's going!" Joyce finished in some confusion.

But Ben understood. His face darkened.

"Going over to marry her?"

"Well, he doesn't say so. But our wedding will have to be put off."

"He said so?"

"I'll tell you. Yesterday he and dad came out here and talked to mother. Mr. Ross said that if his son was to get this advance from his uncle it would be better to have him go alone; that is, not to take Lissy along, and that they had better say in the papers that because of family matters in Scotland the wedding had been postponed."

"What'd mother say?"

"What could she say?"

Ben reflected.

"Ha!" he said in dissatisfaction. "It might be a good idea to go and punch his face," he suggested.

"I'd like to strangle him," Joyce said simply.

"Who told Lissy?"

"Dad had her come downstairs. They said she was wonderful, that she talked right back to old Ross and said that certainly the wedding could be postponed."

"But afterward," Joyce resumed her narrative, "poor Liss just went crazy. Oh, we had a nice time here last night! Dad said he couldn't stand it, and he went out for a walk, and Liss just screamed. Dodo wasn't there, but mother and I quieted Liss down the best we could. She said that our family was hoodooed, and that she never could hold her head up again. She went over to meet Annette Overman at the library, and they're going to Mill Valley. I'm glad you're home! We had an awful time."

"Well, that's the catch; I'm not really home," Ben said reluctantly. "A lot of us are going down to Santa Barbara tonight—that is, if I can catch the old man and get a little ready cash. I'm overdrawn, darn it! Dad home?"

"No. He was here about an hour ago; he and mother were taking in the dining-room. Dodo's with the Pitmans in Piedmont. She didn't want to go much; but Elinor kept telephoning."

"I'll get dressed and go see mother. Darn it, I wish I hadn't made the date!" Ben said. Joyce left the tray at his bedside and wandered to her mother's room.

Mrs. Ballard was capably telephoning the market.

"Three split broilers, please, and the soup meat. How is the asparagus? Two for a quarter? Better send me six pounds."

She presently set back the instrument and turned to Joyce. "See Ben?"

"Yes, I was telling him."

"It's a dreadful thing and I declare that in the night—I couldn't sleep, I lay awake practically all night listening to dad snoring, and worrying!—in the night it seemed to me almost like a death," Mrs. Ballard said. "But I think now—I was just telling Lissy that the only thing to do is to meet it sensibly, and go right straight ahead. Archie'll be back in June, and we'll have a lovely June wedding. It's unfortunate—no question of that—but it's just one of those things."

"Liss didn't actually break her engagement, then?"

"No. You knew Archie was here for about ten minutes this morning? Well, they agreed that they must wait until he comes back, and then go ahead quietly, without any publicity—"

"I thought Liss said it was all over?"

"Well, she did; she gave him back his ring and said that she never wanted to see him again, but she said it quietly — not angrily, you know. And Archie said—and I must say he behaved with great dignity—that when he came back he would come and see her right away and that he regretted it as much as she did."

"Well, then, is she engaged or isn't she, mother?"

"Why, certainly," Mrs. Ballard began brightly and stopped. "I don't thing she is really," she said doubtfully. "But I think they're in love with each other, and that it's just one of those things."

"What does dad think?"

"He was late this morning for the first time since I can remember, and had breakfast at—it must have been ten. He said he didn't know his own children, much less other men's children." Mrs. Ballard recalled with a mirthless anxious little laugh. "He said he didn't know what it was all about! I made one practical suggestion; it just came to me that the wise thing to do would be for dad to find some man who would put twenty-five thousand into the Ross business, and go right through with the wedding on the original plan. It isn't ideal, but after all Archie isn't his tightfister old Scotch father! Lissy's marrying Archie, not his father, and we have to be sensible in this world. I know dad's worried about money, but these bad times come and then they're better again. We could catch Archie at Vancouver—"

"Oh, has he started?"

"Yes. Some cousin or some one has an interest in a Canadian railway, and they get rates, something like that. He started this morning."

"Nice mess!" Joyce commented.

"It's terrible. I'm going to tell people that Archie's grandfather is very ill and he had to rush over to see him. I mean, you have to tell people something. And if we can possibly manage it, if he comes back in late May or June and they don't settle it, I'm going to try to send Lissy to Paris for a year. She could keep her music and get her French perfectly; I've always hoped to do it. Is Ben here for lunch?"

"No; he's going to Santa Barbara. They're calling for him at twelve."

"I'll go in and have a little talk with him before he goes. Then I may go to see Cousin Laura."

"Is she awfully rich, mother?"

"Well, she has a good deal. But from what she says it's in annuities and all tied up. I might broach Lissy's affair, but you know how cranky she is. She's never done anything for any one," Mrs. Ballard said with a sigh. "It makes her terribly nervous to have you even suggest it. However, I may sound her."

x x x

It was three days later that all six Ballards gathered in the library. Sally Ballard, fluttering about, pale and anxious, had made a special point of getting them together; it was an incredibly hard thing to do. A telegram had brought Ben from Stanford, surprised and puzzled; some little feeling had had to be displayed to hold Dodo, who had plans for going downtown.

"Nothing important, just shopping," she had said to her mother. "But I'm sure it's more interesting than dad's business talk; you know I don't understand business, mother!"

Joyce had been reluctant to get up. She had been asked by Margaret's loathsome brother Leo to a dance the night before. She had gone because Paul might be there, but he had not been there and the whole evening had been a failure. Joyce, plunging into bed at three o'clock, had pinned a notice on her door: "No breakfast; don't wake me until noon! ! !"

It was therefore disconcerting to find her mother gently shaking her at nine and to hear her mother say that daddy wanted to see them all in the library at ten. It was business; even Ben was coming up from college for it.

"What sort of business, mother? Why am I in it?"

"He wants to talk things over with us all, darling," Sarah Ballard had answered tremulously. "It's about possibly selling the plant . . ."

"Selling the Pacific Laboratories?"

"I don't know, dear. I know he expects to make some changes. And Joyce," her mother had added, "don't worry if he sounds a little—a little extreme. I mean, whatever we have to do I'm sure we can do it—nicely, without letting people know."

When all the others in various moods politely concealed boredom, impatience, curiosity, were ready and waiting, it was hard to get Felicity to come downstanrs. Almost without movement, since her return from Mill Valley, Lissy had lain on her bed, staring blankly at the wall. She had not wanted to eat nor to dress; above all she had not wanted any one to talk to her. Joyce had to go upstairs to tell her that dad had said that he simply would not begin until she came down.

"Oh, I'll come. It doesn't make any difference, anyway!" Lissy said finally in weary concession.

ILE DE FRANCE IS ONLY HELD

Vessel Still Flying French Flag Pending Instructions From British Admiralty

Singapore, July 10—(AP)—British naval authorities announced today that the French liner Ile de France has been detained here pending instructions from the British Admiralty.

The 43,450-ton vessel has not been seized, it was stated, and still flies the tricolor.

(The German wireless last night carried a Tokyo dispatch the Ile de France was flying the British flag and was anchored at Singapore.)

The liner arrived June 30 without an escort. She had a crew of 320 and it was believed she carried neither passengers nor cargo.

STIRLING

Cheesemaker Sets High Aggregate On Recent Shipment

Stirling, July 10—(Special)—A record for this district according to George Pollard, local dairy instructor, was recently set up by Thomas Hogle, Cheesemaker of Roslin Cheese Factory, who recently made a shipment of cheese with an aggregate score of 95 per cent. With approximately four years experience as a cheesemaker, Mr. Hogle has rated high in various competitions in the district fair displays. But his work in this particular shipment sets a record for the district. Score points are registered for finish, flavor, texture and his aggregate carried him one point higher than any previous record of this district according to Mr. Pollard, his instructor.

Such high rating is created by good workmanship on the part of the maker but it also requires cooperation of the patrons in cleanliness about the dairy farm and clean methods of transporting the milk. Good health milk of high grade, well cared for, is the most important aid to higher grade products from the factory. With good material to work with the cheesemaker can thoroughly apply his ability and gain such results as the above recorded percentage stated Mr. Pollard.

THIS IS PARIS NOW

France's capital is no more the gay city. The tramp of booted German feet takes the place of the laughter that was. Here is a typical street scene in Paris under German domination. Steel helmeted troopers are everywhere. A review of military might was in progress in the square in background (note band), and all passersby had to state their business and destination. The young girl is being questioned here before being allowed to pass through the square.

SENT REGRET NOTE

SIR ARTHUR LONGMORE

A letter expressing his personal regret at the death of Marshal Italo Balbo was dropped from a Royal Air Force plane at the express orders of Air Marshal Sir Arthur Longmore, R.A.F. commander in the Near East, following death of the Italian air ace in a crash. Sir Arthur was a personal friend of Balbo. The letter was addressed to the Italian commander-in-chief.

CHANNEL ISLAND EVACUEES REACH LONDON HAVEN

Evacuated from the Channel Islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney and Sark, which lie in the English Channel, just off the French coast, these refugees are shown as they arrived in London. While last of the islanders were being removed from the demilitarized islands, Nazi bombers raided the islands pouring bombs and machine-gun bullets down on the evacuees and killing scores. Shortly after the evacuation was completed German forces occupied the islands without opposition.

FASCIST TROOPS START THEIR ADVANCE ON FRENCH BORDER

This first photo showing Italian troop movements since Il Duce decided to grab his share of the spoils from conquered France, shows Italian troops and their supply wagons moving through rough country near the Italo-French border, presumably to launch their attack on France. They are probably the troops now occupying the strip of territory handed Italy in the armistice agreement—though the Italian troops were not able to win a foot of French soil in actual combat.

Ottawa, July 10.—(CP)—A caucus of Conservative members of parlament today considered the offer of Prime Minister Mackenzie King that Conservative leader Hanson and Hon. Grote Stirling (Cons. Yale) sit in with the War Committee of the Cabinet as associate members or that they meet the Prime Minister or Cabinet on regular occasions to receive confidential information.

Slight Drop in Butter Prices—Eggs Steady

Toronto, July 10—Ontario butter prices took another fractional drop in slow trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while eggs and cheese remained quietly steady.

First-grade Ontario creamery solids eased to 21 1-4c, with some sellers holding out for 21 1-2c. Buyers showed little interest in offerings, but there was not much pressure on brokers to sell. Volume of trading was light. Holders of Western butter asked 22 1-4c to 22 1-2c, but no sales were reported during the day.

Egg receipts were about equal to demand. The market maintained a steady tone, with Grade A pullets advancing 1c to 22c per dozen and Grade B eggs moving upward slightly to a range of 20c to 21c. A premium of 1-2c per dozen was obtainable on Government-inspected shipments.

Cheese exports from Canada during last week totalled 60,158 boxes, bringing total exports for the period from May 1 to July 6 to 206,578 boxes, compared with 194,084 boxes for the same period in 1939.

deepens the determination of the American people to meet them with wholly adequate defence.

"We have seen nation after nation, some of them weakened by treachery from within, succumb to the force of the aggressor. We see great nations still gallantly fighting against aggression, encouraged by high hope of ultimate victory.

"That we are opposed to war is known not only to every American, but to every government in the world. We will not use our arms in a war of aggression; we will not send our men to take part in European wars.

"We will repel aggression against the United States or the western hemisphere.'

B. N. A. AMENDED IN SINGLE DAY

London, July, 10.— (CP Cable)—Royal assent was given in the House of Lords today to a Bill amending the British North American Act to empower the Canadian Parliament to pass an Unemployment Insurance scheme.

Earlier the House of Commons had passed the measure through all stages in 16 minutes.

Sir William Jowitt, Solicitor General, explained to the House that to deal comprehensively with unemployment in Canada and with the problem of unemployment insurance on a nationwide basis, it was necessary to extend the powers of the Dominion parliament.

The statute of Westminster already had given the Dominion full sovereignty over its own affairs, said Sir William, so in passing the present legislation the British parliament was merely carrying out the wishes of the Canadian parliament.

ITALIANS LOSE

described as a battleship. No other hits were mentioned.

The Royal Navy, apparently, was seeking to catch the Italian force in a pocket as ships raced into the Mediterranean from Gibraltar at about the same time the other action was in progress. The Gibraltar force found no surface craft but shot down four Italian aircraft and damaged seven others.

Polish Vessels Escape to England.

The Admiralty announced that two Polish vessels escaped from French African ports and reached Britain despite French orders they were not to leave.

Vigilance of the Atlantic watch of the Royal Navy was seen in an announcement in Stockholm that four Swedish destroyers, purchased from Italy and headed for Sweden via the northern route, were seized by British vessels off the Faroe Islands and damaged before they were released. Thereafter British aircraft dropped bombs near them, apparently in the belief they were Italian. Britain offered to pay for the damage.

hide behind smoke screens, started in the heart of the sea near the sea routes that constitute Britain's "life line of Empire" and not far from Italian lines of communication with African colonies which cross roughly at right angles.

The battle began yesterday and early accounts produced streamer headlines in the morning press.

The Admiralty's brief account of the proceedings said Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean fleet, "made contact" east of Malta with an Italian force of two battleships, a number of 8-inch and 6-inch gun cruisers and some destroyers.

London, July 10—(CP)— British and Italian naval forces battled in the Mediterranean today off Italy's southern tip, finally in contact after Britain had repeatedly challenged the Italian fleet to show itself and fight.

The battle, apparently a running one with the Royal Navy in hot pursuit of Italian ships seeking to

Italians Duck Behind Smoke Screen

The Italians almost immediately ducked behind a smoke screen, but before they could do so one of the British vessels scored a direct hit on an Italian battleship "at extreme range." Thereafter the Royal Naval units were in pursuit and the outcome of the fight was not apparent.

Almost simultaneously a British force based at Gibraltar, western end of the Mediterranean "carried out a sweep toward the central Mediterranean," shooting down four Italian aircraft and damaging seven others, apparently in an attempt to pocket the Italian force. Three of the damaged Italian planes were not expected to reach their bases.

Italian Claims.

(The Italian Stefani news and propaganda agency claimed in Rome that a number of Italian bombing planes had made a 500-mile flight on Monday to attack British warships near the island of Crete, sinking a destroyer and damaging a battleship and an aircraft carrier. There was no British confirmation that any such action had taken place, although it was known that two British cruisers gunned and sank a French destroyer in that general vicinity).

Thus, after a month, the Royal Navy, freed of anxiety by the almost complete destruction or capture of the French fleet, appeared finally to have caught the Italians and forced a fight. The only previous report on a surface engagement between units of the two fleets was on June 27 when a British force sank the Italian destroyer Esparo.

The action which started during the night comes immediately after the decision of the French fleet at Alexandria to give up and disarm for the duration of the war and after other British successes taking the French fleet out of the war as a possible German-Italian weapon.

"Lifeline of Empire."

Britain's "lifeline of empire", connecting the British Isles with India and Australia and New Zealand, runs for 2,500 miles through the Mediterranean from Gibraltar to the Suez Canal. Much of Britain's world trade with countries outside the empire normally flows through this sea.

Italy's lines of her own new empire, almost vital in wartime, run directly across the British lines to Italian North Africa, and also in peace time through the Suez Canal to Italian East Africa.

Britain has been hoping for sea warfare with Italy. Prime Minister Churchill, after having stated previously that Britain was waiting for Italy to offer battle, told the House of Commons on July 4 that the Italian navy had "prudently" remained out of the way while Britain was disposing of the French fleet quartered on the Algerian coast near Oran last week.

While the British and Italian naval forces were battling in the Mediterranean, British and German air forces continued their daily exchange of blows. British Spitfires routed German Messerschmitts in a violent battle over the British Isles today.

British bombing planes attacked four light cruisers or destroyers anchored near the German naval base of Wilhelmshaven and set two ablaze with incendiary bombs.

Base At Kiel Bombed.

British bombers also attacked the German base at Kiel, starting fires on docks and slipways and attacked as far north as Stavanger, Norway, where seven planes were lost over the airdrome.

German bombers raiding England killed at least ten civilians in raids yesterday, many of them in the daylight. Nine Germa planes were shot down.

Returning to Britain after daylight today, Nazi bombers attacked a town in southwest England and were reported to have caused "considerable damage" and some casualties in a residential district.

London, July 10 (CP)—An Admiralty statement declared today that "as announced earlier an action which quickly developed into a chase of the Italian ships has taken place between British and Italian naval sources in the Mediterranean."

The Admiralty declared that the British forces suffered no casualties in the action, which occurred yesterday.

The statement declared that "in the absence of information to the contrary, it must be assumed that the (Italian) naval forces, at least one heavy unit of which suffered damage, have gained the shelter of their home defences."

"Further details of the engagement have not yet been received but, in view of the mendacious reports often circulated by the enemy, the Commander in Chief of the Mediterranean has signalled that there were no casualties among the ships engaged yesterday."

Rome, July 10—(AP)—The Italian high command communique today admitted the loss of a destroyer and a submarine and damage to another warship in naval action in the Mediterranean.

It said 29 Italian sailors were killed and 69 wounded aboard the damaged warship. (This apparently is the Italian battleship hit by a British shell before the Italian squadron engaged by British forces under Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham yesterday made good its escape under cover of a smoke screen.)

The Italian communique sought to give the impression that the events constituted an Italian victory. It asserted "it is believed" that a British warship—"probably a battleship"—was sunk and that a British destroyer was torpedoed and other warships damaged.

(The brief account given out in London indicated that no British ship was damaged, let alone sunk.)

W. O'S. N. C. O'S

These two moves featured a daylong discussion of the budget resolutions in the House of Commons yesterday. More important perhaps, from the standpoint of dollars alone were the steps taken to plug every loophole through which business might try to evade the burden of war taxation.

New Powers Created

New powers were created to enable the Minister of Finance to decide what constitute reasonable expenditures for advertising, salaries, repairs, operating and administrative costs of business—for the frankly declared purpose of preventing essential revenues being undermined by evasion.

Another loophole plugged was the "specious" transaction designed to avoid or minimize taxation. The Minister now will have authority to assess taxes on such transactions between persons or corporations in Canada, whereas formerly this power only covered such transactions between Canada and the United States.

After long debate, the House approved a resolution placing a five-per cent tax on interest or dividends paid to Canadians by Canadian debtors in foreign funds more than five per cent above Canadian funds. The Minister described this as a "windfall tax" on people who might benefit by electing to take such income in American funds.

Move is Approved

R. W. Mayhew (Lib. Victoria) considering those who accepted such benefit at this time at the expense of their fellow citizens, through municipal bond payments and so forth, were "cheating" in taking more than they contracted for.

"With the very much higher rate of taxes in force, and particularly in view of the heavy excess profits tax rate, the incentive to evade and avoid taxes is much greater than it would be under lighter taxation," Finance Minister Ilsley explained.

"The Minister is trying to get ahead of the high-powered lawyers who are always seeking to evade the act," commented Conservative Leader Hanson, himself a lawyer.

J. J. Kinley (Lib. Queen's-Lunenburg) approved the move. "This resolution deals with what is an open door of iniquity so far as certain corporations are concerned, because big business can, by allowing excessive salaries, expenses, repairs and other such outlays, present a statement which does not show very much profit.

Must Keep Door Shut

"This is a place where one must keep the door shut on business in this country if we are to get all the taxes to which the government is entitled in this critical time."

The Minister said only a small minority of business was trying to "get ahead of the government" but parliament had to legislate with regard to that minority.

While no objection was raised to officers in the armed services continuing to pay income tax, the government was urged to exempt all forces from paying and those serving in the air and on the sea are already exempt. This point will come up again when the House resumes consideration of the budget resolutions.

Promised Consideration

Strong exception was taken by Conservative critics, too, to the Government's refusal to allow dependent exemption for British guest children given homes independently of the official settlement scheme. Mr. Ilsley promised to consider the request but indicated little likelihood of further amendment.

Some criticsm came from Conservative ranks when the House adopted the resolution bringing all annuities, including Dominion and Provincial Government annuities for which contracts were made or extended since June 24, 1940, within the classifcation of taxable income.

Karl Homuth (Con. Waterloo South) said it was the same as taxing capital and would have the effect of discouraging the purchase of annuities. If a person put $30,000 in the savings bank and drew it out at the rate of $1,200 a year to maintain himself in his old age it would not be taxed, he said.

Difficulty Recognized

Difficulties of collecting the National Defence Tax were fully recognized by the taxation branch, Mr. Ilsley said when the committee took up the resolution covering that new impost.

G. J. Tustin (Con. Prince Edward-Lennox) questioned the minister on the status of the transient workers who are employed long hours during a few months of the war and earn at a rate that would bring them within the taxable class if they had steady work throughout the year.

There were thousands of such people whose aggregate incomes over the year would not reach the taxable limit but for a few weeks or months would be earning at a rate to justify the monthly deduction. This would mean a great volume of demands for refunds.

The Minister said he fully realized the difficulties ahead but said there seemed no alternative method.

150 PLANES

"When our planes returned," one witness said, "they did a sort of war dance in the sky, cutting figure eights in apparent high glee at having put eight of the enemy to flight and accounted for at least two of them."

Batteries Very Active

Anti-aircraft batteries were kept active elsewhere along the English coast as German raiders continued a series of attacks which have become daily routine.

One man was killed and many houses were damaged when German planes dropped five bombs on a town in southwest England this morning.

A German Dornier 17 bomber was shot down by British fighter planes off the east coast of England early this morning, the Air Ministry announced.

A total of nine German planes were shot down yesterday, the Air Ministry said, adding one to its previous total.

"This morning enemy aircraft dropped bombs on two towns on the Channel coast, near the Bristol Channel and on a Norfolk coast village.

"No military damage was caused in any area.

"Some houses were hit and there was a small number of casualties, including a few persons killed on the south coast".

ORIGINS, CONDUCT

bilities for origins and conduct of the war."

The resolution was voted just before French senators and deputies met in joint secret session to deliberate over a bill to "remake" France by giving Premier Marshal Henri Petain full powers.

A decision was made to provide for a stenographic report of the morning proceedings, which in reality was a secret meeting on the national assembly.

It was made clear however that the report would not be published until after an official meeting of the assembly in the afternoon—and then only if parliament votes to do so.

French newspapermen reported that Leon Blum, former Socialist premier, who variously had been reported a prisoner in Germany and a refugee in Great Britain, actually is in Vichy.

He was said to have been present in yesterday's chamber session with other Socialists.

In all meetings of the chamber and the senate here the usual seating arrangements by parties and tendencies has been abandoned.

Pierre Etienne Flandin, before the war the sworn political enemy of the Socialists, sat beside the Socialist deputy.

Pierre Laval, who dissolved the extreme rightist leagues while he was premier, now is usually seen with deputies who once were leaders of those leagues.

A New Constitution

National Assembly called for this afternoon at Vichy, is expected to give the government of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain the power to write a new constitution and create an authoritarian state.

The Petain government, in an outline to Parliament of its plans as published by Havas News Agency declared France "must understand and accept the necessity of a national revolution".

Petain is expected to emerge as a figurehead, with ruling powers vested in a triumvirate of General Maxime Weygand, Vice-Premier Pierre Laval and former Labor Minister Adrien Marquet.

The Petain outline said France now is "integrated into the continental system of production and trade" and that it therefore will be necessary "to put an end to present economic disorder by a rational organization for corporative institutions".

The declaration concluded:

One Aristocracy

"Only one aristocracy will be recognized that of intelligence; only one merit: work.

"The government will direct the country toward its new destiny, that of imperishable France, in order to continue the sacred work of ages. So our land, instead of allowing itself to be crushed by trial, will again by its efforts and in its traditions find the pride of our race."

In seeking the scapegoats for France's downfall political leaders expressed belief that General Maurice Gamelin, former commander-in-chief of Allied forces, whose fate and whereabouts still are uncertain, and former Premier Edouard Daladier and members of his Cabinet would be among those named.

Like Gamelin, their whereabouts are not known publicly. They were reported to have left France June 16 on the steamer Massilia, which was turned back from North Africa and later reported missing.

Almost all Extreme Rightists, Centrists and even a few Leftists who now are backing Petain agreed on one other scapegoat—Leon Blum, Socialist Premier of the People's Front Government of 1936.

Trenton

Trenton, July 10 (Special)—Trenton police today donned their summer uniforms in an effort to keep cool during this hot spell. The police are now wearing blue flannel shirts instead of the heavy jacket and special light weight summer hats.

Lorne Alyea today reported the theft of a black brief case and a box of merchandise from his automobile last night. The car was parked on the lot in front of Graham's Garage and the articles were left on the rear seat of the car.

Reports that two young men were seen around the Cotton Mills, between four and five o'clock this morning were investigated by the police. It was at first thought that the men were attempting to break into the building but later police found out that the two men were looking for a place to sleep. The men were allowed to continue to Belleville.

Four Teams Close

With four teams grouped closely together in the first three positions in the Trenton and District league, the game tonight between the Air Force and the Miller Bros. is expected to be one of the fastest games of the season. The Air Force team is leading the league by two games and a win tonight will practically cinch the leadership.

President Jesse Baker announced this morning that $9.00 will be given away tonight to the lucky winner of the draw at the softball game. The draw has been unclaimed for nearly two weeks now and the sum has amounted up to the largest it has ever been.

Recruiting to Start

Recruiting for the Headquarters Company of the Second Battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will start at the Trenton Armouries in the near future. The recruiting will be purely voluntary until registration is started at the end of August.

Capt. Grothier of Picton, will be in command of the Headquarters Company, stationed here. Training will be held two or three nights a week.

Dock Warehouse Has First-Class Refrigeration

Following the trend of many cheese factories throughout the Hastings district of installing modern refrigeration systems in their curing rooms to facilitate the curing of cheese under accepted temperatures and sanitary conditions, a further guarantee of this product reaching its ultimate consumer in first-class condition will be given when cheese is shipped through the now completely refrigerated Belleville Dock Warehouse. On Monday the system, which has been under installation for the past number of weeks, was turned on for a short time to test the equipment, and in the future cheese being shipped by water will be stored in the new refrigeration room while awaiting transportation.

The new refrigerated storeroom comprises approximately one-half of the storage space at the Dock Warehouse and has storage capacity of almost 27,000 cubic feet, with dimensions of 45 x 60 feet by 10 feet high. The room is built into the east end of the storage room with the sides, floor and ceiling being completely insulated with a modern cedar bark type insulation. Entrance is made by one wide insulated door at each end of the room, while a third door leading directly to the loading-platform will greatly facilitate the loading of boats.

The finishing touches are now being completed with painters giving the room a coat of special aluminum paint, applied with power sprayer, while the room is adequately lighted with eight high-power electric bulbs placed in the ceiling. The air-conditioning units, of which there are six in number, are of the most modern design, capable of reducing the temperature of the room to a degree best suited for the storage of cheese. The electric motor and mechanical parts of the refrigeration unit are placed outside the storage room and operate automatically.

Pope Pius Pleads For Less Vindictiveness

Vatican City, July 10 (AP).—Pope Pius XII pleaded today against allowing patriotism to degenerate into hate and vindictiveness in the present hour.

Addressing 1,600 pilgrims at his Wednesday audience, the Pontiff warned that "he who wishes to avenge himself will meet with Divine vengeance".

"In the present hour," he said, "there is danger lest the noble, legitimate sentiment of love for fatherland degenerate into vindictive passion. The good, faithful Christian faithfully and generously defending the fatherland still must abstain from hating."

Kept Ahead of Every Service Ernest Bevin Tells Luncheon

Hoped Labor Ministry Would Never Fall Back Into a Mere Glorified Conciliation Department

WORKERS PRAISED

London, July 10—(CP)— Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor and National Service, told a luncheon audience today that his Department has "kept ahead of every service" and moved "week by week in close conformity with demands made made upon us for man power by the services."

Mr. Bevin praised munitions workers for their response to his request that they work 84 hours weekly and "produce like hell."

He added that he hoped the Labor Ministery would "never fall back again into a mere glorified conciliation department" and declared that "if labor is to fulfill its mission, not merely in this struggle but in the world that has to be built up afterwards, then terms of equality will have to be established."

The Minister of Labor expressed hope that "nobody in any conversation will ever use the phrase 'if wewin ,"and added that that "is the best fifth column propaganda you can indulge in."

Dealing with the call for manpower when the British Expeditionary Force was evacuated from Dunkerque, Mr. Bevin said "we were notified on the Saturday morning that so many thousands of men were wanted for home defence and in 24 hours every man and his equipment was supplied for the purpose of developing home defence throughout the country."

He announced an appeal soon will be made to "married women, middle-class women and women who never have been in a factory" —to work a couple of days, giving rest to the regular workers.

Knows There is a Task Ahead

The Minister of Labor until May General Secretary of the Transport Workers Union, said "A good deal of criticism is going on as to the alleged weaknesses" of the Churchhill government.

"I don't know what happened about Munich", he said. "I had my say that time. I don't know what happened before I came into office and I have not had time to find out. But I know that there is a task on now.

"All I know", he went on, "is that in the darkest hour, when it looked as if not 20 per cent of our men would get back from France, every Minster of the Government, not only those in the war cabinet, solemnly resolved to see it through to the end and not to compromise with Hitler.

"I have not witnessed any going back on that resolve. If I saw any weakness, I would be the first to tell the country". He added that when he entered the government he made up his mind not to settle with the Nazi regime and that "they would have to beat us to smithereens and then we would not settle".

Mr. Bevin said he would "work to the bone" to revenge every one of those who have "gone under" in Nazi-dominated countries and said: "The people I have lived with are under no delusions about Hitlerism. It is us that would be the first to be wiped out in every country.

The Minister said there was no evidence of any part of the working classes, of whatever political party in Norway, Holland, France and Belgium having operated as Fifth Columnists, adding that they "came from higher up".

PATIENT THROWN INTO FIRE, REPORT

Mental Hospital Officials Say Fellow Patient Hurled Another Into Rubbish Container

Woodstock, Ont., July 10—(CP)—An inquest will be held later today on the death of an inmate of the Ontario Mental Hospital here. The deceased was a 23-year old Toronto patient.

Hospital officials said prior to the inquest that the victim had been seized by another inmate and thrown into a blazing fire, suffering burns and shock which caused his death.

According to officials, the man's assailant said that he had been "told by God" to do away with the victim, and that his first delusion on this score occurred more than a week ago.

The victim died about 12 hours after he had been pushed into a large container on the hospital grounds in which rubbish was being burned.

FOUR-DAY PERIOD FOR REGISTRATION OF CANADIANS

Date of Registration Will be Some Time About August 14

NATIONAL ENROLMENT

Ottawa, July 10.—(CP)—Today, when the Bill to authorize establishment of the National War Services Department is expected in the Commons, finds Canada preparing for national registration as a stride forward in defence organization.

Before the snow flies, Hon. J G. Gardiner, National War Services Minister designate, announced yesterday, the new department will endeavour to have all citizens over 16 registered.

The tabulation will give the government a general knowledge of their capabilities whether as armed guards of the Dominion or workers in the common cause.

Local Registrars

About Aug .14, during a period of four days, all citizens will appear before their local registrars and give brief accounts of themselves. They will be divided as men and women, married or single, and will be asked their ages, occupations and racial origin. The men will be asked whether they have had any military training and whether they have volunteered for military service.

The first men to be called up for military service will probably be unmarried and between 21 and 30 years of age. Men outside this class will be permitted to volunteer so that it is expected there will be sufficient diversity of material in each locality to prevent dislocaion of any industry.

There will be no exemptions of individuals, but the calling of men will be delayed if their service is more urgently required in some other activity. These temporary exemptions will be by groups rather than individuals.

All Called to Undergo Tests

All called must submit to physical tests, probably the same as are required for volunteers. None will be used for other than home defence except on a voluntary basis.

The registration is described as "a national stock-taking of the human resources of the nation. "While it is compulsory and penalties will be provided for failure to register, Mr. Gardiner urged that "it be carried out, as far as possible and practicable on a voluntary basis."

Elaborate planning for the registration embraces the use of Federal voting constituencies as units of area, appointment of registrars in each with an assistant registrar and two deputy registrars.

Registrars Named Before

In asking members of parliament to suggest the names of registrars for their constituencies before Friday next, Mr. Gardiner emphasized this point, "the most important consideration is to get efficient registrars as these men constitute the corner-stone of a proper organization. We want to obtain the services of the highest type possible. Persons outstanding in the community who will command the respect of all classes."

For deputy registrars the minister suggested younger men and women. It is the intention to instruct the registrars and their assistants who will appoint these workers, that they should seek persons from the teaching profession, municipal secretaries, secretaries of Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, college graduates, bank clerks, office employees of their own constituencies, "so that they will know the people with whom they have to deal."

Arrangements are being made in each province to have a member of the Judiciary act as chief registrar for the province. The services of the Judiciary will also be called upon in classifying registrars with respect to their services to the country.

The understanding is that the defence department does not wish to mobilize more forces for home defence before September 1 and by that time the registration returns should all be checked and classified.

Mellick Farmer Is Shot to Death

Kenora, Ont., July 16 — (CP) — Clem Portier, 39-year-old farmer of Mellick Township, seven miles north-east of Kenora, was shot to death yesterday and police are holding his brothers, Luke and Johnny Portier, for investigation.

Acting Coroner T. H. Wolfe of Kenora said Luke Portier had admitted firing the shot which killed Clem.

Police said evidence indicated the brothers had just returned home from a trip to Kenora by boat and were unloading a bag of flour which fell into the water. An argument ensued between Johnny and Luke, and Clem intervened. Later he was shot.

KING VISITOR TO ARMS FACTORIES

Some Workers Hardly Took Time to Look from Their Benches

London, July 10 — (CP) — The King, in khaki field uniform, was cheered by workmen today as he visited arms factories.

"Go to it," they yelled at Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply, who accompanied the King on his trip to see for himself the effect of the 12-hour day, seven-day work week.

Some workers hardly took time out to look up from their benches to see the King, so busy were they. Others gave up part of their lunch hour to chase after the King's party.

His Majesty was particularly interested in "experimental work" on new arms and munitions, bending over the workers at their machines to watch the operations. He welcomed with a broad smile Mr. Morrison's statement that there has been a big increase in armaments production.

Bill Nourse, a veteran of 51 years' service at one plant and now 69 years old, told the King that he was feeling fit in spite of the long hours. Factory leaders said the sickness rate of workers had not increased unduly.

Will John Bracken Succeed Gardiner In Federal Post?

Ottawa, July 10.—(CP)—With Premier John Bracken of Manitoba remaining in the city today after he appeared before the Senate Banking Committee yesterday supporting the extension of the Farmers Creditors Arrangement Act to Manitoba, there is much speculation on Parliament Hill whether he will become Minister of Agriculture in the Dominion Government.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, the present Minister, is to take over the new Department of National War Services, and it was intimated by Prime Minister Mackenzie King that a new Minister of Agriculture would be appointed.

Meanwhile the scope of the war services department will be made known, possibly today, when the Bill providing for the new department is tabled in the House.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Clothes and the weather! It is said that a black negro clothed in white is quite contented in the Philippines. This combination of white and black is found on some animals as certain Arabian horses which have white hair over a black or dark skin making them more immune to the heat than a black-haired horse would be. White reflects away the sun's rays but does not radiate well, while black absorbs the sun's heat and is a good radiator. Blue or black is thus often found to be comfortable at night, and also during the day if one keeps in the shade. It has been found that dark woollen clothing may be comfortable at night as it is cooler than white.

Cunningham Is Hero of Mediterranean

London, July 10 (CP). — Great Britain's Mediterranean fleet now engaged with Italian warships, is commanded by Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, first great war hero of the Mediterranean, and is headed by the flagship Warspite, 30,600-ton veteran of Jutland and Narvik fjord.

Sir Andrew was a captain during the last war when he had his first fighting experience in the Mediterranean. He commanded the destroyer Scorpion and conducted raids which earned him a high reputation for daring.

He is 57 and has served virtually his entire career in the Mediterranean, which he is said to know "like the back of his hand".

His flagship, built in 1913, used in the battle of Jutland and rebuilt recently at a cost of $12,500,000, went to the Mediterranean after leading the bitter sea fight in Narvik fjord early in April.

Accompanied by destroyers, the Warspite smashed through heavy German fire from warships and land forces to storm the narrow inlet to the Norwegian iron port.

Seven German destroyers were sunk in the battle to three British destroyers damaged.

FISH ARE BITING IN THE PROVINCE

Survey Shows Catches Are Setting New Record for Size and Quantity

Toronto, July 10 (CP)—The fish are biting in Ontario, and with the bass and maskinonge seasons open all the province's game fish are available to anglers. A survey today showed that catches are setting new records for size and quantity in many localities.

Long Point Bay on Lake Erie probably tops all places for bass taken in quantity. Some thousands of small-mouthed bass have already been taken from this famous fishing ground, and one week ends as many as 100 fishing launches dot the waters.

One party returned from Long Point this week with a catch of 35, which included 22 fish running from 15 to 18 inches and two to three pounds.

In the Picton district, hard by the Bay of Quinte in Eastern Ontario, good bass catches are reported from the region's lakes. Around Tweed in Hastings County, great catches and variety have been secured already, among them a seven-pound pickerel and five-pound bass. Maskinonge are also plentiful in this area.

'Lunge and Bass Plentiful

Large numbers of bass and maskinonge are being taken in Sturgeon Lake and other favored spots of the vicinity just east of Toronto. One United States tourist caught two 'lunge that went 15 and 18 pounds in Pigeon Lake.

Lake Scugog appears to have "come back", and dozens of bass and 'lunge are being taken there daily. The featured catch here recently was a muskie running 23¼ pounds. Attorney-General Gordon Conant came back from Scugog with a 10-pounder.

French River, long noted for large bass, maskinonge and pickerel, is again producing them in quantity. A Toronto sporting goods store displayed an 18-pound 'lunge caught there by Roy Lewis of Toronto. The same window exhibited a 30-pound muskie from the Bruce Peninsula, caught by Charles Keyes of Toronto.

P. E. I. REMAINS 'DRY' PROVINCE

Soldier Vote Overwhelmingly in Favor of Sale of Beer and Wine

Charlotetown, July 10—(CP) — Complete returns in the Prince Edward Island liquor plebiscite were announced today, revealing that the Province will continue as Canada's only "dry" Province. A total of 10,426 voted for continued prohibition and 8,861 for the sale of beer and wine as beverages.

The soldier vote was overwhelmingly in favor of an amendment to the Prohibition Act, to permit the sale of beer and wine, 1,000 voting for the change and only 28 casting ballots in favor of continued legislation under which liquor can be purchased in government stores only with a doctor's prescription.

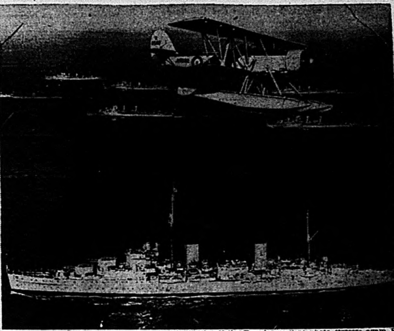
The plebiscite was held June 25.

Peter Nielsen, Husband Of Only Woman M.P., Enlists in H. G.

Ottawa, July 10—(CP)— Peter Nielsen of Norbury, Sask., husband of Mrs. Doris Nielsen, only woman member of the House of Commons, has enlisted in the Saskatchewan Company of the Veteran's Home Guard.

Mrs. Nielsen received word today from her husband that he is in training at Dunburn camp in Saskatchewan. The three Nielsen children are in Ottawa with their mother, who was elected to parliament for North Battleford at the last general election as a unity member.

FLEET AND NAVY'S AIRCRAFT COMBINE TO GUARD GIBRALTAR



With a fighting scout plane overhead, the British cruiser H.M.S. Aurora (foreground) and escorting destroyers of the British fleet, are shown here entering the Straits of Gibraltar on their way out to the Atlantic during recent operations. Following the battle off the French port of Oran, in which heavy units of the French fleet were put out of action, agreement has been reached with French commanders at Alexandria by which their ships will be mobilized, according to reports. This excellent photo stresses again Britain's control of the Mediterranean and the close co-operation between units of the fleet and of the fleet air arm. Naval planes were active in the Oran engagement and have repeatedly bombed Italian harbor and ships.

Leading in the nation's day of mourning following collapse of France and acceptance of harsh armistice terms from Germany, premier Marshal Henri Petain and other statesmen stand bareheaded before the memorial to the Great War dead in Bordeaux, France. Behind Petain stands M. Jeanne Jeannenay, president of the senate, and Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber of deputies. More pathetic is the anguish of the common people of France, pictured below similarly mourning. To them the memorial symbolizes a wasted sacrifice for the things their husbands and fathers died for have been swept away by capitulation to Nazi Germany.

U. S. Press Advises American Tourists To Go to Canada

New York, July 10—(CP)—"The money our tourists take to Canada helps her to be our best customer," the New York World Telegram says today in an editorial under the title "our best neighbor." The editorial says "This is a good year for visiting Canada" and points out that while the United States has imposed passport regulations, "there has been no change of rules for travel in the other direction."

On Canadian-United States relations generally the editorial says: "Within sight of such great cities as Buffalo and Detroit there is a nation at war. Yet most citizens of the United States will think of Europe's conflict as something beyond the Atlantic.

"The people of Canada and the people of the States have learned to take each other for granted, and that is a tribute to them both. They are, in many respects, very much alike. They learned long ago to get along together, each country minding its own business. In all the world's history there have never been two better neighbor-nations. And now they need, as never before, to know each other better."

BRITISH KNIGHT-ADMIRAL AND WIFE ARRESTED IN LONDON

Formerly director of naval intelligence at the admiralty, and with a naval record dating back to 1892, Admiral Sir Barry Domville has been arrested in London under wartime defence regulations. Also arrested was Lady Domville, and both have been placed in prison. Sir Barry, a prominent pro-German, was chairman of the Link, an organization designed to foster Anglo-German relations, until its dissolution. Sir Barry and Lady Domville are pictured here in their home admiring a photograph of Hitler.

Nation's Confidence in its Defences Strengthened by Wednesday's Greatest Air Battle of War When 14 German Planes Downed and 23 "Severely Damaged"

London, July 11—(CP)—Britain, tensed by an apparently casual remark by its War Under-Secretary, keyed its eastern defences to a high pitch today to ward off a possible invasion attempt from the east, but looked askance to the west where Eire insisted on maintaining a dangerous neutrality.

The nation's confidence in its defences was strengthened by yesterday's greatest air battles of the war over Britain in which Royal Air Force fighter planes beat off massed German bomber-and-fighter raids, shooting down 14 and damaging 23 "so severely that they were unlikely to reach home."

After this intensified attack Sir Edward Grigg, War Under-Secretary, told the House of Commons last night:

London, July 11—(CP)— Lord Beaverbrook's newspaper, The Daily Express, today warned Britons against expecting too much from the United States and Russia and said "our survival in the next few months depends on ourselves alone."

"It is true that both Russia and America have a common interest with us in defeating Hitler," said the Daily Express. "It is true that they have a common interest with us in checking Japan in the Far East, and we could take action now in that part of the world. But there is no reason to expect either Russia or the United States to declare war on Germany in the near future."

Rumania Takes Firm Stand Against Further Territorial Concessions

Will Not Cede Territory to Either Hungary or Bulgaria Say Government Officials

OUT OF LEAGUE

Government spokesmen declared this nation, which recently ceded Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina to Russia, would not consider any Bulgarian demands for territorial readjustments. Bulgaria claims Southern Dobruja.

They also reiterated the declaration in official circles that Rumania would not cede one inch of Transylvania to Hungary, but would be willing to discuss a transfer of populations.

Diplomatic quarters considered this repetition significant in view of word from Munich that Hitler told Hungarian statesmen Germany would not tolerate a war over Transylvania.

It was believed Rumania had advance information of Germany's attitude.

Rumania took another step toward reorientation of her foreign policy in announcing last night her withdrawal from the League of Nations. The announcement said league membership had placed Rumania in opposition to "great and friendly nations." (Presumably, German and Italy were meant.)

Every Man, Woman, Child in 'Column Of Silent Soldiers' to Kill Rumors

By SAM ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 11 (CP).—The government hopes to enrol every man, woman and child in the United Kingdom in a "column of silent soldiers" pledged to kill rumors and defeatist talk.

They will be asked to fight these enemies:

1. Rumors completely false or partly true which tend to cause confusion in civilians' minds.

2. Gossip which puts in circulation military information which might reach the enemy.

3. Defeatist talk regarding the war effort.

A suggested slogan is "Sew your lips with khaki cotton lest you sav what's best forgotten".

"Chatter boxes" will be placed in hotels, clubs and homes. People who circulate rumors or talk indiscreetly will be invited to drop in a contribution for charity.

It is pointed out that rumors and depressing gossip often are inspired by the enemy.

TURKS CALL UP MEN

Turkish Government Goes Ahead With Defence Preparations

Istanbul, July 11—(AP)—Official Russian quarters here said today that Russia has no intention of making any demands on Turkey.

These Russian circles denounced as "pure nonsense" the widespread fear in Turkey that Moscow is about to ask concessions in the Dardanelles Straits, or the Caucasus region of Turkey.

This fear apparently had substantiation yesterday, when the government called an emergency meeting of the National Assembly for tomorrow.

"Such a belief," said a Soviet spokesman, "is based on the erroneous impression that the U.S.S.R. has reverted to Czarist policy. Nothing could be further from the truth.

HAD SOLDIERS ABOARD

Rome, July 11—(AP)—Two hundred and twenty Italian and Albanian officers and men lost their lives when the Italian motorship Paganini burned and sank June 28 off Durazzo, Albania, it was officially announced today.

The ship was en route from Bari, Italy, to Durazzo with 920 soldiers and 30 seamen aboard. Escorting ships went to the rescue at once.

The communique said the ship left Bari June 27 the next morning, when the vessel was seven miles From Durazzo. It sank about noon.

Ships from Durazzo also went to the rescue.

The Paganini was a freight and passenger vessel owned by the Tyrrhenian line and until it was drafted for war service, plied between Mediterranean and Northern ports. The vessel of 2,427 tons is registered out of Frlume, Italy.

London, July 11 (C.P. Cable) — Robert W. Service, Canadian poet, has arrived in London with a contingent of refugees from France, it was learned today. With his wife and daughter, he managed to catch a boat at St. Malo shortly before German bombs demolished most ports.

It was the second escape for the narrator of Yukon tales. He fled Poland just before the German invasion, escaping from Warsaw to Riga.

Steel Corselets Proposed For Troops Defending Britain

U.S. Army Corporation Official Says British War Office is Considering His Suggestion to Equip Soldiers With Khaki-Covered Corselets of Steel and Rubber to Protect Chests and Abdomens from Bullets and Fragments of Shells — Such Defence Would, He States, Vary from 14 to 16½ Pounds

London, July 11 (CP).—Steel-corseted shock troops may fight the battle of Britain in armor capable of stopping rifle and machine gun bullets.

Walter Distillator, representing the United States Armor Corporation of New York, said today the War Office is considering his proposal to equip the troops with khaki-covered corselets of steel and rubber to protect their chests and abdomens.

One 14-pound corselet, he said, has been proved capable of stopping bullets and shell and bomb fragments of medium velocity (1,300 feet per second muzzle velocity) at 25 yards and claimed a 16½-pound corselet is proof against standard machine-guns and rifle fire.

Churchill Sends Autographed Book To Eleven-Year Boy Who Would Rather 'Be Bombed to Fragments Than Leave England'

London, July 11—(CP Cable) — Winston Churchill, always pictured as the epitome of the British fighting spirit, has sent an autographed book to an 11-year old boy who wrote that he would rather be bombed to fragments than leave England.

The youngster was identified today as David Benn, son of Capt. Wedgwood Benn, Labor member of parliament and a former Secretary of State for India. The father explained he had sent the letter to The Times "because it seemed to offer an uplift in these dark hours."

David, abed due to a lengthy illness, finally was allowed to dress and on his first walk went to a neighboring air raid precautions warden demancing "an adult job with risk."

Former Premier Daladier Absent From National Assembly Meeting

Messages Purported from Daladier and Other French Leaders Read Explaining Their Absence

LEBRUN MAY RESIGN

Vichy, France, July 11 (AP). — Former Premier Edouard Daladier and other French political leaders are believed to be in North Africa and unable to return because the German-French armistice committee at Wiesbaden has denied them transport.

The story of the movements of the Daladier party was told in part by Vice-Premier Pierre Laval in an address to the National Assembly today. The Wiesbaden committee, he said, had kept the absent leaders from the assembly by denying them transport.

Thus Daladier and former cabinet ministers Georges Mandel, Cesar Campinchi, Yvon Belbos and others were kept away. They sailed from a French port the day the Reynaud government fell and Marshal Henri Petain asked the Germans for armistice terms.

FRENCH SAILORS SAIL FOR SYRIA

Represented the First Contingent to be Repatriated Under British - French Fleet Agreement

Alexandria, July 11—(AP)—The steamship Providence, carrying "several hundred" French sailors, sailed today for Syria en route to France. The sailors represented the first contingent to be repatriated under the British-French fleet agreement.

The sailors were part of the personnel of the French fleet which had been serving here with the British fleet when France signed armistices with Germany and Italy.

Britain demanded and received this week an agreement whereby the ships are to be interned here for the duration of the wyar. Their armament disabled and their crews set home.

5 NAZI PLANES DOWN AS RAIDERS FLY OVER BRITAIN

Raiding Planes Cover Wide Area but Only 'a Few Deaths' Reported

SLIGHT DAMAGE

Civilians and Fire Engine Crew Machine - Gunned While Cattle in Marshes Subject to Machine-Gun Fire

London, July 11 (CP).—Five German planes were shot down today in a raid on a south coast English port. Watchers said they saw three bombers plunge into the sea and another crash on shore while the fifth plane, a fighter, made a forced landing and its crew of two were captured.

Sowed Bombs.

The raiding Nazi warplanes sowed bombs over Britain in the midlands, the southeast and the southwest, killing "a few" persons.

Twenty bombers and fighters were in the squadron engaged in the big battle by Royal Air Force fighters. The Germans dive-bombed out of the sun from a tremendous height and were met by heavy anti-aircraft fire that kept them above accurate bombing altitude.

British fighters rose quickly and chased the raiders al lover the sky.

In addition to the five shot down, a number of the raiders were believed to have been damaged.

In a southeastern town a German raider killed two persons, but British fighter planes chased the plane out to sea and were believed to have shot it down.

The Ministry of Home Security issued a communique saying:

"During the night bombs were dropped in a number of scattered points in the eastern and southern counties and in the midlands. No casualties were reported except a small number in two east coast towns of which a few were fatal.

Approximately 25 per cent of the planes to be built will be for the navy, the remainder being army bombers, pursuit and reconnaissance planes.

Airplane manufacturers have been asked to re-quote prices on the cost of the new quantities of airplanes to be manufactured, Dr. Mead declared.

Success of Policy Seems More Likely In Recent Months

'It is to be Hoped Discussions May Remove Danger of Soviet Working Either Economically or Militarily Against Britain in Interests of Germany'

FRIENDLY APPROACH

Foreign Affairs Under-Secretary Gives Written Reply to Question in House of Commons on Relations Between Britain and U.S.S.R.

London, July 11 —(CP)— R. A. Butler, foreign affairs undersecretary, told the House of Commons tonight that success in Britain's attempts to make friends with Soviet Russia "appeared more likely" in recent months.

In a written reply to a question, Mr. Butler said:

"The policy of the British Government has been and remains to improve and strengthen the relations between this country and the U.S.S.R.

"Success in this policy has appeared more likely since March when the U.S.S.R. made a friendly approach to the government and proposed resumption of trade negotiations.

"It is to be hoped that discussions on which Sir Stafford Cripps (British Ambassador to Moscow) is at present engaged may remove the danger of the Soviet government working either economically or militarily against Great Britain in the interests of Germany."

British Women Raid Own Kitchens And Attics for Aluminum for Planes

Vacuum Cleaners, Coffee Pots, Mincers, Frying Pans, All Contributed in Answer to Appeal

'KEEP IT GOING'

By D. E. BURRITT

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 11 (CP).—Thousands of British women staged a raid of their own and returned laden with booty as their cloud-riding sons turned back what was described as the largest attempted air raid on Britain yesterday.

While British fliers fought for hours, finally defeating the German air armada, women in all parts of the United Kingdom rummaged through kitchens and attics and tossed out everything that could be used to provide aluminum for British planes.

Responding to the appeal of Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, for the urgent donation of everything aluminum, the women lost no time in salvaging for the air force vacuum cleaners, coffee pots, meat mincers, frying pans, pots, saucepans and numerous other things that usually hang on kitchen spikes.

Chauffeurs of wealthy families drove carloads to central depots where already housewives of little tenement homes were tossing in anything they could get along without.

A preliminary estimate of the first day's returns said that more than 100 tons was donated among some of the larger centres without taking into consideration great heaps piled in innumerable smaller towns.

It was a great response, the newspapers agreed, adding encouragingly: "Keep it coming."

Bahamas Study Political Results

Nassau, Bahamas, July 11.—(AP)—This tiny British colony, recovered from the first surprise of the Duke of Windsor's appointment as governor-general, speculated today on its permanent effect on the Bahamas' political life.

"The announcement of this appointment sent a great surge of excitement over the community and the general reception of the news was a feeling of jubilation", said The Nassau Daily Tribune in an editorial.

"Today, however, the community is asking itself many questions. What are the diplomatic implications of this move? How will it affect the political and industrial life of the colony? Is the Government House good enough for him? Will the legislature and press lose any of their rights to criticize the chief executive of the colony during his tenure of office".

"We Want To Help" Is Campaign Theme

TORONTO (Special)—At national campaign headquarters in Toronto a large volunteer staff, ranging as high as 40 people in one night, are working at top pressure to keep the ball rolling in the Motion Picture Industry's "Win the War" Campaign to boost the sale of War Savings Stamps through the staging of free shows in all theatre Monday evening, July 15. Thousands of pieces of mail are going out every day to heads of service organizations, to ministers and priests of all churches and all theatre owners in Canada, all expense being borne by the film industry incidentally. The volunteer crews all seem animated with the one thought. "We want to do something to help." One campaign worker, who is a former army officer, expressed delight over the opportunity to do his bit for the cause because he had been turned down for active service when he tried to enlist again.

Committee officials and assistants hold the view that everybody in Canada feels the same—that they, too, "want to do something to help." On July 15 every patriotic-minded citizen of the Dominion will be able to show in a practical way his desire to help Canada and the Empire in the present war effort, by purchasing at least two 25c war savings stamps at any theatre for which they will enjoy a free show—and keep the stamps in the bargain. Theatre men in Canada already have reason to know that the proverbial man in the street will not fail to support this great voluntary effort on the part of one of Canada's largest industries, because the advance sale of War Stamps has opened with a bang.

Name Children's Aid War Guest Guardian

To centralize the placing of war guests in Ontario homes, full control has been vested with the Children's Aid Societies, Hon. Eric Cross said Tuesday. An exception will be made where transportation and expenses to a relative's home here are paid by parents of the children or in cases of the movement of entire schools.

An "undertaking" has been given by the government that religious training will not be interfered with and steps are being taken to place children in homes corresponding to their own religion, he said.

"Each child," he said, "is subject to medical inspection before leaving Britain. Upon arrival in Ontario there is a brief period of waiting in Toronto or some other centre where a further and more thorough examination will be made. Every care will be taken to ensure that all child guests placed in homes are sound and healthy."

"Should illness develop," he explained, "after the child has been placed, the hospital will be expected to provide ordinary medical care. In some communities the local medical association has volunteered the services of its members to assist in maintaining the health of these children."

Under no circumstances, however, he assured, will the host be called upon to bear costs of hospitalization or of major medical care. In serious cases the hosts are requested to notify the Children's Aid society.

TWO ARE KILLED IN CAR ACCIDENT

Two of the Eight Other Persons in the Three Cars Involved Seriously Injured

Chatham, Ont., July 11— (CP)—A highway accident involving three automobiles took the lives of two men last night and resulted in serious injury to two of the eight other persons in the cars.

Wilfred Mayville, 28, and Charles Mayberry, about 30, both of Windsor, Ont., were killed when their automobile rounded a turn in the highway near Thamesville, about 15 miles northeast of here, and crashed into another machine driven by Paul Bourassa of Paincourt. A third machine behind Bourassa's, hit the other two.

Bourassa and Lou Sadler of Chatham, driver of the third car, were bringing members of the Chatham Catholic Youth organization baseball team home from a game at Bothwell. Sadler manages the team.

Archie McIlhargey, one of the players in Bourassa's car suffered a possible fractured skull and facial injuries. Bourassa, 60, suffered a fractured leg and arm. Both men are in serious condition.

Leon Caron, 18-year-old Chatham youth who with Bill Reaume, 10-year-old team mascot, was in Bourassa's machine, suffered a fractured leg and facial injuries. Young Reaume's ankle was fractured.

HUNGARY FEELS SEVERE JOLT

Statesman Returns to Budapest to Explain That Nations Must Drop Campaign

Budapest, July 11 (AP).—Premier Paul Teleky and Foreign Minister Istvan Csaky returned today from Munich to explain to an expectant public that Hungary must drop her campaign for immediate return of Transylvania from Rumania.

Responsible sources confirmed reports from Berlin and Rome that this was one of the things Adolf Hitler made clear in his talks with these two leaders yesterday.

These sources admitted the government and its frontier mobilization had received a severe jolt.

The premier informed the nation in a statement of his confidence in the axis powers' efforts to lay a foundation for a lasting peace in Europe.

Deep Friendship For Germany.

Addressing a homecoming reception, he stressed that Hungary had entered a deep friendship with Germany.

"This friendship brings duties for our nation," he said.

"These duties are that we should not speak much, but trust, work and obey. With this I came home."

No mention was made in the statement or newspapers of Hungary's claims on Transylvania, war-lost province which the public had been led to believe was the chief subject to be discussed by the Hungarian leaders with Hitler and Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany and Count Ciano of Italy.

Authoritative sources said Hitler told Teleky and Csaky that nothing could be done about territorial claims because Germany wanted no interruption in production of supplies in the southeast.

C.N.R. YARD ENGINE STRIKES BARRICADE

While spotting freight cars along Pinnacle Street, the C.N.R. yard engine and train struck a city barricade on Pinnacle Street, this morning. The barricade had been placed by the Public Works Department for the protection and warning to vehicular traffic against possible accidents as it indicated a city street excavation. The barricade and two lanterns were knocked over when struck by the foot rail protruding from a box car, but no material damage resulted and the barricade was re-erected to guard the excavation in the street.

200 Attend District W. M. S. Rally Held at Stirling

Stirling—Over two hundred ladies, representing Women's Missionary Societies in all parts of the Stirling district gathered at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling on Tuesday afternoon for a large rally meeting and to pay tribute to Mrs. (Dr.) Hayward (nee Ruth Eggleton of Stirling) recently returned from China. Ladies were present from the following organizations: St. Paul's, St. Andrew's and St. John's churches, Stirling; Bethel, Mount Pleasant, Wellmans Corners, Madoc Junction, West Huntingdon, Carmel and Foxboro and River Valley. The devotional period was directed by Mrs. Pideon, President of St. Paul's W.M.S. and Miss Grace Pitman presided at the organ. Mrs. H. C. Martin welcomed the guests on behalf of the Stirling group and expressed the honor felt in having Mrs. Hayward present as guest speaker. At the close of the address of welcome all stood for a brief moment as tribute to the guest of honor.

Response to the welcome was made by a member of the Foxboro group with which Mrs. Hayward was also associated before her departure for China. A reading "The friends around the corner" was given by Mrs. John Moorcroft of West Huntingdon. Mrs. H. Elliott of Bethel contributed a vocal solo accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Wm. Heath. Greetings from the Eggleton appointment W.M.S. were extended briefly by Mrs. Clarence Pitchett and Miss Grace Pitman offered a splendid organ solo.

Address by Mrs. (Dr.) Hayward

The speaker of the day was then introduced by the President of the local organization to the gathering. Mrs. (Dr.) Hayward, who recently returned from the mission fields of China where her husband is a medical missionary, was born in this district and received her education in the schools of Foxboro and Stirling where she was known as Ruth Eggleton. She expressed her joy at being home again and her happiness at being guest speaker. While engaged in the work in China many letters had followed them from the organizations present and for them they were grateful and, more than all, they had been grateful for the sincere prayers of those in the homeland. Since leaving Stirling she and her associates had endured hard times and danger and there was comfort always in the thought that back home people were praying for them, she declared.

"It is well to remember that we are co-laborers together with God and you in the home church are at the working base of a great enterprize for Him."

Describing her trip to China she said that it was the first time she had ever been far from home and out there where the greatest difficulty was that of mastering the language she found herself soon becoming really fond of the Chinese. During the days of bandit raids it had been necessary to store provisions in hide-outs and flee to the mountains for safety. In the air-raids untold misery was brought upon aged folk and children, innocent people were killed and maimed and the drug supply at the hospital was not nearly sufficient to meet the need. Many stories reach this continent of the horrors of the war but much of the suffering is never heard of. After returning from a mountain hide-out after one of the raids the Church and all the buildings of the compound were found totally destroyed.

The medical branch of Mission work had played a great part during the war days and each day found more and more refugees pouring in. In peace time China is a lovely country at this time of the year. The main agricultural product is rice which is grown and cultivated under ancient methods. She also described the outdoor trading bazaars which litter the streets of Chinese towns and cities. People have little use of the sidewalks, when the merchants display their goods the customers walk on the road. The United Church had erected hospital schools for boys and girls, churches and successfully operated health clinics that were educating the Chinese in hygiene. Such work may be delayed temporarily but it shall again move forward in the days to come until all men know God. At the close of this fine address the National Anthem was sung and the ladies withdrew to the church parlors for supper served by the ladies of the Stirling W.M.S.

Honored By Gift

During the supper hour the guest of honor was presented with a lovely autographed bedspread by the Stirling ladies. With Mrs. Geo. Luery making the presentation and Mrs. R. A. Patterson reading the illuminated address. Expressions of gratitude to the local organization and the speaker for the fine address were given in brief addresses by Mrs. P. D. McMullen, Mrs. E. Rannie and Mrs. H. Rodgers. Mrs. H. E. Hulin and Mrs. H. H. Alger who both celebrated their birthday on that day were honored by all ladies greeting them in song.

Union Services Held in Stirling Churches

Members and adherents of St. Paul's United Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church filled St. Paul's Church auditorium for the first of a series of union services to be held throughout the next two months. The service also marked the official beginning of the ministry of Rev. A. M. Laverty, B.A., B.D., in the Stirling and Carmel charge of the United Church of Canada. In his inaugural message to the large Stirling congregation Rev. Laverty chose to speak on the subject "Victorious Living" basing his message on a text taken from 8th Roman, 37.

"In these perilous days," he stated, "it is difficult to look upon the victorious living of Christianity". With the apparent destruction of things for which it has stood for centuries we are inclined to see nothing of victory. But we as Christians have taken as our example, Jesus Christ. He faced all the perils that beset us in this world and lived victoriously even unto His death on Calvary, where He gained victory over death.

"Best of all, this great source of strength is available to all men not to any particular group or sect or people. It reaches down to men of lowly birth. Christ Himself was born into poverty and endured the humdrum of life as we do. In a lowly carpenter shop He worked with His hands as we do in this age. But His work portrayed His mastery after His Ministry began people questioned. 'Can any good thing come out of Nazareth". It was in the face of these better criticisms that He went alone to the garden of prayer for a renewal of strength.

"We have Him as our example and should likewise face our difficulties in life with steadfast faith with precious moments of meditation alone with God. Never was there a time when the need was greater."

"The power of Christ is as great today as it was in Galilee. When beset by an agonizing ailment, a woman made her way through the crowd to touch the hem of His garment. The personal touch and display of faith gave her new life restored her physically and spiritually. We, gaining personal touch shall gain the desire to achieve and achievement shall come. Our lives will then become radiant with Christianity, and it shall reach forth from us to those about us.

"We shall live victoriously for Him. Personal contact with God through meditation and prayer will lift us far above the daily routine things of this material world, and that reborn faith will shine forth from our every day lives and provide us with the only true satisfaction gained on this earth. The greatest need today is personal contact with God through Christ in prayer, humility and faith. Then in the face of all the ruin round about us we like Paul, can be more than conquerors in Christ Jesus."

Mr. C. L. Clute presided at the organ and a large union choir led in the singing of appropriate hymns. A vocal duet featuring Wm. Reynolds of St. Paul's choir and Arthur Duncan of St. Andrew's choir added interest to the service.

Nightly Evangelistic tent service will be conducted in Stirling under the auspices of the Four Square Gospel Mission in a large tent recently erected on Emily St. The special speaker during the campaign will be Rev. Orlando Shields of Edmonton, Alta.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!
Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.
The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.
Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.
Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

HOME IMPROVEMENT LOANS

Figures released by Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of Finance, show that more than 110,000 loans have now been made for home improvements, repairs, alterations and additions under the Home Improvement Plan. The volume of these loans to June 30th, 1940, now stands in excess of $44,000,000.

During June, loans numbering 3,754 were reported to the Department. The volume of these loans was $1,516,270, or an increase of $118,300 over May.

An analysis of the June applications discloses a wide variation in the type of improvements being undertaken. Loans range from $35 for insulation, $100 to redecorate, $250 for a new kitchen, and $400 for a sunroom and additions, to $600 for new heating system and painting, and $1,750 to convert a single family house to a duplex. In the case of rural properties, improvements to the other farm buildings as well as to the house may be financed. Loans to owners living in rural communities ranged from $50 to paint the house, $80 for a new well, $150 for repairs to the barn, and $300 to install electricity, to $700 for plumbing and a complete water system, and $1,000 for additions and improvements to the house.

Advances in June were distributed widely over the whole nine provinces. Ontario leads in number of owners taking advantage of the Plan with 1,617 loans, totalling over $606,000, made during the month. Quebec is in second place with loans totalling $354,000, made to 750 borrowers. Manitoba holds third place for the month in number of loans, and Alberta holds third place in volume of loans.

NATIONAL HOUSING ACT LOANS IN JUNE

Five hundred and ninety-four National Housing Act loans have been approved during the past month, Finance Minister Ralston has announced, which is an increase of 47 loans over the total for the same month last year. The number of family housing units financed was 618 and the volume of loans was $1,807,981 bringing the total of housing units financed to June 30th, 1940, to more than 17,100 and the volume of loans to above $58,500,000.

Of the 618 family units approved, 230, or over 37%, were financed by loans of $2,500 or less; 367, or approximately 60%, were financed by loans of $3,000 or less, and 488, or approximately 80%, were financed by loans of $3,500 or less. The average loan per housing unit for the month was $2,926, against $3,284 in June last year.

The number of small 90% loans approved to finance single family houses valued at not more than $2,500 was 120. This compares with 110 of these approvals in June, 1939. The total number of these small loans approved in the first six months of 1940 now stands at 575 against 316 in the same period in 1939.

A special feature of June operations was the extension of the lending facilities to eight new communities in which loans had not previously been made. This brings the total number of municipalities in which

CHINA ENDURES DESPITE JAPAN

For three long years China has fought the Japanese who seem no nearer the end of hostilities than when they began their undeclared war against the Chinese. Japan still calls the event which resulted from a clash outside Peiping an "incident," but all the non-totalitarian world calls it war.

China is a nation which of all peoples has endured throughout the centuries attack after attack. Her ports have been seized, her railways disrupted, towns and cities have fallen to invading Japanese, countless thousands upon thousands have wandered into exile, and lack of food and disease have taken a heavy toll and loss of life in war has been very heavy.

New York Times points out that China has not enough nurses, medicines, enough hospital beds and makes an appeal for these heroic suffering people.

China has learned to suffer and in her suffering endures despite her enemy.

The Nazi 'Work Type'

The "gentleman" is doomed to disappear, according to Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, writing in that genial Nazi periodical the Voelkischer Beobachter. He had become, says Dr. Rosenberg, "a British type of the capitalist age . . . living on the work of others." He will be replaced by the "modern German work type."

Most of us, if the truth must be told, had about concluded that Germany was not being administered by gentlemen. We didn't think that gentlemen, even of the British capitalist type, would do what was being done in Germany. But the "modern German work type," busy as a bee in his daily labor of making ingenious military tools and then using them to plunder other people's countries—with all due respect to Dr. Rosenberg, we don't like him.

It is quite possible that the old-fashioned gentleman was not the best that humanity could produce. To many of us moderns he had come to seem limited and stuffy. But it is possible, too, that the Nazi "work type" isn't the last word in kindliness, in creativeness or in intelligence. The Nazi type has flourished from time to time in human history, to be remembered with hatred and contempt. Of late it has developed some new tricks in bloodletting, lying and treachery, but Dr. Rosenberg may be mistaken in believing that this will give it a lasting lease of life.

Gold holdings of the United States Treasury, as reported yesterday for last Tuesday, have reached $20,000,000,000; they crossed $19,000,000,000 in the middle of May and $18,000,000,000 in the first week of February. Undoubtedly these enormous receipts during the crisis in Europe have measured primarily transfer of European capital to this country for safekeeping. But along with this must be considered the rapid rise of "earmarked gold," which does not go into the Treasury but is held by the Federal Reserve for account of foreign banks or Governments. It amounted to $1,232,300,000 at the end of April, but as one Continental Government after another was occupied by the Nazi, it had risen by the close of June to $1,725,000,000

There can be no doubt whatever that this exceedingly rapid increase has reflected transfer of gold reserves by central banks in the invaded countries. Mostly, the movement appeared to be made up at first of gold shipments by Norway and Holland; but in the closing week of June, France, from which little gold has been received directly in the first five months of 1940, delivered no less than $241,500,000. Considering that part of the recent very large gold imports from Canada and the United Kingdom may have been France gold in transit, and that the Federal Reserve estimated gold holdings of the French Government and Bank at the end of April as $2,000,000,000, American values, it is probable that a very substantial part of this was sent out of France before the French capitulation.

Such movements are naturally conducted, with great secrecy Nevertheless, it is possible that troublesome international questions might arise hereafter regarding actual title to the expatriated gold. In the case of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland the Nazi Government evidently seized for itself the gold in central bank reserves; but that process too was conducted secretly. The Reichsbank's weekly statements gave no clue to it; the presumption therefore is that, like Germany's gold in Spandau Castle at the beginning of the last World War, the Government has its own gold account, outside the bank. What will happen in the end to these European gold reserves is as much a mystery as the total disappearance of the Bank of Amsterdam before that city was captured by the French in 1795 or the dispersal of the Imperial Russian Bank's gold reserve after 1918.

Under the shadow of its stately Peace Tower, the nation's capital is feverishly engaged in waging war. The irony that lies in the naming of that tower in these hectic days of war is tempered by the fact that it is also a Victory Tower, and the conviction is inescapable for a newcomer to Parliament Hill that those chimes that mark the hours of dreadful days will boom over future days of peace and triumph.

But for Ottawa in July of 1940 these are dark days of dire struggle. Events are plainly marching far ahead of the machinery of government. The locusts of war are feasting upon the pleasant traditions of democratic deliberation and leisure to contemplate certainly not the people of Canada is consciously ordering the future which Canadians from school days have been taught belongs to their country. Instead the pressure of vast events is forcing the pace of change that is abroad over all countries.

So one has no time to write of the famous beauties of the national capital, to note the dancing light upon the whirling waters of the Ottawa, to report to you the mystic beauty of an advancing squall across the misty Gatineau hills. One can only stop and look a moment and promise one's self the leisure to look again when the din of war and the trample of troops has died away.

June brings the tourists and visitors to Parliament Hill, and they pause in surprise to find Parliament is in session and notices at the doors to forbid entrance to persons lucky enough to have no business to attend to at the moment.

While the couriers and officials dash through doors bearing tidings and despatching swift orders, two boys in Scout uniforms with packs on their backs and bedecked with pennants of their recent travels, pause to gape at the stalwart crimson-clad Mountie at the main entrance. They gawk a while and then amble around to look at the river on the farther side, unaware how the frenzy and the haste of events have laid harsh hands even upon them.

Ottawa is full of hints of destiny, and that is a theme on which many a skilful piece has been written for the newspapers. A flippant observer would say today that Ottawa is too full of destiny, to be weighed with the burden of day-to-day history.

Nothing reveals the vast expansion of Government functions—an expansion that has drained significance from nine provincial capitals and concentrated here in one great locus of power-more than the discovery that it would take weeks to make the rounds of all Government offices.

The massive Centre Block holds only a fraction of official activities. The venerable East Block and the time-bitten West Block are mere chapter houses on this politicians' campus that includes virtually all the city.

For the growing family of departments, branches, commissions, boards and bureaus has taken rooms in most big buildings in town, and the clatter of Government typewriters is the sweet music which marks the rise of a new and vital capital of Canada.

Ottawa is possibly the fastest-growing city in Canada, with around 160,000 population at the present time. How big it will be in a few years cannot be estimated, but one thing is certain. Ottawa's significance in national and international affairs will grow from year to year.

The real news at Ottawa these days is not what goes out in Parliament, so much as what goes on behind the scenes. Of course, Parliament will know all about it in time. But only the men on the treasury benches know what is going on, and they are hedged about with official silence on many points. The private member is always a relatively minor player on this stage, however impressive his curtain calls before his home electors. This year he is only a third or fourth-rate power here.

The real news is not in Parliament, but in the country as a whole and in that perplexing field of relationships with other states. The back bencher may ask what the Government is doing about stem rust and the ravages of grasshoppers—and he will get an answer. But he much wait to know the future of his country in a world that is breaking up.

So the biggest story in Canada's history is happening, and only fugitive glimpses of it are possible. Each day the pieces can be added up, but the answer may come out differently tomorrow. That is how things are at Ottawa today and that is how they will continue to be for a little while yet.

Wood as a War Material

Many of the metals play such an important part in the fabrication of war requirements that the value of wood as a war material is somewhat overlooked. Yet it is an essential commodity, as is attested by the fact that it is included in certain lists of war contraband. Just how wood ranks as a material necessary for the conduct of present-day warfare has been analyzed by the Forest Products Laboratories. Timber, they say, is essential for boxes for ammunition and supplies, for the building of aerodromes, aircraft, dug-outs, shelters and pontoon bridges, and to provide ties for railway tracks. Wood is used in the manufacture of war equipment, as for example in the stocks of rifles and light machine guns. Cartridge wrappers consist of paper made from wood pulp. Large quantities of fibre-board and corrugated board are used in packaging. Purified wood pulp yields cellulose nitrate or gun-cotton used as an explosive for demolitions and as the chief ingredient of smokeless powders, photographic films, collodion and celluloid plastics. Dynamite, of which wood flour forms an appreciable part, is employed in construction outside of war zones. Specially prepared wood charcoal is the chief working substance in gas masks. Acetone, obtained from acetate of lime produced in the distillation of wood, performs the function of a solvent or diluent in some explosives.

Wood is also an important auxiliary war material. Rayon and staple fibre from wood pulp can be more extensively used in place of cotton. Producer gas from wood and charcoal may be used for developing power for automobiles and trucks, and so release quantities of gasoline for military purposes. Ethyl alcohol can be produced from wood waste and from the waste liquor of sulphite pulping.

Thus the vast timber resources of Canada, which are so important in peace time trade, play an equally important role in war.—Canada Lumberman.

Injection of Varicose Veins Brings Good Results

Thousands of men were rejected for overseas service for the last war because of varicose veins. So anxious were many of these men to join the army that they had the varicose veins removed by operation and were given 'easy' jobs in the lines for many weeks. In most cases the results were excellent although there were still far too many who had to be discharged from the army because varicose veins returned and the legs were heavy and swollen.

The injection of varicose veins was known at the time but it was held in ill repute often because the solution that was injected was not suitable. Most surgeons also were opposed to the injection method.

Today there is a different story and the injection of varicose veins has received the endorsement of military surgeons, pensions boards, and workmen's compensation boards.

To find out just what results were being obtained by the injection method, Dr. F. L. Smith, in Military Surgeon, tells of a questionnaire that was sent out, and the figures showed that there was improvement of 89 per cent contained in 1074 answers to the questionnaire.

Dr. Smith maintains that, of the sclerosing solutions (solutions used to harden the veins until they become hard and fibrous), he has found sodium morrhuate most efficient. He uses a 5 per cent solution of the sodium morrhuate.

Tying off the large vein near the groin and injecting the varicose veins in lower leg is performed in about one half the patients with varicose veins who come to the Mayo Clinic. This combined method not only reduces the number of injections necessary but varicose veins are less likely to return.

Should you be undecided about whether to have varicose veins removed by the injection method or by surgery, you should have your physician refer you to a surgeon who uses both methods. Injection means going to the surgeon's office ever few days for a few weeks, no real loss of time from work, no stay in hospital and no anaesthetist. There are, however, cases were surgery is the only method that can be used.

Reindeer

Canadian Resources Bulletin—With the number of reindeer in the Canadian Arctic now estimated at about 6,800 head, Canada's reindeer industry has made satisfactory progress in the five years since the original herd of 2,370 animals was delivered from Alaska.

Reports on this year's fawning, received by the Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, indicate an increase of about 1,200 fawns to the main herd now on Summer range on Richard's Island a short distance off the Arctic coast. This brings the number of animals in this herd up to approximately 5,000. In addition, the fawn increase of the native herd, located in the Anderson River area, about 150 miles eastward, is estimated at 500 head, making a total of approximately 1,600 reindeer in this herd. The native herd was established in December, 1938, when about 950 deer were transferred from the main herd and placed under Eskimo management, subject to Government surpervision.

Plans have been made for the establishment of a second native herd in the Horton River area, about 100 miles east of the first native herd. Next Winter about 800 reindeer will be separated from the main herd at the reindeer station and herded overland for about 250 miles.

RUSSIANS DENY

Security in Bessarabia

"The U.S.S.R. was obliged to take certain measures for her security in Finland and Bessarabia (the province ceded to Russia by Rumania). But there are no reasons for the U.S.S.R. to attempt to get control of the Dardanelles or of the Kars region (in northeastern Turkey), as our relations with Turkey are good and the straits are open to us."

"The Kars region," he continued, "was ceded to Turkey voluntarily after the revolution, and we do not want it back again."

Turkish Apprehensive

However, the Turkish government went ahead with defence preparations.

Several classes of cavalry and many reservists of other classes were called to active service. All men excused from military service for reasons of health were ordered to report for re-examination by July 15.

The government is expected to introduce gasoline restrictions tomorrow.

Officials issued a new denial of German charges that Turkey last spring plotted offensive action against the Russian Caucasian oil fields with Britain and France.

Publication of papers described as seized French diplomatic documents which purported to show this had been planned was regarded here as a Nazi attempt to cause trouble between Russia and Turkey.

TURBULENT MEXICO GOES TO THE POLLS

Street fighting like this in Mexico City was reproduced a thousand times throughout Mexico on July 7, when the population went to the polls to select a new president of the republic. In all, 44 persons were slain, and over 200 injured. General Manuel Camancho and Juan A. Almazan both claimed victory before the ballot count was announced.

Freedom's Cause

by

Arthur L. Burke

Let those who challenge freedom's cause,
Who would the lives of nation's blight,
Who scorn our democratic laws,
Take heed of Britain's gathering might.

United strong in all our parts,
The qualms of fear we do not know,
The tested steel of British hearts
Shall triumph over every foe.

No warring lord has ever won,
Against the cause that truth inspires,
No armoured might beneath the sun
Can quench the flames of freedom's fires.

Why question then the Empire's might?
Her watchdogs of the rolling main
Her sky patrols, are in the fight,
They've always won, they will again.

Let every British heart ring true,
No doubting thoughts our minds assail,
The Empire then will live anew
And freedom's cause shall still prevail.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The first important clash of British and Italian naval forces in the Mediterranean, long expected, resulted in a victory for the Royal Navy. The Italian ships apparently were not looking for a fight. They immediately threw out a smoke screen when overhauled by the British and escaped after suffering losses.

Meantime the air warfare over Great Britain reached a degree of intensity hitherto unknown. A huge air battle was fought off the south coast and over the coastal area. A strong group of British fighting planes apparently broke up and repelled formations of German bombers and fighters numbering nearly 100 aircraft.

The enemy bombed ships in the channel and dumped bomb loads inland but the attack of the fighters prevented them from reaching their targets and bombing with the deliberation required for accuracy.

German losses in aircraft in the operations against Great Britain have been heavy but scarcely heavy enough to eat very substantially into the Nazi reserves. Losses in flying personnel may be more serious because fighting airmen cannot be trained quickly.

More About Quin Rules

Yesterday I told you of some of the rules the Dionne Quintuplets have to govern their nursery in Callander. There are eight rules and I only discussed three of them.

The fourth rule is: "Never fight among ourselves". A very timely rule for the whole world obviously. Sadly, only children seem to want it now.

It was Cecile who proposed that particular rule. She remembers her disgrace of a few weeks ago when she got into an argument with her sisters—very unusual for Cecile, usually the most courteous of the Quins. In the heat of the argument, she sank her teeth into Marie's arm. Her punishment, of course, was isolation from her sisters, the worst punishment a Quin ever suffers, and a very effective one, also, I can tell you.

"Never try to get even", is the fifth rule that is governing the Dafoe nursery these days. I hope they live up to this rule, for it can save them from some of the worst acts of men and women.

Marie was the sponsor and ardent supporter of rule Six: "Never tell tales". Some time ago, Marie thought Emilie had been mean to her, so she tried to get even by telling Nurse Leona Dubeau about a prank of her sister's. Her reward, however, was a reprimand for talebearing. Marie remembered the lesson, her sponsorship of this rule shows.

The seventh rule: "Offer things to one another", came from a suggestion made by Annette. I suppose it merely reiterates the first rule, "Always share things". Yet, it goes further and requires even more unselfishness. It means that the child doesn't wait until asked to share, but takes the initiative in the sharing.

The last resolution in the "code" is, "No crying, or sulking. No long faces". Yvonne contributed this. Naturally she would, for she is the one who comforts all the others when they are hurt, when they have grievances. She is the peacemaker.

As I have indicated, the Quins were prompted to make these rules by personal experiences. That they at six years of age, have such a code of conduct, shouldn't be surprising. Study children at play. Even though previously unacquainted, they very quickly adapt themselves to a set of rules of their own making. The nonconformist finds himself or herself unwelcome. Children are much more realistic in their social relations than adults. We elders manage to conceal our feelings when we don't like the conduct of a guest or host, but children will speak right out and say "I don't like you" or "I don't want to play with you."

In large families there is unlikely to be a spoiled unsocial youngster. The children themselves see to that with their self-adopted rules and means of enforcing them. When parents have only one child or two it is very important for them to give the youngster or youngsters contacts with groups that will submit them to "the rules" in a manner much more effectively than parents can.

Summer School Student Should Get Fair Chance

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Some children who failed in one or more subjects at school this spring are attending summer school. Some others are studying under a tutor.

In some instances the child studying during the summer will be able to do the work of his regular grade in the fall. But in all too many cases too much will have been expected of the child. Either he was too far in arrears or his teacher failed to help him as she should to overcome his handicap.

As a rule, the teacher chosen for the child, however skillful she may be otherwise, overlooks the principle which is most essential to the success of the child she is employed to teach. She fails to set this child to learn what he can learn successfully. If, for example, the child has failed in fourth grade arithmetic or reading she will set him at doing more arithmetic and reading of this grade difficulty.

Perhaps he can succeed only at third or second grade level in arithmetic or even first grade level in reading. See then how almost hopeless are his undertakings and hers? Having failed day after day, week after week, and month after month at school, the poor discouraged child is set to do the same hard, hopeless tasks on which he had labored so long and painfully.

Let me suggest to the parent who is about to select a tutor for her child that she first find out how this teacher plans to proceed, whether she aims to have him work at the grade level low enough for him to enjoy success and build upward from there. The tutor will not need to be an expert at testing to find how far down she must begin with him—rock bottom. All she needs is good common sense at checking on his skill in the fundamentals. However low she finds him, she will not make him feel ashamed. She will build hope and courage in him.

In some instances, a parent having chosen a tutor has had this tutor write me or some other psychologist (better to see one), sending some samples of the child's work or records of his achievements on a standard test. Always I am glad to offer any advice I feel able to give in such instances and to recommend types of materials, especially in reading and arithmetic.

An occasional child, with a calm and patient parent, given the proper self-teaching material, provided he can be induced to work systematically for short periods daily, can make considerable progress without a tutor.

The poor reader above the third grade might gain most in learning to read if he were induced (even hired) to read aloud fifteen or twenty minutes a day to a child under six in order to entertain this younger child.

ENTHUSIASM KEEN IN CORBY LIBRARY ROBIN HOOD CLUB

The boys' and girls' department of Corby Public Library may not bear any noticeable resemblance to Sherwood Forest, nevertheless it is the centre of a keen and enthusiastic group of young "archers", members of the "Robin Hood Club".

Each season, at this time, the librarian, Miss Kathryn Gallagher, plans a program that will direct the summer reading of the small subscribers in a systematic manner. Each summer has seen growing interest on the part of the boys and girls and so far this year seventy-five have been enrolled in the club.

The plan is to encourage reading on varied subjects. For this purpose a large target has been made each band of its colour representing a different class of books, such as adventure, travel, etc. Every member is required to read two books in each class and as this is completed a small arrow, bearing his or her name is placed on the colour band, which grows nearer to the "bull's eye" with every two volumes read.

Belleville's own Robin Hoods, and of course, any number of Maid Marions, are taking an eager interest in this form of archery competition, filling their summer reading hours with books that capture the imagination, just as did the storied feats of the debonair Robin Hood of old.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Keeping Company" For Five Years

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past five years I have been keeping company with a young man. His business has fallen off considerably in the last year, although he's not poor by any means. I also am employed. At one time we were desperately in love and I know he still cares for me.

Occasionally the subject turns to our future but he doesn't seem to care to talk about that. I am anxious to know his intentions and think it is time we should be getting married, as we are both beyond the quarter mark. If I have dates with other young men, he doesn't seem to care, but acts most indifferent.

He doesn't tell me he loves me, although "actions speak louder than words"; but like all girls, I want to be told once in a while. I'm unhappy over our love affair, but can't seem to give him up.

Judith.

Nothing is harder than to steer a love affair out of a becalmed state once it has drifted there. This man apparently is satisfied with a friendship which has been going on for five years. You've discovered jealousy doesn't work. Sometimes a shock will do the trick. Pack up and go to another city. This dilatory lover may become so lonesome that he will beg you to return and marry him.

Then, too, there is always the chance that among new scenes a girl may find someone just as attractive and not so leisurely. To waste five years of youth in drifting is not practical. Youth is too precious, too fleeting.

She Loves Him Despite His Temper

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I went "steady" with a young man for five year. Three of these years we were engaged. I loved him very much but he had a bad temper which got on my nerves at times. But he was always remorseful after these outbursts. We had our wedding ring purchased and the date was set for a wedding.

Then, about a year ago we had a quarrel. I said I'd like to go around with other boys before I settled down, or I hadn't seen much of life. I returned the engagement ring, as he said he wanted all of my attention or none. I thought we'd be reconciled in a few days, but we never have. We've met, and he wants me to give up my new friends, but I don't want to do that until I'm sure.

I was transferred out of town, and we've just drifted apart. I know he still cares as he has never gone with another girl. And although I'm going with another boy now, who is very kind to me, I just can't forget the old fiance and know now that I love him. What can I do?

Discouraged

You must have forgotten, my dear, that it's a woman's privilege to change her mind. Your fiance's outbursts of temper made you feel that you wanted to meet other young men. You've done this and have decided, temper and all, that you like him best. He has not taken out other girls. What could be simpler than that you write him a note that you'd like to see him again? Perhaps he has mastered his temper and you'll find him anxious to return.

She's Taller

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend is five years younger than I am, and two inches taller, which is causing amused comment among my friends. I don't care in the least, but I would like to get some sensible person's view on the subject. We are planning to marry in a year, and truly love each other. I don't believe anything else matters do you?

Fred

If you'll forgive me for saying so, my dear young man, I think you're looking for trouble if you permit comments of uninterested persons to disturb an ideal love affair.

Your girl friend is five years younger, which strikes me as a very happy medium. And she's two inches taller. What's the difference? In many happy marriages the wife is a head taller— and it's nobody's business. No problem here at all.

Vitality is Base of Real Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

Beauty is built upon a foundation of physical vitality and mental health. These elements you must have; make up, lovely draperies, heavenly coiffures are just the trimmings. Burn the candle at both ends, and all the pretty dodads won't do a bit of good. This goes for the young as well as the old and the middle aged. Some of those dancing grandmas might think it over.

Regular periods of relaxation are rejuvenating. Do we hear laughter from the hard working home girls, and those who trek out every day to shop and office? Never mind. It is possible to relax on train or bus and it won't do the career girl a bit of harm to try it. Close eyes, go limp, think of nothing at all. At home, the mama should snatch a bit of sleep when the baby is having his nap. If she can't do that she should get to bed early instead of staying up until all crazy hours playing bridge or having a wild party with the neighbors.

Cheat Depression

Periods of quiet are necessary so that the spent body has an opportunity to pick up lost energy. Fatigue reacts upon the mind, causing depression and lowering the powers of efficiency.

Hurry and tension disqualify one for one's best efforts, have a deplorable effect upon the digestive and nervous systems. What they do to the human face is too sad to report, so we will spare you.

"Periods of quiet are necessary so that the body has an opportunity to pick up lost energy."

Are you the kind of a girl who buys light hearted clothes? You should be. Dress has much to do with the way one feels, whether one is brave and splendid or cowardly and sad.

The woman with a practical mind who buys something that "will wear" would do a mental turn about if she'd go in for frivolous dry goods, gay colors, cute sartorial tricks. They're grand for boosting morale.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 4.

White-faced, uninterested, Lissy languidly joined the family group. They all stared in faintly apprehensive expectation at the man of the house, who was sunk into a leather chair, his elbows spread, his fingertips meeting on his chest.

"Well," William Ballard said looking about the circle through his glasses, "here we all are. The whole point is this, girls and Ben," he said in a unnaturally cheerful tone. "Things have been going badly for me. The game is up—there's nothing more I can do. I'm broke. Everything's gone!"

"It's like a play!" Joyce said in the silence. The Ballards glanced at one another. Ben cleared his throat.

"How d'you mean everything's gone, dad?" he asked.

"Just that," his father answered in a light careless voice. Joyce's heart suddenly stood still with pity for her father. He was never flippant and defiant like this. He must be forcing himself horribly. "I've lost the plant," he said. "I've worked hard all my life; I've failed. That's all there is to it. I've got three daughters and a son; they're complete strangers to me. I've got to tell complete strangers that I can't support them any more—I'm done."

"Dad . . ." Joyce said nervously, dragging the word out in affectionate fluttered reproach. "How can you talk so silly!"

She went over to his chair and sat on the arm of it and put her arm about him.

"It's true," he said. "Your father is a complete failure. I've done my best. But whatever I've done I've been wrong. At your ages I was supporting myself, but not one of you can support yourselves! It'll be years before any one of you can. I suppose that's my fault too."

"Darling, I wouldn't take that truculent angry tone," Mrs. Ballard murmured. "Whatever it is, it isn't so bad as you make it sound! We'll pick up the pieces and begin all over again. I'm sure we needn't have worried about the children; mother and dad are still able to keep them from worrying before their days come to worry . . ."

"That's just it," Joyce's father said, still in the cheerful unsympathetic tone that came so oddly from him. "I think it is their time to worry. I'm done worrying. I'm done supporting people. Let them try their hands at it!"

"Will, we shall get nowhere if you persist in this criticising tone!" Mrs. Ballard said patiently.

"Well, let's get down to cases! The business has been in the red for a year and a half. I've done all I could to float it; there's no money anywhere. Last June I put a second mortgage on this house—that's final there. I talked to my cousin Laura on Saturday; she won't do anything.

"Well. Yesterday, Monday, we had a meeting. The bank takes over this house and the plant, and some odds and ends of property your mother and I have—the Dumbarton lots, the Capp street houses. They run the whole thing and pay me an allowance."

There was a profound silence. Bewildered and slightly affronted, the Ballards looked at one another.

"Well, I don't see why that isn't a comfortably arrangement, daddy," Mrs. Ballard said presently in a cheerful tone. "It means that you have less worry and responsibility."

"I have no worry nor responsibility at all!" he said unencouragingly, as her voice wavered in some puzzlement.

"Good for you!" Dodo said timidly. "But what do we do, dad? Are they going to let us live in the house?"

"They think they can rent this place for three hundred a month."

"Three hundred a month is something," Sally Ballard said, resolutely optimistic.

"We don't get it."

"We don't get it?"

"No; the bank gets it."

"But they pay it to us?"

"Oh, no, they don't!" William Ballard said almost in triumph.

"Don't pay us the rent of our own house, Will?" Sarah was being reasonable but it was something of a strain.

"No. They pay me a given sum. Everything goes over to the liquidation of the estate."

Mrs. Ballard was still gentle and patient.

"Isn't that the same thing, dear?"

"They pay me twelve hundred," the man said briefly.

Another silence.

"A month?" Ben said.

"A year," his father snapped with a quick glance.

"Twelve—my gosh, dad," the boy argued youthfully. "That won't go far."

"It's all we'll have!" William Ballard said and it was almost as if he enjoyed saying it.

"All we have from them," Sarah Ballard put in pacifically. "What else will we have, Will?"

"Nothing. I put everything into their hands yesterday. House, plant, properties, insurance policies, everything. It was that or bankruptcy. This way my creditors will get something. It may take 'em years to clear it up, but they'll get something."

"Will, we'll have to borrow money," his wife said quickly, resourcefully. "I mean—twelve hundred a year! That's how much a week?"

"About twenty-five dollars."

"But, darling, Ben's college costs more than that."

A faint exclamation that was like a cry escaped Mrs. Ballard. Joyce, looking quickly toward her brother, saw his face redden suddenly and his jaw tighten, but he laughed stoically.

"O.K.," he said gallantly.

"You mean Ben has to go to work, Will?" the mother asked dazedly.

William Ballard had sunk back in his leather chair and Joyce had slipped to a hassock at his knee.

"He can if he wants to," he said almost on the tone of a yawn.

"Can if he wants to! What of his law work?"

"He could do it the way other men do, work his way through."

"But you'd rather he'd get a job?"

"I? No," William Ballard said, unruffled, and not raising his eyes from an apparent study of the fire. "I don't care. It's his life."

"I can't help feeling that with Ben's college work to finish and Lissy probably going to be married in June . . ."

"Oh, leave me out of it!" Lissy put into the pause in a vault-like voice hoarse from tears and lowered to keep it steady.

"You can all do exactly as you like," the man assured them. "It's your responsibility from now on. While I had money, I gave it to you. I paid servants and garage bills and college bills; I was glad to. As a result I never saw my children except when they wanted money; I don't know them; or what they want to do and how they'll manage!"

"Will, you're not yourself at all," Sally Ballard's voice said tenderly, reproachfully. "You know we all love you! You know the children are just living the normal lives of young people today. You want them to be like the others, don't you?"

"Certainly!" he interrupted harshly. "I'm telling them they can go right on, for all me! They don't need me and I don't need them! I've not been asleep these last five years. I've known it all; I've heard it all. 'Just slip in and say goodbye to daddy, darling. Telephone to daddy and ask him, at least; it flatters him. I bought a book for you to give daddy; do try to find time to write in it!'"

In the stricken pause Joyce began unobtrusively to cry. Her father put his hand down and patted her head.

"Don't cry, Joyce. There's nothing sad about being young. Let me finish telling you about this while I'm at it. Talking this over at the bank yesterday they told me that they have a lot of ranches all over the state, more than they can handle. There's one down in the San Joaquin Valley, that's deserted. It was part of an estate; there's been nobody on it for three years, except a caretaker, and he's gone now, or is going. It sounds—pretty bad; the people who were there didn't live as we do. But it has some prunes, some apricots, walnuts —there are a few cows, chickens. They're turning that over to me. If I can make anything of it it'll help clear up my affairs; if I can't there's no harm done. They take over the house, furniture, cars, silver, everything, as soon as they can get an inventory made out. You girls and mother can take whatever'll go into a trunk. They think they've got a prospective buyer here already."

"Take whatever will go into a trunk and go where?" Mrs. Ballard, startled out of her calm, asked sharply.

"Down to the ranch. La Perdita, it's called—it's at Merriwell, down Gilroy way."

"Is it furnished, Will?"

"There's some furniture there. The tenants locked it all in the upstairs rooms, I believe. They only used the downstairs. This is Tuesday. We have to be out of this house by next Tuesday. You girls and Ben make any arrangements you like, or else plan to come with me down to the Merriwell place. It's sudden, but it's been coming on a long time ad we have to move fast because this buyer is an eastern man who rented the Packer's place next door to us last summer; he went over the place one day, and he wants it. Next Tuesday morning, about eleven, I'm going to put my bag in the car and get out. Any one who wants to go with me can go; any one who can make a better arrangement is welcome to it! I've closed your accounts at the bank; whatever you girls have is yours. If you want any suggestions I'll be up in my room."

He went out of the library and the remaining members of the family looked at one another.

"We couldn't—we couldn't go live in a place like that!" Joyce stammered.

"We'll just be patient," Mrs. Ballard said, "and work it out somehow so that it won't be one bit bad! We'll find some picturesque little place, and Ben'll get something interesting to do, and perhaps one of the girls will go into a tea shop or something."

"Mother," Joyce said, "Dad wouldn't kill himself, would he?"

"I don't think your father is very well," Mrs. Ballard answered gravely. "I never heard him talk the way he did today in all the twenty-six years we've been married. No, I don't think he'd ever think of anything like suicide. Well, we mustn't worry about things before they happen. I'll run up and talk this over quietly with daddy. He's beside himself with anxiety of course, and I think he's ashamed that he can't do for you what other fathers do."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hold a Mirror to Your Manners

If I were to ask you how a certain friend of yours says, "How do you do", how another friend acknowledges an introduction, how another says "Thank you" you would, no doubt, be able to tell me at once and most definitely.

But if I were to ask you with what manner you performed these daily courtesies, could you answer so quickly and so definitely? I wonder!

Very few of us "see ourselves as others see us" in the hundreds of social contacts that instantly reveal our charm of manner, or the lack of it.

Want to check up on yourself? Police yourself with your mirror. Don't cheat! Don't be self-conscious. Do and say these things just as you naturally do and say them.

Walk right up to the longest mirror in your house, hold out your hand, and say, "How do you do?"

What do you see? What do you hear? What you do see and hear is what other people see and hear. And if you don't think it makes the impression you'd like to make, here's your chance to change it, to practice saying these words of greeting, or of acknowledging an introduction so that the first impression of you clicks.

How's your smile as you "make believe" you're greeting a friend? Or don't you smile? Or do you force a smile to your lips and not smile with your eyes? Or do you grimace instead of smiling your greeting? Or are your words brusque or staccato, your expression deadpan? If you were being introduced, do you think the person would like you on first sight?

Now make believe you're answering your own doorbell. Welcome a friend. Is your manner really welcoming? Let's say a salesman is at your door—it won't hurt you to be polite: he's trying to earn a living. If you must say "No", do you say it with kindness?

Have a little mirror practice on your shopping manners. See how you say "Thank you" and "Please" to a tired salesgirl. Do you say these words so that they charmingly come to life? Or do you usually forget to say them? If so, get a head start now by practicing this novel and pleasant experience!

Now here's the most difficult mirror test. Imagine that someone has told you a funny story, an excruciatingly funny story—perhaps that story you heard last Sunday. Have yourself a good laugh before the mirror. A self-conscious laugh doesn't count; a boisterous laugh does count—against you. What do you think about the way you laugh?

Use your mirror for a manners "make-up."

Motto For Public Library:

"Let No Profane Person Enter"

A public library is a great blessing for which we can express our thankfulness by our courtesy to the library attendants to the other users of the library and to the "Human books, with kindly voices, winning looks".

If we have good library manners, "Quiet" is our motto. We enter quietly; we are quiet while in the library; we leave quietly. We are punctilious about doing nothing that will disturb another reader. We do not whisper or even talk low in the reading room for fear of disturbing readers who are trying to concentrate.

We ask politely for a book or for any information from the librarian. And we say "Thank you" for the service, no matter how small or no matter how much in the line of duty.

We don't do any ugly things with our hands —finger our faces or our eyes or our nose or our ears, fidget with our necklaces, or jingle our bracelets or bracelet-charms. We don't constantly clear our throat— I've never been able to explain why this is such a prevalent library-habit—or bite our fingernails as we read, or blow our nose with blasting sounds, or cough or sneeze without covering our mouth. We take up only the space allotted to the particular seat we are occupying.

Most important of all we handle with thoughtful care and respect these books which don't belong to us but which we are privileged to enjoy. We turn the pages from the upper right-hand corner. We do not dog-ear the pages to keep our place, and we do not moisten a finger as we turn the pages of a book. We make no mark in a book or on a book, and we do not place anything (such as a glass of water or umbrella or a bag) on a book.

The thoughtful and careful library patron is a grace to a library. He is grateful for the inspiration and happiness and comfort that books give. The thoughtless and careless user is a disgrace to a library and to himself. He treats the librarians and other readers discourteously and abuses the books.

If a library could speak, I am sure it would choose for itself the words of the inscription over the door of the old library at Berne, "Let no profane person enter!"

Books are mannerly companions to us, and we should be mannerly companions to them!

SARNIA GRIDDERS OUT OF FOOTBALL FOR THE DURATION

Imperials, a Power in the O.R.F.U. for Years, Decide Against Playing During War Time

BLOW TO UNION

Late Ormond Beach 'Bummer' Stirling and Alex Hayes Will Long be Remembered

Sarnia, Ont., July 11—(CP)—Sarnia's power-laden Imperials, which steam-rollered to ten Ontario rugby football union championships in 11 years, became a war casualty today. The Western Ontario team has decided to withdraw from active competition "for the duration."

News of the action was divulged last night, three days after directors of the Imperial Athletic Association decided to withdraw the team. Father M. J. Lynch, of Toronto, President of the O.R.F.U., was notified of the step by letter on Tuesday.

Imperials jumped into the senior ranks in 1929 and exploits of the team—and individual players—will live long in the memory of football followers. The kings of the O.R.F.U. won the league title the last nine years and in 1934 and 1936 ploughed through all opposition to win the Canadian championship.

Toronto Balmy Beach alone interrupted the reign of the imps, winning the O.R.F.U. crown in 1930. Beaches also swept to the Dominion championship that year.

Three Great Stars

Big cogs in the star-studded Imperial machine swere the towering forms of the late Ormond Beach, Hugh (Bummer) Stirling and Alex Hayes. Other players who gained recognition included Norm Perry, who later became Mayor of Sarnia, Mike Clawson, Pat Butler, Pat Parsons, Johnny Baker, Johnny Manore, Rocky Parsaca and Gil Putnam.

Beach, killed in a refinery tank explosion here Sept. 22, 1938, was one of Canada's all-time greats.

Stirling, rated by many as Canada's No. 1 kicker with his mammoth spirals, was chosen for Canadian Press All-Star O.R.F.U. recognition from 1933 to 19938 inclusive and hit the all-eastern line-up in 1934 and 1938.

Sarnia's withdrawal now leaves Toronto Balmy Beach, Hamilton Cubs and Peterborough Orfuns in the group. Cubs were re-admitted to the league a short time ago, filling the spot vacated by Montreal Westmounts after the 1939 season.

Robertson Trophy For Men's Doubles Stays in Belleville

The Robertson Trophy emblematic of the men's doubles lawn bowling championship of Belleville and district remains in Belleville following the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club's invitation men's double tournament held here yesterday. The local pair, Clarence Clapp and Irvie Hefkey bowled down some strong bowls to win the tournament with four games high, while the team of Ward and Peacock of Oshawa were second and were awarded the H. A. Fish Trophy.

Forty sets of doubles participated in the tournament played at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club yesterday afternoon and evening, each pair playing four 12-end matches, making 80 players to compete in the tournament. Clubs from Stirling, Brighton, Kingston, Madoc, Cobourg, Campbellford, Oshawa, Deseronto as well as the home club were represented. Besides the various silver trophies competed for, valuable prizes were awarded including Kenwood blankets, motor rugs and other much-sought men's apparel.

The results of the tournament were:

Four wins high for the Robertson Trophy—Clapp and Hefkey (Belleville); second and winners of the Fish Cup—Ward and Peacock (Oshawa).

Frankie Mann Sets Hot Pace Among Jockeys

Montreal, July 11—(CP)— In a comeback that many Montreal horsemen regard as the Canadian equivalent of that of Don Meade in the United States, Frankie Mann of Toronto is setting a hot pace among jockeys on Quebec tracks.

Since he was granted his licence by the Province of Quebec Racing Association this summer, Mann has ridden 29 winners, and has been second on 22 occasions.

Mann was refused a licence by the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association, which controls Ontario tracks, in the spring of 1937 following charges that he was connected with a gang which was alleged to have made efforts to fix races in Toronto. He denied the charges.

For three years after that, Mann was on the ground, driving a truck for George Hardy, President of the Thoroughbred Breeders Association of Canada, the organization that recommended him to the P.Q.R.A. A year ago he was reinstated by the I.C.R.A. and permitted to gallop horses, but was not given a rider's licence.

Frankie was born at Nottingham, England, and came to Canada when he was seven. He became an apprentice rider for J. C. Fletcher of Toronto and later went to the Audley Farm stable and then to the Nevada Stock Farm. He remained as head rider for that stable for two years before returning to Toronto where he rode for the Seagram Stable and then for the stable trained by Harry Giddings of Oakville, Ont.

The charges of participation in the alleged fixing of races came in the fall of 1936.

NEWARK BEARS IN SECOND PLACE IN INT. LEAGUE

One of the Main Reasons for High Standing is Every Player is Potential Home-Run Hitter

DEFEAT CHIEFS

Montreal Royals Alone in Third Place by Nosing Out Toronto Leafs 2-1

By The Associated Press

One of the main reasons Newark Bears are in second place in the International League race today is the fact that every man in the lineup is a potential home run hitter—a fact that has been amply demonstrated the last five days. Bears have won six of seven games during this period and have banged out sixteen fourbaggers.

Last night Mike Chartak, outfielder, supplied the power to give Bears a 6-5 victory over Syracuse Chiefs. Mike poled out three homers to bring his total for the season to 14, and batted in five runs.

The Bruins failed to gain ground on the league leading Rochester Red Wings, however, because the Wings put on some fireworks of their own, scoring six runs in the ninth to beat Buffalo 10-8.

Montreal Royals took undisputed possession of third place by nosing out Toronto 2-1, after Jersey City and Baltimore had split a doubleheader. Jersey's Little Giants won the nightcap 6-5 after dropping the opener 17-3, to hang on to fourth place.

Kemp Wicker bested Phil Marchildon in a pitcher's battle to chalk up his 11th victory for the Royals. Each man allowed only five hits in the abbreviated game, called in the seventh to allow Leafs to catch a train. Both Montreal runs were scored in second inning on a walk and two hits.

TENNIS

The Quinte Tennis Club netsters continued in their winning ways in the Trent Valley Tennis League by taking five of six matches from their city rivals, the West Side Club on the former's courts last evening. The Quinte netsters have won their three series played to date and are leading the Trent Valley net loop without a loss of games. They have won 16 out of the 18 matches played in league competition this season.

Yesterday the only match dropped by the Quinte Club was the second men's doubles, the east end crowd taking the other five games, as the match lost went into three sets before the West Side pair won. All other matches were won in two sets by the Quinte players.

The results:

Men's Singles—H. Kerr (Quinte) defeated M. Clare (West Side) 6-2 and 7-5.

Men's Doubles 1—L. Lennox and D. Maybee (West Side) defeated E. Wickerson and W. Hurst (Quinte) 6-2, 5-7 and 6-2.

2—A. Wilkes and G. Wishart (Quinte) defeated R. Lennox and C. Riddell (West Side) 7-5 and 8-6.

Mixed Doubles. 1—G. Atyeo and Jo Cruji (Quinte) defeated G. Sinfield and R. Wilkes. (West Side) 6-4 and 6-2.

2.—G. Barclay and Muriel Wardner (Quinte) defeated D. Fraser and D. Fox (West Side) 6-2 and 6-3.

Ladies' Doubles—M. Howard and A. Cruji (Quinte) won over O. Delaney and I Walsh (West Side) 6-3 and 6-3.

"If I was joining up again", said Mr. Picobac, "I'd get myself into the Air Force."

The veteran of the last Great War took a long draw on his pipe and exhaled a smoke ring of fragrant Picobac which, like a plane, sailed upward amidst a dissolving blue cloud.

"Of course", continued he, "I'm not saying a word against the army. I was an infantry man myself. And thank God for the navy. They are all necessary—absolutely. But there's something about the Air Force . . . I don't know what it is."

"I know what it is", said Betty, his young daughter-in-law. "It's that snappy blue uniform. I've a good mind to join up myself."

"But you can't", said Mr. Picobac. "Nor me either. That's the trouble."

If you have not smoked Picobac lately get some today and experience the finer quality and flavour. Canadian Burley is constantly improving. Picobac, "the Pick of Canada's Burley Crop", gets better and better, too.

STIRLING BOY WINS KID KAR CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeating 75 entrants, 12-year-old Donald McGowan of Stirling flashed across the finish line at 83 miles per hour to win the annual Kid Kar race at Belleville Tuesday night. The winner claims the Canadian championship and will race at Akron, O., in August under the auspices of the Kinsmen's club. Four previous races were won by Belleville boys.

Patrick Knowles and Wendy Barrie co-stars of the year's top hit, "Women in War," which opens next week at the McCarthy Theatre.

SHELL 'OILERS' AND CEMENTMEN DOMINATE LOOP

Oilers Awarded Game from Juniors When Umpire Chases Players and They Did Not Have Enough Men to Continue

CORBY'S NOSED OUT

Loft's Homer for Point Anne Proved Winning Margin in 5-4 Contest

Shell "Oilers" and the Point Anne "Cementmen" continued to dominate the Belleville Softball League as the former were awarded a 9-0 decision over the Uptown juniors at Coleman Flats, while the latter eked out a 5-4 win over the Corby A.C. at the Cement Village, the "Cementmen" coming from behind to score the winning run in the eighth.

At Coleman Flats with the "Oilers" leading 15 to 7 in the seventh, Umpire Ken Colling chased player Whiting of the Uptowns to the bench, forcing the juniors to forfeit the game as they had no substitutes to replace Whiting and the game was awarded to the Oilers by a 9-0 count. Uptowns took a decided lead by cuffing Eddie Schrieder's slants hard in the second frame to score six runs, but Schrieder started his team mates in a third inning rally as he hit a home run with the bases loaded, Sero, following with another circuit blow that resulted in Steve Hook being replaced by Mike Powers on the Juniors' mound. From then on Schrieder and the Oilers were coasting until the Uptowns could no longer field a team.

Cementmen Keep Pace

Down at Point Anne the "Cementmen" kept pace with the league leaders by winning a 5-4 nod over Gerald Barriage's Corby's A. C. An error and two hits gave the Ox Point nine two in the first while Luffman helped his own cause by hitting for the circuit in the second. Green drove in a run in the seventh and Loft poled out another four-base hit in the eighth, the hit that proved the winning run. Jim Barriage hit for the circuit with one aboard in the third to give Corby's their initial scores, while Cy Barriage, Kiser and St. Louis hit in succession to give the Corby's two more in the eighth.

St. Louis with a triple and two singles led the visitors on the attack, Cy Barriage getting two one base blows and J. Barriage his homer. Phil Loft with a home run and three singles, was the big hitter for the homesters, Mike Whalen getting two one base blows, aside from Luffman's four bagger. Friday it's Point Anne versus the "Oilers" here. The box score:

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

While picking up a cup of java in a down-town restaurant the other night (and we mean late), we ran into Frankie Collins and Wicky Ross, two former C. O. B. L.'ers of years gone past, engaged in a heated argument. Collins played third for the Petes when Wicky was racing around the hot corner headin' for the plate with runs for Belleville. At any rate the seat of the controversy seemed to hinge around the question of who was the fastest man ever to play in the C. O. B. L. Wicky contended that the late Herbie Wolff was the speediest player ever to run the base paths of the C. O. B. L. while Frankie said he was sure the late Ray Sherritt was the "Ty Cobb" of the old Central loop. "Why Peeney Mills has often remarked to me that he never caught "The Wolf" (as Herbie Wolff was called in those days) stealing second base," upheld Ross, as the argument waxed long and ultimately failed to prove conclusively the question at hand.

We were inclined to favour Collins' choice of Sherritt, as we contended Ray was like a steel trap and quick to sense an opening. However, we took the question before Peeney Mills yesterday and Mills still contends that Herbie Wolff was the fastest player ever to leave first on an attempt steal in the old C.O.B.L. "Wolff seemed to possess the faculty of sensing when the pitcher was going to deliver and he always got the jump. Sherritt was a much faster thinker and took advantage of every minute detail and hesitation committed by his opponents and could outguess his opponents more readily than Wolff might, but when it came to unadulterated speed Herbie Wolff was tops and in a class by himself." was Peeney's contention in the argument. However, the boys all forgot one player who got down to second base via the base stealing route just about as often as either of the above, we refer to Dr. Harry Blakely of the old Nationals, who we understand is joining the ranks of the benedicts soon. When Dr. Harry was in high gear, he was moving fast, but Harry would not attempt rough play in any manner.

Captain Moffatt of the R.C.A.F., dropped in on us today seeking the services of Don Thomas and your reporter to umpire tonight's Flyer versus Simpson senior girls softball war charity game at Trenton. The Simpson girls play a good brand of softball in the Sunnyside senior loop and it should be interesting to see just how a team of men will cope with a fiery girls' nine, who have nothing to fear from their male opponents.

Do you remember when Dizzy Dean was ordered to return to duty as starting pitcher for the Chicago Cubs two years ago today — sore arm or no sore arm. Owner Phil K. Wrigley announced he had directed his $185,000 hurling hand to "be ready to pitch within a week." Dean told his boss he was "ready to go." Dean is now with Tulsa of the Texas League.

The folly of appearing at a ball game with but nine players in uniform was demonstrated at Coleman Flats when the Uptown juniors were forced to forfeit their game to the "Oilers" after Player Whiting had been tossed out for abusive language. The Oilers were leading 15 to 7 in the seventh, after Ed Schieder had rallied his team mates with a home run with bases loaded. In the seventh Sero tried to steal second, this corner having been called in to base umpire and we called Sero safe. Second baseman Whiting objected loudly, claiming he had tagged Sero for a third out. Following some words, Whiting was warned and after the third he continued his baiting and we waved him from the the game not realizing the juniors only had nine players in uniform which made little difference, however. The kids were forced to forfeit the game and we then asked Sero if he had been tagged. Nickie said he had been touched so it looks as though the whole issue rests on our shoulders and no wonder the juniors call this corner "blind Tom." ..

Actually nearly all of the close decisions went against the kids during the game, which in a way assisted in their giving vent to their pent-up feelings and no doubt prompted Whiting in his baitings. Admittedly wrong on the play, we hope, however, the players learned the folly of such language, although we always admire a fighting ball player and this goes for Whiting and the juniors, who gave us a piece of their mind. While all of this was going on the Point Anne "Cementmen" were having their own troubles downing Corby's A. C. 5 to 4 to strengthen their hold on second place, the Oilers leading the parade.

BOSE IS CHARGED WITH PLAN TO WRECK MEMORIAL

EVENT OF 1756

London, July 11—(AP)—A plan to demolish the monument to Europeans who died in the black hole of Calcutta nearly two centuries ago caused the arrest of the Indian Leftist leader Subhas Chandra Bose it was revealed in the House of Commons today.

Bose was jailed July 2, but at that time it was announced merely that he had been arrested under the defence of India regulations.

Today L. S. Amery, Secretary for India, told the House Bose was arrested because he planned to wipe out the memorial.

The "black hole" was a guardroom, 18 by 14 feet, into which 146 European prisoners were crowded during intense summer heat when the Nawab of Bengal captured Calcutta in 1756. Next day only 23 of them were taken out alive. A black marble slab marks the spot and a monument erected in 1902 commemorates their martyrdom.

AUSTRALIA PLANS FULL PUBLICITY

Commonwealth's Papers, Magazines and Movies to Publicize War Effort

Melbourne, July 11—(AP) — All the strength of Australia's propaganda media—newspapers, magazines and motion pictures—has been thrown behind an effort to publicize the commonwealth's war effort.

Sir Keith Murdoch, a correspondent in the First Great War and managing director of the Melbourne Herald, is in charge of this effort as director-general of information. Journalists throughout Australia have rallied behind him, many of them serving without remuneration as does Sir Keith.

Prime Minister Menzies instructede Sir Keith, who recently replaced Sir Henry Gullett in the Department of Information, to present the war in its truest colors without minimizing reverses and by giving due weight to all factors that would contribute to a balanced judgement of the situation.

The Information Department provides newspapermen with access to official information and furnishes expert commentaries on the news.

The department also broadcasts news and commentaries over a domestic network and by shortwave to Europe, America, India, South Africa and the Far East. These broadcasts are made in English, French, German, Dutch, Spanish, Italian and Africaans.

"The following day the airdrome buildings were bombed and several fires started, while another raid was carried out by bombers supported by fighters. The latter destroyed three CR-42's (Italian planes) on the ground by machine-gun fire.

"All our aircraft returned safely from these operations.

"Large formations of enemy aircraft raided Malta yesterday. Our fighters intercepted and shot down two in flames. A third probably was destroyed. Damage was slight. Casualties were one civilian killed, three injured, twenty goats and one bull killed."

BRITISH DENY ROME REPORT

Battleship Hood and Aircraft Carrier Ark Royal Not Damaged Nor Any Hits Registered Says Admiralty

Rome, July 11 (AP).—The Italian high command claimed today that Italian bombing planes had damaged the battle cruiser Hood and hit the aircraft carrier Ark Royal in an attack on the British fleet south of the Balearic Islands Tuesday.

Air bombs set fire to the 42,000-ton Hood, world's largest warship, the communique claimed, while two heavy bombs fell on the deck of the 22,000-ton Ark Royal.

(The French claimed to have scored hits on the Hood with their shore batteries during the British naval action against French fleet units at Mers El-Kebir July 3. Mers El-Kebir is about 250 miles south of the Balearic islands. The claim was not confirmed in London.))

Admiralty's Denial.

London, July 11 (CP).—The Admiralty issued a statement today denying the Italian claim that Italian planes had seriously damaged the British battle cruiser Hood and the aircraft carrier Ark Royal. The statement follows:

"An Italian communique issued this morning states that H.M.S. Ark Royal sustained a direct hit with a bomb and that H.M.S. Hood was set on fire. A report has been received from the Flag Officer commanding the British forces concerned that although several bombs fell close to his ships no direct hits were secured and that there was no damage or casualties.

"It was this force which, as stated in the official admiralty communique of July 10, destroyed four enemy aircraft and damaged seven others, three of which are unlikely to have reached their base."

MIGHTY FRENCH BATTLESHIP "RICHELIEU" PUT OUT OF ACTION BY NAVY

Here is the 35,000-ton French warship Richelieu, largest and most powerful battle cruiser ever built, which has been damaged and put out of action in the port of Dakar, French West Africa, by British naval action. The monster battleship is thus rendered incapable of being used by Germany or Italy—or by the Petain government of France—against Britain. An attack by depth charges, followed up by aerial torpedoes, left the Richelieu listing badly to port and down at the stern, according to the admiralty.

Entire Road System Of Hastings County In Good Condition

Road Superintendent Langlois reported this morning that the entire road system of Hastings County was in good condition at the present time, with the county having just completed its 1940 program of application of asphalt and tar and calcium chloride dust layers throughout the various sections of the county. Application of calcium chloride through the village of Coe Hill was the final stretch of road on the program, he said, with this work being completed last evening.

The only new work under way at the present time was the grading of the Foxboro-Madoc road near the village of Ivanhoe, where it was proposed to lay 1 1-2 miles of pavement.

A very small program of rock-surfacing was on the books for this season, with the recent completion of re-surfacing eight miles of road between Cordova Mines and Marmora being one of the major stretches planned. The only crushing going on at the present time was in the vicinity of Coe Hill, with the west four miles of the road between Purdyville and Coe Hill receiving the crushed rock.

FRONT TIRE BLOWS OUT, CAR PASSENGER HURT

When a front wheel tire blew out near Marysville an automobile driven by Carl Gray, Donald Street, crashed into the ditch on Highway No. 2, some 16 miles east of Belleville yesterday at noon. Miss Mary Gray, who was a passenger in the vehicle sustained multiple lacerations, needing the attention of a physician to stop the flow of blood. Provincial Constable W. E. Smith investigated and was told the tire blew out, while Gray was proceeding at a moderate rate of speed, causing the vehicle to swerve and crash into a cement culvert. The car was damaged to a considerable extent.

AT THE CAPITOL

"While New York Sleeps"

From all reports it would seem that Messrs. Whalen and Chandler, aided by lovely Jean Rogers, who scored in "Time Out for Murder," have really got themselves into a jam this time. They've caught the killer before the killing, printed the story before it happens and then are embarrassed no end to find—the same man murdered again!

"While New York Sleeps" starts out innocently enough with Michael Whalen and Chick Chandler getting away from it all by starting out for a month's vacation in the country. They're hardly inside the cottage door when the telephone rings and the city editor of the newspaper breaks the news that Steve Martin, insurance detective and friend of Whalen's, has committed suicide.

The boys hurry back to the city, jump into the middle of the case, and set about proving that Martin has really been murdered.

It isn't a very simple thing to prove and with the police department, the underworld and their own newspaper against them, the Roving Reporters find their noses for news nearly get their necks in a noose.

"Pioneers of the West"

This latest detailing of the Dumas-esque doings of Robert Livingston Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo as they chase wrongdoers over the prairies adds another support to the firm foundation of their repute for supplying action, excitement and thrills. It has all that a western requires. Vital contributing elements are injected with polish. As indicated by the title, this deals with the boys' adventures when they aid a group of settlers, newly come to the west, who fall into the hands of Noah Beery, a slick local politician. The coming of a railroad is reason for Beery to attempt to wrest the properties from the settlers for resale to the railroad. He attempts no end of dirty work and skullduggery, but to no avail. There's no beating the Three Mesquiteers when they hear of human distress.

Winning National Loop Flag Will be Highly Prized Honor Not a Ticket to Guillotine

In Past Years Winner Had to Suffer Humiliation of Playing the Yanks

REDS APPEAR BEST

Will Have Work Cut Out to Stay on Top of Brooklyn and the Giants

(By Bill White, Associated Press Sports Writer)

You can hardly blame the National Leaguers for being excited. For the first time in five years, winning the league championship will be a highly prized honor—not a one way ticket to the guillotine.

In the last four years if a team won the pennant, it simply meant that the unfortunates had to suffer the humiliation of playing the Yankees at least four games.

But the National League All-Stars, as they went back today to their various teams to resume the business of selecting a league champion, did so with a lilt and a swagger that has been noticeably missing in the past.

For out in St. Louis they had seen for themselves what they had been reading all spring and summer—that the Yankees are just another ball club (and not a very good one, at that) this year.

So you'll pardon the emancipated National Leaguers the rest of the summer if they act a little cocky. They can hardly wait to see how it feels to enter a world series without having their admirers shake their heads sadly and murmur, "tsk, tsk. Too bad."

At the moment Cincinnati Reds have the inside track, being currently atop the league by the slimmest of margins.

Whether they will stay there depends on how they survive the series beginning tonight with Brooklyn. Bucky Walters will go to the mound for the Reds, and either Curt Davis or Whit Wyatt will draw the assignment for the Dodgers.

In the American League the Detroit Tigers open against the disappointing Washington Senators and the Cleveland Indians meet Philadelphia, themselves some 15 and 1-2 games out of the first place and hence hardly a serious pennant threat.

CANNIFTON NINE FORGING AHEAD IN HASTINGS LOOP

Score 7-6 Win Over Shannonville and Now Tied With This Team for Second Place

LATTA WINS 3-1

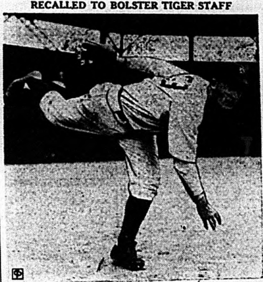
Winning their last three consecutive games, after getting away to a poor start during the early part of the schedule, the champion Cannifton nine in the South Hastings League are fast forging their way to the top of the league and with their 7-6 win over the Shannonville nine at "Mohawkville" last evening are now tied with Shannonville for second place. Latta forged to the top of the heap for the first time this season when they beat out the Foxboro nine at Latta 3-1 to force the losers into the cellar.

The homesters got away to an early lead at Shannonville last evening in their game against the Cannifton nine but during the later innings faded away as the visitors staged a belated rally to pull the game out of the fire. Ken Juby started on the mound for the homesters but gave way to Barberstock when the Cannifton deluge began and was chalked for the loss. May, Cannifton's new dark horse hurler went the route for the victors and after being nicked for hits and runs in the early innings settled away to hold the Shannonville lads off the score sheet to chalk up his second win of the season in as many starts.

Shutout ball was played over at Latta until the fourth inning when the homesters broke away to score three runs and as it turned out, to win the ball game as the Foxboro lads were only able to count once and that in the final inning as they made a desperate but futile effort to match the score.

Both pitchers went the route with Dunning hurling for the winners while Vince Guay tossed them up for the visitors. Errors crept in to account for scores on both sides as the Foxboro infield play slipped up to allow the homsters easy counters. Foxboro scored their only run as the result of a walk to Norm Guay, who stole second and third to cross the plate on a passed ball.

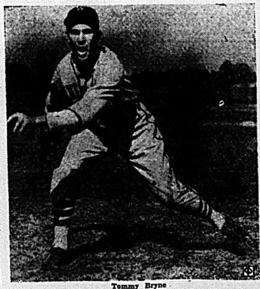
RECALLED TO BOLSTER TIGER STAFF



Clay Smith

Right-hander Clay Smith has been recalled by the Detroit Tigers to bolster their mound staff. With Beaumont, Smith captured 12 and lost four games. He was purchased from Buffalo last year and was given a trial season, but sent back to the minors.

YANKS GET ANOTHER ACE ROOKIE



Tommy Bryne

Star pitcher for Wake Forest college, Charlotte, N.C., Tommy Bryne has been signed with the Yankee-owned Newark Bears of the International league. Bryne, a six-footer and a star for two years, is a south-paw and is in his second year at the Deacon school. He'll go to the Bears at once.

Bombs Were Found In Philadelphia During Convention

Valentine made the disclosure in a talk to his detective force in which he asserted that the bomb explosion at the World's Fair July 4 which killed two detectives "is just the beginning".

The voice of the veteran peace officer choked with emotion as he spoke of the two victims of the bomb and declared that the department was out to "get" the perpetrators of the plot, convict them and "have them sentenced to their proper punishment—electrocution."

Trading Still Dull On Produce Markets

Toronto, July 11—Butter developed a steady tone in quiet trading yesterday on the Toronto open produce market. Eggs and cheese remained unchanged in price.

Trading in butter was light as buyers awaited publication of cold storage stock figures by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This came too late in the day to have any appreciable influence on the market. Offerings were ample. First-grade Ontario creamery solids were steady at 21 1-4c.

Eggs were also steady. A slight surplus of Grade A large stock developed in the afternoon, fresh receipts being a little more than the market could absorb. Trading was fair throughout the day. Grade C eggs advanced fractionally to a range of 15c to 15 1-2c in the graded section.

Fire in Dr. A. C. Locke's Summer Home on Stoco Lake Soon Extinguished With Little Damage

Tweed, (Special) — Fire, which fortunately, was not attended by serious results, broke out at a cottage on Stoco Lake, owned by Dr. A. C. Locke, Belleville. The fire was discovered by Mrs. M. Drinkwater who lives nearby. Her attention was attracted by a cloud of smoke which on investigation was found to be coming from an upstairs window. As no one was in the cottage at the time, Mrs. Drinkwater turned in the alarm. Responding in a few moments Tweed fire brigade soon extinguished the blaze.

A section of the upstairs floor between two joints was burned but little other damage resulted except from the smoke and water.

Dr. and Mrs. Locke and family had been at the cottage during the night and on leaving for Belleville on Wednesday morning, extinguished all fires and lights. The cause of the fire has not been established and the damage is covered by insurance.

CANADA TO SEND

The new Defence Minister, in a brief statement indicated some of the plans and problems before the Defence Department.

Among other things he indicated:

C.A.S.F. to Recruit 40,000

Immediate recruitment of 40,000 additional men in the Canadian Active Service Force.

Recruitment up to full war strength of the 90 units of the non-permanent-active militia.

Canada is now "on its own" for equipment.

Bren-gun carriers and rifles will shortly be ready to send overseas.

Bren-gun deliveries are being made ahead of schedule.

Many Needed For Militia

(Later, in a national broadcast, Col. Ralston repeated his statement that 40,000 men would be recruited for the C.A.S.F. and Air Minister power said many thousands of men were needed for militia training.)

Col. Ralston also expressed a strong hope that physically fit veterans would join the C.A.S.F. and militia units to stiffen morale and assist in training.

The Defence Minister's concise, clear-cut statement was made on the spur of the moment in reply to a question by Conservative Leader Hanson as to the necessity of further overseas aid in manpower and equipment.

It came during debate on an amendment to the Defence Act to provide for appointment of a separate Naval Minister and for the Air Minister to act as Associate Defence Minister with full powers in absence of the Defence Minister. The measure was given final reading.

In his statement, Col. Ralston said "a very large body (of troops) will be proceeding overseas shortly." Disposition of the remainder of the 2nd division created a difficult situation.

"We have to take account of the situation in Canada, the requirements here, and the possibilities which may arise with respect to the defence of Canada and the necessity for having trained troops here ready to move should the emergency demand it," he said.

76,000 In Canada

There were approximately 76,000 troops in Canada at present for various duties and in training. Troops on special duty at outposts of Empire or of this continent had had to take their own equipment, which would otherwise have been used by training forces here.

Col. Ralston said there were shortages of certain items of personal and unit equipment. In the last two months Britain had to all intents ceased to be a source of heavy equipment, as had been expected. The situation regarding the United States had also changed in that time.

"The result is that Canada is very much on her own in regard to the supplying of equipment," the Defence Minister said. Definite plans had been drawn up, however, for the production or procurement of equipment otherwise. If part of the 2nd division were sent overseas, a good deal of its heavy equipment would be procured there.

Col. Ralston held organization of civilian home guards would be unnecessary in view of the decision to recruit the 90 militia units to full strength.

He hoped all veterans would not go into the veterans' home guard. Many had joined the C.A.S.F. and he hoped they would continue to do so, to "stiffen" morale. Notwithstanding veterans' desire to get together, he hoped many would also join the militia to assist in training and encouragement of "the new soldiers who are coming along."

No Limit To Number.

"As far as I am concerned, there is at the present time no limit to the number who, if they qualify for that purpose, can be recruited to the reserve."

When two Conservative members suggested Canada should have had a larger navy to protect her shores, the prime minister recalled that Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1911 had proposed a complete naval unit on each coast, composed of a battleship, cruisers, destroyers and submarines, but the people had turned it down.

Mr. King felt that was a sound policy and had always advocated it, but no government, regardless of party, could act without the backing of public opinion.

Four Canadian destroyers, including the Fraser, lost off the French coast, were sent to European waters to co-operate with the British Navy, at the request of the British government, Mr. King said.

Steps Taken.

"Steps have been taken to help to some extent to replace the weakening of our own defence forces as a consequence of our destroyers going across, but I would not wish to disclose at the present time what those particular steps are," he added. The facts might be disclosed to members by some method to be decided later.

T. L. Church (Conservative, Toronto-Broadview) suggested during the debate the possibility of differences arising between the defence minister and associate minister, but Col. Ralston foresaw no such danger. He had proposed the arrangement because of his confidence that he and Air Minister Power would work in complete harmony. Any delegation of powers would be matter between themselves and they would "stand by each other", the minister being responsible in the end.

First Reading Given.

First reading was given a bill presented by Prime Minister Mackenzie King establishing the new National War Services Department, to be administered by Hon. J. G. Gardiner.

The House also approved a government amendment to the Income War Tax schedule exempting all warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men in Canada's armed forces from the two per cent national defence tax on service pay and allowances. Previously only overseas officers and men or those engaged in sea and air operations in Canada were so exempted. Warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men had previously been exempted from income tax.

BRITAIN'S

"Tonight thousands of our soldiers will be on the alert, waiting for an attack which may come in several places at dawn."

He did not say what dawn and most members of Parliament interpreted this remark as intended to emphasize that Britain's defence forces always are ready nowadays.

Concern Increases Greatly

Britain's concern over the situation of Ireland has increased greatly. The government, it is reported, practically has abandoned hope now of an agreement between Eire and Northern Ireland on a plan for common defence of their island.

Britain fears Ireland may be involved and a blockade of Britain then attempted. With Germans already controlling the continental channel coasts, their presence at Britain's back door would be menacing.

It is only 22 miles across the North Channel from Donaghadee, near Belfast, to Port Patrick, Scotland; 61 miles across the Irish Sea from Dublin to Holyhead, and 54 miles across St. George's Channel from Rosslare to Goodwick, Wales.

Premier Eamon de Valera of Eire is determined to maintain his country's strict neutrality and his appealed for a united Ireland to defend this neutrality. But Viscount Craigavon, Premier of Northern Ireland, equally is determined to maintain his country's present position as a part of the United Kingdom and a belligerent.

Only Tuesday night Ireland's Minister of Supply, Sean Lemass, warned his countrymen the danger of invasion or isolation was nearer and graver and that it might possibly come "this week or next."

"Our greatest danger," he said, "is invasion. Invasion will be resisted and, apart from our own efforts, may produce a counter invasion." This would be from Britain.

London accepts the situation Premier de Valera will not allow the landing of British troops in Eire as a precautionay, would consider this invasion by Britain.

No Intention of Invasion

"The Cabinet has no intention of invading Eire," observed the political correspondent of the London News Chronicle today. "All it can do, therefore, is to make preparations to meet with speed the first S.O.S. which comes from Dublin."

German planes resumed their daily raids on Britain in the darkness before dawn today. Two explosions were heard over a wide area in southeastern England after a plane had passed over. Fires were started, but quickly controlled.

Searchlights blazed and anti-aircraft batteries opened fire when an enemy plane was heard over a northeast England town. A British fighter was believed to have chased the raider out to sea.

The great scale of yesterday's German attack, which brought battles in which 150 planes took part, made the country especially alert, although some diplomatic observers thought Hitler was using these raids to prepare for a big peace offensive rather than a new Blitzkrieg.

"The latest story," said The Daily Express, "is that Hitler won't invade us just now. He may try going south to Africa before coming west to England.

"But we know this. Hitler must try to come here some day, because there is no other way in which he can win the war."

The paper, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, warned the country against going "to sleep again" after yesterday's British victory in driving back the mass raiders.

Few Persons Killed

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security said "a few persons" were killed ashore by these raids, directed chiefly against coast defences and shipping in the narrow Straits of Dover.

The Mediterranean, scene Tuesday of the Royal Navy's pursuit of an Italian battle squadron in the Ionian Sea, appeared quiet today. The Times, in commenting on what it called this Italian-British "brush," urged that there be no jeering of the Italians for fleeing after being hit with some loss of life.

"It may well be," said the paper, "that the Italian squadron was not unjustified in breaking off an action in which conditions were all in its opponents' favor."

The "fifth columnist" phase of Britain's home defence progressed with the formal outlawing of the "British Union," the organization headed by Sir Oswald Mosley and formerly known as the "British Union of Fascists." Sir Oswald and his leading aides were arrested May 23 and are now in prison.

Lord Craigavon Speaks to Commons

Belfast, Northern Ireland, July 11—(AP)—Lord Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, told the House of Commons today that Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire had definitely rejected his proposals for joint defence of the two parts of Ireland and that this ended the matter as far as he (Craigavon) was concerned.

Lord Craigavon declared that any suggestion that Northern Ireland should become neutral in the present conflict was "repugnant to every soul in loyal Ulster."

He added that Northern Ireland —a part of the United Kingdom—was at war and would stand by Britain and the Empire to the end.

FORMER PREMIER

Daladier Group Defended.

Many of the deputies of the extreme right jeered and both Jeanneney and Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies, defended the Daladier group.

Herriot declared the deputies "left on instructions from the government", which he himself had transmitted to them, on the ship Massilia, assigned to them at the government's order.

He said he tried to get them back in time for the assembly and failed. Jeanneny supported his statement.

"For my part," said Laval, "I say that it is not by leaving France that one can serve her best."

He reported the armistice committee at Wiesbaden had not yet replied to a government request for a ship to bring the party back to France.

Then he asked parliament to "avoid all that might impassion this debate" and to consider the incident closed.

(Le Petit Dauphinois, Grenoble newspaper, reported July 2 that Daladier, former cabinet ministers Georges Mandel, Cesar Campinchi and Yvon Delbos and other deputies left on the Massilia the day before the cabinet of Premier Paul Reynaud fell, intended to continue French resistance to Germany.

Refused Permission To Dock.

(The newspaper said the Massilia was refused permission to dock at Casablanca, French Morocco, and later was halted at sea and ordered to return to France.

(The German-controlled Brussels radio said July 5 the Massilia was overdue and missing. Later, foreign sources in Switzerland expressed belief the absent leaders were in a British port or imprisoned at Marseille.)

Havas said President Albert Lebrun was expected to resign soon, in view of the assembly's action yesterday giving the government of Premier Petain the power to rewrite the constitution, which then will be submitted to a referendum.

Petain is to become chief of the government and chief of the state under a system modeled after Fascist Italy.

Vice-premier Pierre Laval said the government planned to move again, this time to Perpignan, Havas said.

Dissension Seen.

After Laval thanked parliament in Petain's name for its vote and the assembly adjourned formally, Deputy Philippe Ferre leaped to his chair and cried out:

"Long live the republic, just the same!"

Many voices echoed his cry, but they soon were drowned out by shouts of "long live France!"

The third French republic, however, was dead and in its place stood a state in many respects similar to the Spanish Nationalist State of General Franco.

One notable difference is that Laval has promised the new constitution will be submitted to the French people for approval by referendum.

Iron Guardists

Most of the pro-Nazi Iron Guardists who have been catapulted from concentration camps into King Carol's government retained their posts today despite one leader's resignation and another's disappearance from the political stage.

Guardist leaders now outside the government include Horia Sima, "Fuehrer" who resigned after five days as Minister of Culture, and Gen. Ion Antonescu, arrested and then released yesterday on his promise not to engage in political activity.

Crosses and a memorial have been erected over the previously unmarked graves of Iron Guardists executed by the hundreds last September. Church services have been held in many parts of the nation for the purge victims, including 15 women whose deaths had been a secret.

Pro-Nazi party members have spoken of setting up a special tribunal to try those responsible for the executions. The pension which parliament voted to the widow of Premier Armand Calinescu, assassinated by Iron Guardists, has been cut off without official explanation.

Rome, July 11—(AP)—Italian Foreign Minister Ciano's Leghorn newspaper Il Telegrafo indicated today, as he returned from important conferences in Germany, that Germany and Italy had prevailed on Hungary to stay out of Rumania in order to avert a war in the Balkans which Il Telegrafo said might bring invasion by "non-Balkan powers."

Russia is considered in Rome to be the only "non-Balkan power" likely to try to expand in that zone.

Hungary's representatives were swung to holding off in their claims upon Rumania's district of Transylvania at yesterday's meeting at Munich. Count Ciano returned to report to Mussolini on this meeting as well as upon his conference with Hitler last Sunday.

Editor Giovanni Ansaldo, Ciano's mouthpiece, said Hitler and Ciano had assured Hungary's premier, Count Paul Teleky, and Foreign Minister Count Istvan Csaky, that "the present Balkan status quo will not be disturbed by anyone."

Ansaldo, writing from Munich, said the Hungarian diplomats were told to "stay still—we know your rights and when it is convenient we will provide for them in the general framework of the new European adjustment."

Ansaldo said Axis objections to a Hungarian move were twofold:

First, a Balkan upset would disturb the output of a vast farming region, thereby depriving Germany and Italy of food;

Second, "a Balkan conflict might give non-Balkan powers an opportunity to extend their influence or, even worse, their territorial possessions in the peninsula, which must not come about." Russia is considered in Rome to be the only non-Balkan power likely to try to expand in that zone.

5 NAZI PLANES

Enemy planes were reported over the southwest district also and in the southeastern town where two deaths were reported a Nazi plane machine-gunned civilians and a fire engine crew in a street and bombed and machine-gunned cattle in a marsh.

Bombs damaged business establishments in the town.

An Air Ministry communique announced that Royal Air Force fighters shot down a German bomber over the channel this morning.

Officials said that German losses during three weeks of air raiding against the British Isles totalled at least 75 planes, plus about the same number damaged and possibly forced down before reaching home. The total of German raiders shot down since the war started was placed at 147, and this week's figure at 38.

Another Nazi plane dropped two bombs on a northeastern town badly damaging many houses and causing several casualties.

Trenton

Trenton, July 11 — (Special)—Staging a late rally, the Air Force defeated the Miller Bros. 13 to 6, here last night to increase their lead over the other teams in the Trenton and District Softball League. The Air Force are now three games ahead of their nearest opponents, the Woolerites.

For six innings the game was a pitchers' duel with neither team having much of an edge. Farr, on the mound for the Air Force, struck out nine of the opposing batters and handed out only four walks. Hunter started on the mound for the Millers but was replaced by Istead in the sixth frame when he started to weaken.

At the end of the fifth inning the score was 2 to 1 for the Flyers but they collected two in the sixth, four in the seventh and five in the eighth to win the game. The best singles in the sixth and seventh singles in the sixt hand seventh and three in the ninth.

Gibson, for the R.C.A.F. was the most potent batter by collecting a homer in the third and two singles. Anderson and Davis with three singles apiece were the best for the Millers.

FEW CALLS RECEIVED FOR DOMESTIC HELP

Very few calls for farm help or for domestics are being received at the local employment office these days, with officials explaining the beginning of the camping season usually preludes a slackening-off in the demand for domestics. Many girls do not accompany their employers to summer camps, it was pointed out, while the slackening off in the demand for farm help was explained through fact that either farmers have completed their haying operations and do not require additional help, or that they have their summer's help already hired for the season.

QUITE EVIDENT MASTER DID NOT REALIZE SITUATION

Report of Investigation of Sinking of Arlington Filed Says Master Had No Knowledge of Conditions Developed in Engine Room

Toronto, July 11—(CP)—"It is quite evident the master did not realize the seriousness of the situation," declares F. H. Barlow, chairman of the commission investigating the sinking of the freighter Arlington in Lake Superior on May 1, in his report filed Wednesday with the Minister of Transport.

The report said: "There has been much speculation as to why the master (Captain F. J. Burke) was lost. When it is remembered that the master had no knowledge of the conditions which had developed in the engine room, and did not realize the vessel was helpless until such time as he rang for full speed ahead and failed to get a response except the ringing-off by the second engineer, it is quite evident to me that the master did not realize the seriousness of the situation."

Captain Fred Burke of the Arlington was the only man lost in the sinking, the rest of the men aboard being rescued by the freighter Collingwood.

The report continued: "According to the evidence, after the lifeboat had been lowered the master came out of the wheelhouse, walked down the steps, slipped and partly fell at the bottom, picked himself up and held up his hand to those in the lifeboat, then opened the door to his room and disappeared.

"After considering all the evidence I cannot help but think that the master in holding up his hand to those in the lifeboat, not realizing the seriousness of the situation, was intending that they should wait for him while he went into his cabin to secure a lifebelt and perhaps the ship's papers or personal effects.

"The evidence shows that the vessel listed very rapidly after the master went in to his room and went down almost immediately. The chief engineer did not, as was his duty, report to the master the fact that water was coming into the firehold and that the bulkhead had given way. Perhaps when the danger of attempting to pass to the forward end is considered, he ought not to be too severely censured.

"Both the chief engineer and the second engineer are deserving of favorable comment on the seamanlike manner in which they performed their duties with respect to saving the after-end crew."

The report also commended Capt. Thomas J. Carson of the Collingwood for his efficient handling of the rescue ship, which resulted in saving all those in the Arlington's lifeboat. He said: "If they had not manoeuvred so as to keep the lifeboat in the Collingwood's lee it is doubtful whether all those in the lifeboat could have been saved."

When Will 'F.D.R.' Announce Decision To Seek 3rd Term?

Washington, July 11 —(AP)—The big question in Washington today no longer is "will President Roosevelt run for a third term?" but "how will he announce his decision."

Nearly everyone in the Capital takes it for granted that the President will accept Democratic renomination next week. There is a variety of guesses, however, as to the manner in which he will break the news. Will it be a dramatic statement to the whole nation, or will it be a quiet anti-climax to the third term argument which has been running for nearly four years?

It would not surprise some politicians if the President were to fly to Chicago to address the 1940 convention delegates in person. He did that in 1932 immediately after his first nomination, but since he became President he has not flown.

A few hold to the theory that he will say before the convention begins that he does not wish re-nomination, but that he will be "drafted" and will accede in the long run.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Raindrops! Everyone has marveled at the large size of some raindrops as they are seen spattering on dry pavement. But the largest drops are not over one-quarter inch in diameter, and the smallest are about four ten-thousandths of an inch. The largest drops occur in violent rains as the so-called cloudbursts when accompanied by hail, and the smallest at the end of a shower. The simplest method to measure drops (which may be done by anyone) is to catch the drops on blotting paper which should then be dusted with a dye powder to make the drops permanently visible. Their diameters may then be estimated by comparing these spots to other spots produced by drops artificially made and measured.

The hail storm which passed on this district last Thursday evening, July 4th, did very little damage to garden plants at Mount Pleasant but farther east the gardens were ruined.

Master Neil Hubble recently assisted with the Red Cross concert in Stirling theatre and has received several compliments on his splendid rendition of juvenile songs.

Mediterranean Far From Being 'Mare Nostrum'

New York, July 11 (CP). — The New York Herald Tribune, commenting editorially upon Tuesday's naval clashes in the Mediterranean, said that despite the Italians' swarms of airplanes and torpedo craft it is "evident that the Mediterranean is very far from being 'Mare Nostrum'.

"Here is the Royal Navy making an aggressive sweep westward from Alexandria up to the very toe of Italy, and another sweep eastward from Gibraltar at the same time," said the paper.

"It implies not only a reassuring vigor in action but a degree of command over the whole of Mediterranean communications which can bring Italy—now the weakest point in Hitler-Europe—under a throttling economic pressure.

The Times said Britain's switch to the offensive "as soon as she begins to fight alone emphasises that 'war in earnest' is now on in the Mediterranean." It added:

"This is a great battle. It is the war for Africa, for India, for naval supremacy, for all those points at the solar plexus of the world on which imperial power is based. And it is the battle sought by Britain because she knows that the chances of victory are surer here than in any other battlefield."

The Dead End Kids who are featured with The Little Tough Guys and Nan Grey in the comedy-drama, "You're Not So Tough," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. The 3 Stooges in "Three Sappy People," is also on the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"You're Not So Tough"

Huntz Hall is seriously thinking of abandoning his tough-kid roles and going in for comedy.

"It's a better racket— I mean business," the Dead End Kid explained to Nan Grey on the set of Universal's "You're Not So Tough", now at the McCarthy Theatre.

Huntz was speaking from experience for he was playing one of the first laugh-making roles in his experience.

"I'm not the matinee idol type," he further argued. "And I don't like playing villains. And comedians have a longer life on the stage or sreen, don't you think?"

Miss Grey agreed.

Hall's role in "You're Not So Tough" is that of a stooge and side-kick to Billy Halop, Dead End Kid featured in the drama. Huntz' part is largely comedy, and he made the most of it.

"It's more fun, too", he said, after he had completed his big scene.

Hall is one of five Dead End Kids in the picture. In addition to himself and Halop, Gabriel Dell, Bernard Punsly and Bobby Jordan, all from the original cast of the stage-play "Dead End", are in the cast in addition to the Little Tough Guys, Miss Grey, Henry Armetta and Rosina Galli.

Three Stooges Comedy

The latest three stooges comedy "Three Sappy People" is also now showing at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to the above feature presentation "You're Not So Tough" which is a top-ranking screen hit, for every members of the family to see.

AT THE BELLE

"Brother Orchid"

There are riotous mirthful goings on at the Belle Theatre where Edward G. Robinson is back in action at his bullet-proof best in "Brother Orchid". This hilarious tale of hysterical homicide presents "Little Caesar" Robinson as a gangster who goes gunning for culture, and emerges as the comedy high spot of the season.

Based on a Collier Magazine story by Richard Connell, Lloyd Bacon had directed the swiftly-paced film to take full advantage of the many comedy situations, and the entire cast, from Robinson down, plays it to perfection. Ann Sothern, as the bird-brained girl friend, demonstrates once again that besides being one of Hollywood's most curvaciously lovely blondes she is also on of its outstanding comediennes. That accomplished master of menace, Humphrey Bogart, gives a brilliant account of himself as the Robinson's double-crossing pal. Ralph Bellamy fits smoothly into the role of the rancher, and Allen Jenkins is funnier than ever as a cute little cut-up know to the mob as "Willie the Knife."

As for "Brother Orchid" himself, he is the cinema's classiest killer, and his handling of the role is flawless comedy.

"Pop Always Pays"

The mad race of a real estate man and his prospective son-in-law to individually raise a thousand dollars, is the riotous basis of RKO Radio's "Pop Always Pays" featuring Leon Errol, Dennis O'Keefe and Adele Pearce.

Confident that his daughter's fiance is a spendthrift, Errol, as the father, agrees to their proposed marriage only if the young man can save a thousand dollars, to which he agrees to add a like amount if the lad achieves that goal. When the determined young man actually saves the specified amount, the frantic father, unable to raise his thousand dollars finds himself the center of hilarious complications.

"Home Front" is the title of an unusually interesting Canada Carries On" series film to be presented on the same program.

EVENTS IN SYRIA, NEARBY AREAS MOVE TO CLIMAX

Britain Determined That Neither Germany Nor Italy Shall Gain Foothold in Country

DELICATE SITUATION

Cairo, Egypt, July 11 (CP). — Events in Syria and nearby areas were reported today to be moving toward a climax.

Set in motion by the defeat of France and Britain's subsequent declaration that she will not tolerate a hostile power in the area held by France under League of Nations mandate, these developments were described as centring around five major factors:

1. Britain's determination that neither Italy nor Germany shall gain a foothold in the country which gives access to the rich Mosul oil fields, important source of supply for her fleet and air force.

2. The fear of Syria's neighbors, Turkey and Iraq—both Britain's allies—that one or both of the axis powers might, through control of Syria, establish themselves on their frontiers.

Britain Might Help.

3. The tendency of Syrian nationalists to view France's collapse as the long-awaited opportunity to achieve Syrian independence. Some of them believe Britain might help.

4. Possible revival of an old plan to make the pro-British Emir Abdullah of Trans-Jordan king of a new state to be formed by uniting Syria with Trans-Jordon.

5. The strong opposition of King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia to any such scheme. Most powerful of Arab monarchs, Ibn Saud is reported to hope to gain the throne of Syria for one of his sons.

French authorities in Syria face a delicate situation. The large force assembled there for the war against Germany (estimated at between 100,000 and 200,000 men) normally would be a guarantee of the status quo.

But one section of this army is known to be clamoring for demobilization. The men want to go home. Other units wish to fight on with Britain.

Retired R.C.M.P. Members May be Recalled Under Bill

Ottawa, July 11—(CP)—Justice Minister Lapointe indicated in today's House votes and proceedings that retired members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police may be recalled to the force "by reason of the existence of a national emergency."

The minister gave notice of a resolution, preliminary to a bill to amend the R.C.M.P. Act to cover the status of such pensioners who may be called up for service with the force.

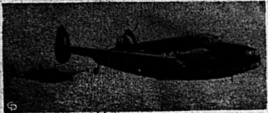
The amendment also would provide statutory authority for rates of compensation to members of the force injured by accident and for payment of expenses under the act out of any unappropriated moneys in the consolidated revenue fund.

MORE OF RELIGIOUS SERVICE

Toronto July 11.—(CP)—Orange Lodge officials said today they will hold the July 12th parade here tomorrow as usual. They met last night to consider cancellation but decided to carry on, they said.

County Master John Elliott said "the parade was not cancelled during the years of the last war. But our gathering will be more in the nature of a religious service this year".

REBUILT PASSENGER PLANES "AMAZE" AS FIGHTING CRAFT



According to the British caption accompanying this photo, the American-built Lockheed Hudson planes shown here were photographed flying only 50 feet above the water in Germany's Heligoland Bight when the picture was made during a raid on the German base. The British air office says that these Lockheeds have turned out to be the "surprise of the war." Converted passenger planes, they have proved to be marvelous fighting ships of amazing durability. Lockheeds have been used in raids on Germany, Nazi bases in Norway and along the Dutch-Belgian-French coast. According to the R.A.F., no Lockheed has ever been brought down, either by enemy fighter planes or by anti-aircraft fire. They have been hit by machine guns and cannon, but always came back home to roost. The squadron to which these planes belong has flown over 7,500 hours and covered nearly 1,000,000 miles since the outbreak of the war.

Model 'Plane Pilot Gets Tips From R.C.A.F.

Getting ready for the model aircraft contest which will be a feature of this year's Canadian National Exhibition, one Toronto contestant took his gasoline powered model to one of the R.C.A.F. depots to get some expert advice. Here Corporal V. W. Ervin and Aircraftsmen J. Partridge and L. Muir give him some tips, and incidentally express keen interest in the machine which has an engine the size of a pocket watch and has reached an altitude of 1,000 feet.

BACK FROM FINNISH WAR—REMEMBER IT?

Crowding the rails from bow to stern, these refugees and army veterans were certainly glad to see the Statue of Liberty and America on their arrival aboard the S. S. Mathilda Thorden from Finland. A number of soldiers who fought the Russians to a standstill were among the happy arrivals. Included in the passenger list were some women who served with the Lotta Svard, the Finnish women's organization which stood by the side of the men of the little northern nation during the war with the overwhelming Soviet forces.

'Infinitely Stronger' Air Attacks Than Those So Far Launched Anticipated by Officials in U. K.

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 11—(CP-Cable)—Enemy air attacks "infinitely stronger" than those so far launched on the United Kingdom battlefront are anticpated by official circles for the "very near future."

There is no doubt in official minds that they can be repelled. This confidence is based on the success British fighters have enjoyed in dealing with Nazi bombers, the increasing production of airplanes in this country and the accelerated flow of aircraft from the Dominions and the United Statse.

In addition a "large number" of aircraft originally destined for France are now helping swell Britain's air fleet.

74 Planes Downed

Since Germany opened her small scale but persistent bombing raids on the Island kingdom June 18, R. A. F. combat forces and anti-aircraft guns are known to have blown 74 planes out of the sky. At least 55 others have been damaged and were lucky if they managed to limp home.

British losses in the same period are officially termed "very much smaller."

Meanwhile R.A.F. bombing excursions over Germany and Nazi-dominated territory elsewhere are claimed to have exacted a toll of damage "many times greater" than that German bombs have caused in these isles.

Face Future with Confidence

The gathering momentum of the Empire Air Training scheme centred in Canada is a major reason why British air officials face the future with confidence. The scheme, which is regarded as "indispensable," is expected to start an abundant flow of pilots and air battle crews across the Atlantic in the next few months. From then on the flow will steadily increase.

In addition to the great strides that Canada, Australia and New Zealand are making in the training of pilots, elementary flying instruction is now being given to large numbers in several colonies. While South Africa has been concentrating on producing pilots for service in its own section of the world it is possible that the Dominion shortly will start training airmen for duty overseas.

THREE DROWNED NEAR BURWASH

Body of One Girl of Family Found and Search Continues for Other Two

Sudbury, Ont., July 11—(CP)—The body of Betty Owen, 19, of Burwash, was found in French River near Pickerel today.

When they failed to return Tuesday night a search was started. It is expected dragging operations will start this afternoon for the bodies of the other two.

The canoe was found battered near the junction of the French and Wahnapitae Rivers with the motor damaged.

The search is being conducted by members of the staff of the Burwash Industrial Farm where the young people's father, Ted Owen, is employed.

Searchers believe the Owens' met with an accident attempting to run the rapids at Sturgeon Chutes, 20 miles below Burwash. Numerous persons have been drowned there in the past.

Ordained Minister Of Jehovah's Witnesses Fined in Court

Sarnia, Ont., July 11—(CP) — Carl Steinhoff, Petrolia district farmer, was fined $20 and costs in Magistrate's Court today on a charge laid under Defence of Canada Regulations. He was described as an ordained minister of Jehovah's Witnesses, an organization recently declared illegal in Canada. The court ruled possession of literature pertaining to the organization was a violation of the regulation. A quantity of literature was seized at the Steinhoff's home.

Trial of Edward Jones and Mrs. Alice Sandham, both of Sarnia, on similar charges, was enlarged until Tuesday.

Morganthau, Phillips Will Soon Discuss Treasury Questions

Washington, July 11.—(AP) — Henry Morgenthau, secretary of the Treasury, said today he had invited Sir Frederick Phillips, under-secretary of the British Treasury, to visit him here soon.

Officials said that Sir Frederick and Morgenthau would discuss "technical and other questions of the American and British treasuries".

The announcement stirred speculation, however, as to whether they might also talk over possible new methods of British-American economic co-operation.

Sir Frederick visited Morgenthau in 1937, to go over workings of the tri-partite agreement among Britain, France and the United States to stabilize international currencies. This agreement, however, has been virtually nullified by wartime conditions.

Body of Girl Thrown Halfway Through Windshield

Woodstock, Ont., July 11 (CP)—The body of Evelyn Ellis, 18, R.R. 5, Tillsonburg, was found thrown half way through the windshield of a wrecked car near Tillsonburg today by Arthur Sawyer, Vienna trucker. Her companion, Harold Freeman, 19, also of R.R. 5, Tillsonburg, was taken to hospital suffering from lacerations, possible concussion and other injuries.

It is believed the car took to the ditch when it failed to straighten out after rounding a bend.

The girl, and in the opinion of Dr. R. E. Weston, coroner, had died instantly of a broken neck. The boy had been hurled into the back of the car.

No decision was made immediately about an inquest.

Miss Ellis was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Ellis of R.R. 5, Tillsonburg, and had been employed as a domestic at the home of Walter Ellis, Tillsonburg.

Forman is a hired man on the farm of George Elliott, R.R. 5, Tillsonburg.

New German Attack Unsuccessful in Use Against Great Britain

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 11 (CP).—A new but unsuccessful form of German air attack on Britain was attempted by the Nazis today. It cost them nine planes against three lost by the defending Royal Air Force.

A large formation of enemy aircraft attacked a British convoy. R.A.F. fighters immediately went up to the attack.

While this engagement was under way, a formation of German Messerschmitts and dive bombers attacked a southwest port. However, four British fighters raced up to tackle this second wave. While they were "vastly outnumbered", they still succeeded in downing seven enemy planes without losing any themselves.

POLICE COURT

Vernon Kilpatrick, 27 years, Roslin farmhand, was convicted of assaulting his employer, Simon Robertson, when he was arraigned before Magistrate Butler in today's local County Police Court.

Robertson appeared in court with a slightly discolored optic and alleged that Kilpatrick had struck him with his fist. Kilpatrick pleaded guilty and stated that his employer had provoked him into his act. Kilpatrick was fined $5 and must pay all costs incurred. The assault took place on July 6th. on the Robertson farm where Kilpatrick was employed at the time.

Wm. J. MacDonald, of the R.C.A.F., paid a fine of $10.00 and costs after pleading guilty to a charge of reckless driving. A second charge of reckless driving was withdrawn after Provincial Constable David Adair explained the circumstances surrounding an accident in which MacDonald was implicated.

A domestic case that saw 81-year-old John S. Hill of the Tyendinaga Reserve charged with non-support, was enlarged and a change of venue ordered to Deseronto by the magistrate.

W. S. Lane, Picton barrister, conducted the morning's prosecutions as acting Crown Attorney.

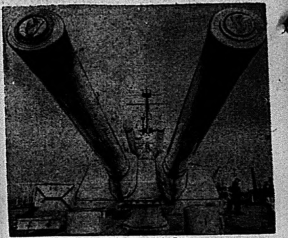
CUNNINGHAM'S GUNS DRIVE DUCE'S FLEET TO COVER

Admiral Cunningham



H.M.S. Warspite's Guns

Turning from the job of immobilizing the French fleet, Britain's naval forces in the eastern Mediterranean sought out an Italian naval squadron consisting of two or more battleships, several cruisers and a number of destroyers, and attempted to engage them in a decisive battle. The Italians immediately fled under cover of a smoke screen but not before one destroyer and a submarine had been lost and one hit from a big gun had found its mark on a Fascist battleship. Commander of the British Mediterranean fleet is Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham whose flagship is the mighty "Warspite" which participated so successfully in the Narvik engagement.

Over $1,100 Raised by St. Julien Chapter for I. O. D. E. Bomber Fund

Members of Chapter Highly Pleased at Response of Citizens to Appeal for Donations

FUND STILL OPEN

Over $1,100 has been contributed through the local St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. to the Bolingbroke Bomber Fund and officers and members of the chapter take this means of expressing their appreciation and gratitude for the very generous monetary subscriptions donated by residents of Belleville and district.

Owing to the fact that there were between four and five hundred individual subscribers to the fund it is impossible to publish the names of the donors, but the generosity of the public towards this worthy cause has passed all expectations and the St. Julien Chapter again thank all who were canvassed and those who responded so generously. They particularly thank the non-members of the chapter who gave their voluntary efforts toward the furtherance of the fund.

The proceeds from the "melting-pot" in Angus McFee's window amounted to $38.34. This amount was divided between the St. Julien Chapter and other sister chapters in the city.

The appreciation of the St. Julien Chapter is extended to the Angus McFee jewellers for the space in their window and for their co-operation in disposing of the contents of the melting-pot to the Imperial Refining and Smelting Company of Canada.

The St. Julien Chapter is not closing out the Bombing Fund as there are numerous contributions still to come in, but as the presentation of the bombers is being made at Ottawa on Saturday, July 13th, by the national president of the I.O.D.E. to the Minister of National Defence for immediate shipment to the Mother Country, they have decided to pass along the amount on hand.

Britain Accepts Selassie Gov't As Lawful Gov't of Ethiopia

CONTACT MADE

London, July 12.—(CP)—Britain has decided to recognise the government of Emperor Haile Selassie "as the lawful government of Ethiopia", R. A. Butler, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, informed the House of Commons today.

This would be a direct reversal of Britain's action on Nov. 16, 1938, in formally recognizing Italian sovereignty over conquered Ethiopia.

The deposed Emperor has lived in England as a private citizen ever since.

Mr. Butler informed commons that contact had now been made between the British government and Haile Selassie, whom he referred to as the "Emperor of Ethiopia", and that the Selassie government "will be recognised as the lawful govern-

Father Assaults Boy, Given Seven Months

Cornwall, Ont., July 12 —(CP)—John Bulloch, Cornwall, pleaded guilty in court here today on a charge of assaulting his 14-year-old son, Joseph, occasioning actual bodily harm, and was sentenced to seven months in jail.

Police said Bulloch had beaten the boy with a hose from a washing machine. The boy appeared in court to show Magistrate P. C. Bergeron his injuries, his back bore large red welts while his left arm was swathed in a bandage. A swelling on his thigh said to have been caused by a kick, forced him to limp considerably. The boy was ordered to hospital for treatment.

6,000 Tanks, Several Hundreds of Huge Land Battleships U.S. Aim

Washington, July 12 (AP).—A formidable army striking force of some 6,000 tanks—several hundred of them huge land battleships—was disclosed today as one major objective in President Roosevelt's new $4,848,171,957 United States preparedness program.

Persons familiar with the plans said that the intention was to double the total of 3,100 tanks which now are either in service, on order, or covered by appropriation.

Only Germany, they said, possesses a tank force of such potential striking power, according to available information. The projected American equipment, they explained would include squadrons rivalling the 70-ton tanks which spearheaded Nazi thrusts in Europe.

Signs multiplied, meanwhile, that the War Department was thinking in terms of an army of 1,200,000 troops—the bulk of it to be raised within the next few months by compulsory military training.

The recruiting drive now in progress aims at building up the regular army to 280,000 men by August 30. A 1,200,000 force would include National Guard units, now mustering more than 200,000.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, urging compulsory service, declared yesterday:

"We must have an increase in our armed forces and we can not expect to get it on a voluntary basis."

He gave advance notice that the War Department was prepared to accept, with minor amendments, the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory training bill now in the hearing stage in Congress.

HANSON REJECTS BID TO SIT IN WITH WAR CABINET

Opposition Leader Gives as Reasons Move Involved Responsibility Without Power

NO MORE MOVES

Prime Minister King States There Will be No More Opportunities Offered

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 12—(CP)— There will be no more moves by the present administration to take into its wartime ranks spokesmen of opposition groups.

An invitation to join the war cabinet was turned down by Conservative Leader Hanson. From now on the simple parliamentary pattern will be followed—the government will govern and the opposition can criticize.

The whole broad question was thoroughly aired yesterday in the House of Commons when Mr. Hanson rejected the bid to become an associate member of the war committee of the cabinet and even to hear confidential reports from the government in weekly conferences.

MARSHAL PETAIN GIVEN ABSOLUTE CONTROL OF STATE

"Hero of Verdun" Has Combined Powers of President and Premier

LEBRUN OUSTED

Vichy, France, July 12—(AP) — Under the shadow of the swastika, aged Marshal Henri Petain took into his hand today the reins of an authoritarian France.

Publication in the official journal of a "constitutional act" over his own signature gave the 84-year-old "hero of Verdun" combined powers of President and Premier and marked the death of the defeated third French republic.

President Albert Lebrun was a "forgotten man."

Today Petain held more power than any Frenchman since Napoleon III, with the right to govern as he pleases until a new national assembly is formed.

Another "constitutional act" he signed gives him legislative power "during this period of serious international tension and internal crisis."

The remnants of the old parliament will remain through this transition period, but may not meet except at Petain's summons.

The old Senate and Chamber of Deputies legislated themselves out of existence Tuesday and Wednesday by granting him full power to set up a new constitution which then will be submitted to a referendum.

Presumably all Frenchmen even in occupied areas will be asked to vote under the plan, but that apparently depended on Germany's decision.

King George Escapes Bombing of Town He Had Just Left

Prime Minister Churchill in Another Area Visited by German Bombers, Nonchalantly Lights Another Cigar and Makes His Way Among Soldiers to Trench Shelters

London, July 12—(CP-Cable)—King George narrowly escaped death or injury yesterday, it was disclosed late last night, when a place he had visited in an inspection tour in southern England was bombed heavily just a few minutes after he left.

"For reasons of security" the government did not give further details. Officials also kept secret exact figures on the number of persons killed and wounded in the widening raids.

The daylight attack which nearly caught the King was the ninth in succession. These raids began July 3 and continued without a letup. Britain has been attacked in day or night raids every day but one since June 18.

Churchill's Experience

Advised before leaving London that German bombers were dropping screaming messengers over a wide area, Prime Minister Churchill lighted another cigar and set out to make a scheduled inspection of the southeast coast defences.

In the middle of the tour a flock of Nazi bombers flew overhead, dropping reminders of their presence, but the Prime Minister nonchalantly made his way with soldiers to the trench shelters and remained there until British fighters drove off the invaders.

Within the last few days the King and the Duke of Kent also have been given a close-up of German air tactics, both venturing into areas where raiders are known to be frequent visitors.

Not far from the scene where Mr. Churchill was touring, a big bomb almost cut the village pub in half, which proved annoying to the occupant because he had to carry out the dartboard and hang it on a wall outside so that the local title match could be continued.

Glasses of ale were passed out through a hole in the crumbled wall.

Orangemen Celebrate Boyne, Thousands 'Walk' in Ontario, Patriotic Note is Sounded

Bands Play Religious and National Music While Party Tunes Are Soft-Pedalled — Devotion to Throne, Flag and Empire Stressed—Resolution at Toronto Demonstration Calls on Orangemen to Resist Pacificists, Defeatists and Disloyalists

By the Canadian Press

Ontario's Loyal Orangemen gathered in their thousands today to celebrate the 250th. anniversary of the victory of William III. at the Battle of the Boyne.

The usual province-wide meetings and marches were held with speakers expressing the devotion of Orangemen to the throne, the flag, Canada and the Empire. The festivities took on a sombre note with the Empire engaged in a struggle to maintain the religious and political freedom of the human race.

Bright, cloudless weather favored the demonstrators. Carleton Place and Toronto were the scenes of huge meetings. The usual monster parade through the city's streets preceded the meeting at Toronto's Exhibition Park where speakers told of the practical value of the Orange Order in maintaining the principles of Protestantism and the need of unity in behalf of Christian civilization.

At Carleton Place an estimated 10,000 members of the Order gathered from Eastern Ontario districts in what was considered the day's largest meeting. Smaller celebrations were held at other points in the district.

54 Bands in Toronto Parade

Toronto's monster parade was featured by appearance of 54 bands. The usual Orange tunes were still in favour, but the bandsmen added war-time pieces such as "There'll Always be an England" to their repertoires. Also heard were "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Abide With Me."

The Garibaldi Lodge marched as usual in the Toronto procession, but missing at their head was the Italian flag. Thirty naturalized Italians marched proudly behind two large Union Jacks.

'Twelfth of July' Celebrated By Thousands at Plainfield

Weather Almost Ideal for 250th Anniversary of Battle of Boyne

An estimated five thousand people crowded into the village of Plainfield today for the district celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne. From early morning the village has been unusually alive as visitors poured in, members of the different Protestant societies wearing the brilliant regalia and friends of the lodgemen coming in crowds. The weather proved to be almost perfect for the celebration with a stiff breeze blowing rifts of clouds across the sky to intercept the intensity of a July noon-day sun, as the village became crowded with members of the visiting lodgemen.

From different groups in various parts of the village were heard the shrill sound of the fife and the deep boom of the bass drum and the rat-tat-tat of the snare drum. Color was everywhere. It was a "glorious twelfth", the very best that nature could make it and the people were there to celebrate the victory of King William at the famous Battle of the Boyne.

The Lodges in Procession

A fervent patriotic note was marked throughout the celebration.

Included among the lodges which lined up for the parade through the village streets shortly after the noon hour were No. 3, Foxboro; No. 90 Mohawk; No. 179 Plainfield; No. 240 Frankford; No. 242, Shannonville; No. 274 Belleville; No. 295 Myer's Hall; No. 2320 Cannifton; No. 2350 Wellington; No. 2386 Wallbridge; No. 2519 Point Anne; No. 251 Holloway, while other lodges from Demorestville Picton and Trenton, were also on parade.

County Master for South Hastings, Wor. Bro. George D. McCullough, led the parade through the streets of the village. Included among the men slated to speak during the afternoon's program were: Rev. McKenzie, Wor. Bro. M. C. Reynolds, Grand Master of Grand Black Preceptory, also Ontario East; W. E. Tummon, Past Grand Master for Ontario East; George A. Reid, Past County Master; Rev. Beazer; H. A. Graham, Past Grand Master and Grand Organizer for Ontario; Rev. Cooke; Mr. Morely Dempsey Mr. George Stokes, M.P.; Erle Denyes and others.

SCIENTIFIC DIET TO BE IMPOSED TO SAVE SUPPLY

Britain Tightens Control on Civilian Life to Strengthen Home Front, Second Line of Defence

SUPPLIES PLENTIFUL

Nature of 'Scientific Diet' Not Revealed by Minister of Agriculture

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 12—(CP Cable) — Britain tightened its control on civilian life today as a means of strengthening the second line of defence—the home front.

While the government considered imposing a "scientific diet" on the nation for the purpose of conserving food supplies, orders in council empowered it to take these steps:

1. Order occupants of any premises to carry out measures designed to hinder an enemy attack— possibly convert a house or factory into a veritable fort.
2. Direct the cleaning out of attics or rooms to prevent fire spreading from incendiary bombs.
3. Ban or regulate the use of any vehicle on the highways.
4. Outlaw industrial strikes and lockouts which threaten to hamper production.

INAVAILABILITY OF ESCORT SHIPS IS REASON GIVEN

Announcement to be Made in British Commons Early Next Week

PLAN NOT ABANDONED

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 12—(CP Cable) — The British government has postponed indefinitely the scheme to evacuate children to Canada and the United States, it was learned from reliable sources today.

The reason for the suspension is the inavailability of the navy to provide escort vessels for the ships carrying the children.

The decision to postpone the scheme will be announced in parliament early next week. But it will be emphasized that the scheme has only been postponed and not abandoned entirely. The government hopes that at some indefinite time in the future the general situation will improve so that naval vessels can be spared for escort duties.

Pretoria, July 12—(CP-Reuters)—A special session of the South African Parliament was called today to meet Aug. 24 to vote additional funds for defence.

Exchange of Populations Urged Over Transylvanian Issue

Bucharest, July 12—(AP)— The controlled Rumanian press assured the nation today the axis powers would not demand sacrifice of Rumania's "ethnic frontier" to satisfy Hungary's territorial claims.

King Carol's new totalitarian regime, having lost Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina to Soviet Russia, acted to rebuild prestige upon the Munich conference of Italy Germany and Hungary which Rumanians had feared wou [illegible] tate the cession of a large part of Transylvania to Hungary.

An editorial authorized by the Propaganda Ministry reiterated an exchange of populations would be the best way to solve the dispute over Transylvania, but said the more than 2,000,000 Rumanians in the rich farming province need not dread a return of the "Magyar domination" overthrown in 1918.

Unofficial circles continued to discuss the possibility a border strip eventually might be given back to Hungary, conceding that this area is populated chiefly by Magyars.

2 Canadian Soldiers Capture Hearts of Phillips Sisters

London, July 12—(CP Cable) — Two Canadian soldiers captured the hearts of the pretty Phillips sisters while on leave at Nuneaton, Warwickshire. Jack Beattie, Edmonton, married Vera Phillips while Bill Param is courting Lily Phillips.

Vera said: "My sister met them and introduced me to the one who is now my husband. It was love at first sight. Jack sent me a telegram to be ready to be married in a few days and we were married by special licence in Nuneaton Abbey Church, Lily's courting Bill and they expect to become engaged soon."

Both boys returned to their camp.

Partially Clad Body of Mrs. G. R. Matthew Found in Credit River Near Erindale

WOMAN DROWNED

Toronto, July 12—(CP)—Gordon Ross Matthew, 21-year-old bakery employee, today faced a charge of slaying his wife whose partially clad body was found in the Credit river near Erindale. Matthew was detained overnight here for appearance at Brampton.

Matthew was arrested last night, about 12 hours after Robert Hunt found the body while fishing. The 21-year-old woman, who expected to become a mother this summer,

One Thousand Aboard First Vessel Accompanied by Parents and Relatives—Officials Stated Children Bound for Ontario and Quebec

Halifax, July 12.—(CP)—Nearly 2,000 children, sent from the United Kingdom to become guests of Canadian families for the duration of the war, were aboard two liners which docked at Halifax today.

A third ship, also laden with children, was reported close behind.

Three and four deep, the children lined the rail as the first vessel, famous on the seven seas in the days of peace, nosed alongside the pier. They sang, and cheered, tossed English pennies to the longshoremen and soldiers on the dock and scrambled happily for Canadian coins the men threw back.

More than 1,000 youngsters were aboard the first vessel, some with parents or relatives. Officers said many were bound for points in Quebec and Ontario.

FRENCH SOLDIERS GIVEN 1,000 FRANCS

Vichy, July 12 (AP).—The French government announced today all demobilized soldiers will be given a bonus of 1,000 francs. Complete demobilization in the area not under German occupation is expected to take several weeks. Troops now in Nazi-held territory will be demobilized only under terms still to be fixed by the French-German armistice committee.

British Defenders Stave Off Three-Day Italian Assault

Fort Heavily Attacked Since Wednesday With Artillery Being Used

AIRCRAFT PURSUED

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, July 12 (CP).—British defenders have staved off a three-day assault by heavy Italian forces on Moyale, strong fortified post on the Kenya-Ethiopian frontier, British headquarters said today.

Since dawn Wednesday the defenders have been holding out against small arms and artillery and though more than 1,000 shells have dropped into British positions, casualties have been comparatively light. British reinforcements are en route.

One of three Italian planes which bombed Wajir, in eastern Kenya, was shot down by British planes and a second was damaged.

Army headquarters issued the following communique:

"British Moyale has been heavily attacked since dawn Wednesday by heavy enemy forces including artillery. Over a thousand shells already have been fired into the post but so far as is known, our casualties have been comparatively light.

"The post was surrounded by small arms fire all night but the defence still is holding out and reinforcements are en route. Ground defences are being repaired during intervals of the artillery bombardment.

"Early Thursday morning three Caproni aircraft dropped many bombs in Wajir. No damage was done. They were pursued by three of our aircraft, resulting in one enemy machine being shot down. A second was last seen with its starboard engine in flames and a third escaped. One enemy air gunner was killed. All our aircraft was undamaged."

Norwegian Soldiers Interned in Sweden Will be Released

New York, July 12.— (AP) — A broadcast on the German radio wave-length heard by the National Broadcasting Company today said the first group of Norwegian soldiers interned in Sweden will be released tomorrow. About 4,000 men at the rate of 1,000 a week will be sent home.

Another announcement said several groups of Polish soldiers who fled into Rumania last September in the German invasion of Poland already had left that country for home under an agreement concluded between Germany and Rumania. More are to follow.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

ENGLISH SCHOOL GIRLS LOCATED AT COBOURG

Hatfield Hall, Cobourg, is now acting hostess to 22 young English schoolgirls who arrived there early this week from their home school in Whitby, Yorkshire. Ranging in age from eight to twelve years, the young girls appeared to be thoroughly enjoying the prospect of spending some time in Canada. They were accompanied from England by the Sisters of St. Hilda's School, who are members of the (Anglican) Order of the Holy Paraclete.

The usual routine followed in the English institution will be followed as much as possible here in Canada, according to the Sisters. The usual program is breakfast at 8.15, dinner at 1.00, tea at 4.30 and supper at 6.30. It is understood that no regular studies will be given during the summer while the girls are at Cobourg, but in the fall they likely rejoin the balance of their school-mates at a place where they can all be together.

BUMPER POTATO CROP IN DISTRICT EXPECTED

The prospects of a bumper potato crop throughout this district this season are exceedingly bright at the present time according to farmers attending Thursday's market when large quantities of new potatoes displayed proved to be of exceptionally good quality. Plenty of rain throughout the early growing season was responsible for their good growth, especially in cases where the potatoes had been planted on early ground, it was stated. This season was later than in other years, however, as potatoes made their appearance on the market one week to ten days later than they did in 1939.

FALL RYE AND WHEAT CROPS ARE HEAVY

Fall rye will be ready for the binder within one week, according to one farmer attending market on Thursday, who stated that fall grains were the heaviest he had seen in years. In some places the rye straw has attained a height of over six feet, while wheat is correspondingly stout. All indications point to real good crops of fall grain this year, he said.

JUNIOR FARMERS TO PICNIC AT TWEED

The annual field day of the Hastings County Junior Farmers will be held in Tweed on Thursday, July 18th this year. This field day, which is the annual get-together of Hastings County farm youth, takes the form of a gala softball tournament in which rural softball teams, both boys and girls, from all parts of the county take part.

As usual trophies will be awarded which must be won on three different occasions before becoming the permanent possession of any one team. Activities on the field day sports program will start at 10.00 a.m. (standard time) and will continue through until the evening when a dance will be staged as a finale to the day's entertainment.

CHILDREN SURPRISED THERE WERE NO INDIANS

The belief that Canada was still very much of a pioneer land, with Indians roving in the forests and the people living the lives of frontiersmen, is still prominent in the minds of some persons resident a few thousand miles away as was shown by the surprise of British children arriving in Kingston recently to be war-time guests.

The children, Humphrey, 7 and Judith, 5, children of Mr. and Mrs. Reeves of Liverpool, are now the guests of their aunt, Mrs. Burnes, wife of Lieut.-Col. K. C. Burnes, of the staff of the Royal Military College. They disembarked at Montreal and came directly to Kingston.

Humphrey's first words when he left the train at the C.N.R. station was, "Where are the Indians?" He was surprised when told that there were few Indians in this part of Canada.

So far the children find difficulty in accustoming themselves to the firing of the 12 o'clock time gun at Fort Henry. The children said that it reminded them of air-raid guns.

Police Blotter

Robbers entered the garage operated by James Elliott, Coleman Street, and stole $4.50 from the office cash register some time during the night. Entrance was gained by forcing a side door, P.C. Evans ascertained after investigation. Mr. Elliott found his premises had been ransacked when he arrived to open for business early today.

Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard journeyed to Oshawa today with a warrant for the arrest of Ronald Elliott of this city. Police allege that Elliott stole his own automobile, after it had been seized by the county bailiff and placed in storage. Elliott was arrested in Oshawa on the warrant issued here.

No other arrests were reported in the city during the past 24 hours, while only five transients sought shelter at the police station last night despite the adverse weather conditions for out-of-doors sleeping.

BANCROFT MAN SERIOUSLY HURT

Harry Vance Knocked Down by Runaway Team on Horse Rake

Bancroft, July 12 (Special)—Harry Vance, aged 60 years, was quite badly injured Monday at Paudash Lake, west of Bancroft, during haying operations. He was stacking hay, which was being raked up by team and rake driven by Jim Lockwood. The team took a sudden notion to bolt, which took Lockwood unawares, knocking him to the ground. He tried to regain his feet to catch the team in its rush but his efforts were in vain. The horses headed straight for Harry Vance, who, by the way, is deaf and dumb, thus he did not realize his danger nor did he happen to see their approach. They finally reached Mr. Vance, knocking him down, ran over him with rake and the rake with which he was working was broken off and struck him in the mouth knocking out some teeth, injuring the mouth inwardly and cutting one ear. Ned Burke, an employee of Mr. Hubbell rushed Mr. Vance to Dr. Lumb at Bancroft and he considered his conditon as serious and he was immediately taken to Belleville Hospital and examined by Dr. Morgan, whose examination revealed no serious complications.

SAINT PETER'S ORIGINAL GRAVE SOUGHT AT ROME ON POPE'S COMMAND

Vatican City, July 12 (AP). — A search for the original grave of St. Peter in the crypts under the great church named for him began today at the command of Pope Pius, Vatican sources said.

St. Peter's body is supposed to lie in a vault under the main altar, but the exact spot of the original tomb has not been known.

Belleville Lodges Journey to Plainfield For 'Glorious Twelfth'

There'll be no fear of sunstrokes during the celebration of the "Glorious Twelfth" today in the Hastings district as district Orangemen parade in Plainfield and Marmora on the 250th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

The forecast for today said cloudy and cool with moderate to fresh northeast winds and probably a few scattered showers. But the enthusiasm of local Orangemen was undampened by the threat of inclement weather as they prepared this morning for the celebration. Two local lodges, the Benjamin L.O.L. No. 274 and L.O.B.A. Lydia No. 350 paraded on Front St. before leaving for the scene of the celebration at Plainfield. The parade was led by Jamie Clark and his pipers.

War activity has resulted in cancellation of parades in some centres in Ontario and many lodges have decided not to participate, so it is doubtful if any demonstration today will set a record for attendance. Army men have not been granted leave to participate in the parades, although it is certain that most lodges in this district are celebrating as Orangemen, wearing their lodge regalia, were seen passing through the streets all morning, bound for the scene of the celebration.

UNIQUE OCCASION IN WAR EFFORT STAGED BY MOVIES

Purchase of 2 War Savings Certificates, Which Remain Property of Purchasers, Entitles Admission to All Movie Houses

SPECIAL SHOWS

The opportunity to do a patriotic duty and at the same time enjoy a free evening's entertainment is one that comes seldom. That is why all theatres in Belleville and all across Canada expect record crowds on Monday night.

The purchase of a minimum of two 25 cent war savings stamps entitles each person to attend a theatre of his or her choice on Monday night next—and by no other means in every theatre in the entire country may admission be purchased. Monday night will be one evening when theatre managers will shake their heads at proffered admission money.

But the best part of the scheme, from the patrons' point of view is that the war savings stamps remain the property of the purchaser—they are not turned over to the theatre as price of admission but merely shown as proof of purchase, and then a regular admission ticket will be given free of charge.

Here and Everywhere in Canada

Between 8.00 o'clock and midnight on Monday evening theatres all over Canada are confident that they will be able to turn over at least one million dollars to the Government in the form of purchases of war savings stamps. The combined objective which Belleville theatres will strive to attain is not known, but one theatre manager yesterday was confident that before Monday evening he would have sold over five thousand dollars worth of war savings stamps.

Special shows are being arranged for theatre patrons for that evening, and patrons will not only see the regular length movie all theatres in Belleville are putting on a stage show as well. At the Capitol many of Belleville's prominent musicians and vocalists are taking part in the program while at the McCarthy a similar program is being arranged, with Bandmaster Fred Johson having agreed to act as master of ceremonies for the evening. At the Belle St. Michael's Band will be featured on the program. Speakers will be heard at all theatres. Prior to theatre-time the Belleville's Municipal Band will parade on Front St. playing patriotic and other appropriate airs.

Mercer Reformatory To House Girl For Next Two Years

Having escaped from the Belmont Girls' Training School at Galt and successfully eluding the police for a number of weeks, 17-year-old Hilda Thompson, alias Betty Thompson of Belleville, was apprehended in the Belleville General Hospital recently, where she had been a patient following a motor accident on the Wooler road two weeks ago. The girl was apprehended by Inspector T. D. Ruston of the Children's Aid Society.

Today in city police court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, Hilda Thompson was sentenced to serve two years less one day in the Mercer Reformatory for women. Miss N. Wark of the Belmont Training School and Mr. H. Swazie of the Ontario Parole Board, were both present in court.

Miss Wark assured the court that the Thompson girl had not only escaped from the Galt institution, but was incorrigible.

POLICE COURT

Two transients, Oscar Turcott and George Taylor, appeared in city police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today and pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication. Both were given 14 days in the local bastile, to date from the time of their arrest.

"I came to the police station seeking a night's lodging and nothing was said to me until the next morning when I was told a charge had been laid. I'll admit I had four or five beers," stated Turcott in an effort to mitigate sentence.

"If you weren't intoxicated enter a plea of not guilty," suggested His Worship, but Turcott refused the advice from the bench and accepted the jail term without further comment.

Has First Case

Samuel Masters, Bloomfield, was sentenced to serve seven days after pleading guilty to a charge of drunken driving. Edward E. Follwell, Belleville's youngest barrister, who was called to the professional bar only a few days ago, had his first case in local police court today when he appeared on Masters' behalf.

"This man's livelihood depends upon the work he gets as a stationary engineer during the canning season and any lengthy term would mitigate his earnings. There were no injuries or serious property damage resulting," pleaded Mr. Follwell.

Several motorists entered written pleas of guilty when charged with speeding on local streets. All such pleas were accepted.

HANSON REJECTS

Information Confidential

The Conservative Leader objected to the first proposal primarily because, he claimed, it involved responsibility without power. The danger in the second lay, he felt, in the hamstringing of the opposition by the fact the information obtained in those conferences would be confidential.

"Surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird," Mr. Hanson quoted from Proverbs (Ch. 1; V. 17). More directly, in the course of the most fiery speech he has made since becoming opposition leader, he charged that "the war effort is being guided and directed on a party basis."

He preferred, he said, to maintain full liberty of action, cooperating with the government in measures he thought necessary and offering constructive criticism where he could.

Gov't to Bear Responsibility

The Prime Minister also came to the conclusion that, after this fruitless attempt to bring other opinion into his war council, the government must bear complete responsibility and the Leader of the Opposition should stick to his critical function, "A duty second only to that of the Prime Minister himself".

Thus would the British parliamentary system be maintained, he said.

"What has happened today does show one how much thanks one gets for trying in an open way to meet honorable gentlemen in connection with the affairs of the country", Mr. King said.

His invitation had been extended to Mr. Hanson and Hon. Grote Stirling, (Con. Yale) and, if those two accepted, to the leaders of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and the new democracy group. Mr. Stirling also refused the propostion.

M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar) said the C.C.F. group had come to the same conclusion as Mr. Hanson, that the offer involved responsiblity without power so could not be accepted.

Reasons Given for not Joining

C.C.F. members had been sent to Parliament to represent a particular social and economic philosophy which it was perhaps more important to have represented here than in Great Britain. In Britain leaders of the party with similar views had been taken into the government in the war against Nazism and Fascism.

In a recent bye-election in Saskatchewan, the Liberal Party had been represented as standing for the annihilation of Communism Fascism, Nazism and Socialism.

This obviously made it impossible for the C.C.F. members as Socialists to ally themselves with the Government. The Prime Minister, in any case, had been given the support of the Canadian people to carry on government.

John Blackmore, New Democracy leader, said the Conservative rejection of the proposal "lets us out". He had wondered why the proposal was made and what service opposition members could perform by accepting it. He thought the Prime Minister might have called opposition leaders into conference more often than he had and given them more information.

"I wish to assure the government we are ready to co-operate with the government in every respect for the winning of this war but we want to know where we are going", said Mr. Blackmore.

Party Means to End

"A party is not an end in itself," Mr. King said in reply to his critics. "A party is the means to an end, a means whereby men and women who feel and think alike with respect to great questions of government may bring their combined force to bear with a view to making their views ultimately prevail. Our whole parliamentary system is based upon the party system.

"We are here today not as a party government but as the government of the people of Canada sent here by their authority."

The Prime Minister felt Mr Hanson had gone far afield to misconstrue the purposes of the proposals Mr. King had made. They were intended to provide the government with the views of the Opposition, as the Conservative Opposition had been urging.

He suggested that Conservative members and "their Press" should get together and take the same view on such matters. That Press was violently calling for National Government.

"The Conservative Party cannot have it both ways," he said, "one way in this House of Commons and another way in the Press. If it wishes to take a particular attitude and have that attitude known and respected, it must make it consistently both inside Parliament and outside Parliament."

Elected to Oppose

Mr. Hanson contended he was "elected to oppose this government" and he intended to follow out that mandate. He claimed the cabinet was no stronger after its reorganization Monday than it had been before. The offer from the Prime Minister had resulted from the failure to enlist prominent persons outside of Parliament in war cabinet "to bolster the shattered fortunes" of the Liberal Party.

The House proceeded with detailed consideration of the budget resolutions, approving part of the Excess Profits Tax Act and the Special War Revenue Act.

One major amendment was made by Finance Minister Ilsley in the tax on automobiles. Cars already in the hands of dealers at the time the tax came into force will only bear a flat 10 per cent impost now, instead of the steeply graduated scale applying to other new cars generally.

2ND BATTALIONS

Twelve infantry battalions went overseas with the 1st division. Other units of the 2nd division are serving in England or elsewhere.

In addition it is planned to have some 37,000 men in training in Canada in the militia by August 1 and by late August or early September another 37,000 in training.

Enlistment in C.A.S.F. units involves service anywhere. Enlistment in the non-permanent active militia means service only in Canada unless a member volunteers for service abroad. The 90 N.P.A.M. units in Canada have been authorized to recruit to full wartime strength for evening training and further instruction in summer camps.

Take 2 2nd Battalions fiSOtdrfs Work Out Details

Meantime the members of the new National War Services Department under Hon. James G. Gardiner are working out the details of national registration. After that will come the calling up of men for service under the National Resources Mobilization Act.

The registration will be completed in August, looking to the utilization of those over 16 years in the best possible war capacity. All men up to 45 will have a chance to join the militia for training and persons who fail to register will be subject to penalties.

Registration will be similar to federal voting and after registering each person must carry his or her registration card to show authorities when asked.

When mobilization is in operation it is expected special classes in urban centres will be conducted for night workers so they may train during the day time. Where the sending of men to camp at certain times would disrupt industry they may be excused or their training postponed to a more distant and convenient date.

ment of Ethiopia and admitted to the full status of ally in the present war with assurances that Ethiopia's independence will be obtained when the war is won".

Forces Co-ordinated

Furthermore Mr. Butler said, British and Ethiopian forces are to co-ordinate "all activities likely to damage the enemy's effort in North and East Africa and in Abyssinia (Ethiopia)."

Butler said contact would be made "with General Abeba Aragui, who is commanding Ethiopian forces in the field and with Ras Birru, formerly War Minister of Ethiopia, who recently flew from Jerusalem to the Sudan to join the Ethiopian forces on the Emperor's behalf, in order that British and Ethiopian forces may coordinate their activities against the Italians in Ethiopia".

Mr. Butler, whose statement was made in a written reply to a question put by Labor's Col. Josiah C. Wedgwood, said it was impossible to give further details.

Selassie Living in England

Britain showed an immediate interest in the situation of conquered Ethiopians when Italy declared war on her on June 10.

When the Ethiopian war ended in an Italian victory in May, 1936, after seven months of hostilities in which Britain led in the voting of economic and financial measures against Italy by 52 nations in the League of Nations, the British government refrained from immediate recognition of Italy as the conqueror.

However, when the British-Italian Mediterranean accord was put into effect on Nov. 16, 1938, the British government granted formal recognition to Italian sovereignty over Ethiopia.

Haile Selassie, who had been living in Bath, England, since his flight from Ethiopia, appeared in London on June 10, the day Italy declared war on Britain. Official sources were silent on the purpose of the visit. He took up quarters in a west-end hotel.

The Daily Herald said on June 12, without giving the source of its information, that 200,000 Ethiopians, loyal to Haile Selassie, were fighting the Italians in Ethiopia. On the next day Ras Birru left Jerusalem to fight in Ethiopia. A Jerusalem dispatch described him as "newly-appointed commander-in-chief" of Haile Selasie's forces in Ethiopia.

General Abeba Aragui, former police commissioner in Addis Ababa, Ethiopian capital, has been reported already fighting against the Italians, leading soldiers as "commander-in-chief in the south."

NATIONAL PARKS FOSTER INTERNATIONAL GOODWILL

The international harmony and goodwill which have characterized the relations between Canada and the United States for well over a century are evident in the national park systems of these two countries. The creation of an International Peace Park stretching across the boundary between the State of Montana and the Province of Alberta is symbolic of this spirit of good neighbourliness and desire to live at peace with one another. Instead of steel and concrete fortifications, with trenches, barbed wire entanglements, and gun emplacements, only an imaginary line runs across this park marked here and there by a sign post and guarded only by a customs officer armed with nothing more deadly than pencil and note book.

By proclaiming Glacier National Park in Montana and Waterton Lakes National Park in Alberta an International Peace Park, the Governments of the United States and Canada have created not only a great international playground, but in a wider sense have linked the national park systems of the two countries into a chain of healthful recreation areas, to be preserved in all their natural beauty for the present and future enjoyment of mankind. Nowhere else in the world can there be found anything to compare with these national park systems, and perhaps nowhere else have so much thought and energy been devoted to the establishment of such spacious playgrounds for the benefit of the people.

There is, of course, a similarity between the scenery of many of the national parks of Canada and those of the United States but there are also striking differences. Visitors from the United States who may have already seen most of their own national parks will find in the National Parks of Canada something perhaps new and different; new faces new friends, a different people, different customs and traditions, and in some places even a different language. They will also find much that is the same; the same friendliness which is characteristic of the American people, the same democratic outlook, the same liberty to move about freely and gain the maximum benefit and enjoyment from one's vacation and the same freedom to leave our country without fuss or formality when their holiday is finished.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS

Economic activity in Canada recorded expansion during the first five months of this year, business operations, as measured by the official index being nearly 19 per cent greater than in the early part of 1939. The index of the physical volume of business was 136.9 on the 1926 base as 100, as compared with 115.2 in the first five months of 1939. The general index of employment rose nearly 8 points to 121 on June 1. The considerable advance in these indexes is a measure of business expansion due, in part to the acceleration of war operations, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The index of mineral production rose from 203 to 230, a gain of 13 p.c. Gold shipments to the Mint and to external points were 2 p.c. greater, while silver shipments rose from 7.5 million ounces to 8.3 million, a gain of 11 p.c. Greater demand for fuel, mostly from industrial consumers, led to greater activity in coal-mining districts. The output of coal was nearly 7 million tons against 5.7 million in the first five months of 1939, an increase of 23.4 p.c.

The index of manufacturing production based on 29 factors rose 28 points to 137.3, a gain of 25.6 p.c. Flour production in the first four months rose 15 p.c. to 5.1 million barrels. The domestic demand for sugar was considerably heavier than in the first five months of 1939. The output rose by about one-third to 276 million pounds. Hog slaughterings recorded a marked increase, while the slaughtering of cattle was slightly more than maintained.

Due to war demands, the primary iron and steel industry worked at a much greater percentage of capacity. The output of steel ingots was 792,000 tons, a gain of 68 p.c., while pig iron production at 461,000 tons showed a gain of 89 p.c. The demand for automobiles continued heavy, the output rising 17 p.c. to nearly 93,000 units.

External trade showed considerable acceleration during the first five months of the present year. Exports were nearly 34 p.c. higher, while imports rose 57.5 p.c. The excess of exports over imports during the first five months was $36,700,000. The heavy movement of grain was the main influence in expanding the railway traffic. Carloadings rose from 916,000 to 1,060,000, a gain of nearly 16 p.c. Marked increases were shown in the gross revenues of the two main railway lines.

The general index of employment, averaged for the first six reporting dates, rose from 107.5 in 1939 to 115.2 in the present year, a gain of 7.2 p.c. Highway construction showed a decline while most of the other main groups recorded expansion in working forces.

Divine Intervention

British people in their hundreds of thousands, with the force of a purging Christian revival equal to that in the days of Elizabeth, are reported, with profoundly grateful hearts, to accord full credit for the rescue of the British army, out of the hell of Dunkirk, to the miracle intervention of Divine Providence.

Two days after the national intercession and prayer in England, a great storm broke over the Channel, May 28. This grounded the Nazi bombing craft. Then followed a great calm on the water dividing France and England, the Channel was like a mill pond. Rough seas as the Channel can conjure up in an hour or two, would have resulted in a terrific loss of life under the conditions of precipitate embarkation, and the flimsy nature of thousands of the craft which arrived to take the men off. The number of rescued reached 335,000, the greatest combined military and naval feat in history.

It is not surprising that as to the people in Britain, one writer submits: "Thus have the thoughts of the British turned to God." And the British nation is now spiritually girded for the battles to come: "God and the Right."—St. Catharines Standard.

'The Song the Mower Sings'

Up from the meadow where buttercups blend
Their gold with the pink of the clover sweet,
Where from dewy dawn to day's dusky end
The voices of birds make music meet,
Is borne a song on the summer breeze,
A sound with the summer day Atune,
Above the rustle of restless trees—
'Tis the mower's song in the month of June.

Oh! sweet is the song that the mower sings
Of meadows bright through the mist of years,
And memories dear to the heart it brings
Of childhood days and its hopes and tears,
But a sweeter note in its song is heard—
That over all does His power prevail,
And faith grows strong in His promised word
That seedtime and harvest shall not fail.

—Helen B. Anderson.

The hay fields are calling laborers and farmers are working overtime to harvest the crop. Help is hard to get and consequently haying operations progress very slowly. "He that gathereth in summer is a wise son, but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causes shame," are the words of the wisest of men.

What a pleasant sight is a timothy meadow with the wind moving it in graceful undulations, its beauty enhanced by alternate sun and shadow.

In waves of green the rippling hay
Moves by the winds that o'er it pass,
While in the gleam of wakening day
Birds swing and sway on bending grass.

The wild weird whistle of the quail
Resounds across the grassy sea,
While floods of light that never fail
Chase swift cloud-shadows o'er the lea.

—Helen B. Anderson.

Democracy Accepts Discipline

Two week-end announcements, if translated into action, should be good for our souls certainly good for our bodies. The announcements:

1. Thousands of young Canadians will be given military training this summer in military training camps, either as volunteers for the Canadian Active Service Force or as draftees under the Mobilization Law.

2. Every male student in Canadian universities will take compulsory military training during the next college year.

If Canada never sent another soldier overseas, these things will still be good for us. The cardinal sin of democracy is that it permitted itself to become "soft," failed to realize that it must defend itself. In this country, during the past two decades, we had reached the stage where abuse of military training, or of anything approaching discipline, was considered of wisdom. We listened tolerantly to attacks upon school cadets; applauded denunciations of what was called "anti-militarism"; and starved our militia. Year after year Parliament cut militia appropriations to the bone with the consequence that military training practically passed from existence.

We are discovering now, and at heavy cost, the pathetic folly of our conduct. We are seeing that there is no easy road to security and that national strength cannot be secured without discipline without some willingness to sacrifice ease, to conquer human laziness.

All over Canada today, in all our cities and small towns, are thousands of young men who, war or no war, would be better off in summer training camps than in idle hours in the streets, or in evenings spent in motor cars or night clubs. No one should want to take these young men from essential jobs, and least of all from industries engaged in war work, but there are thousands of young men in quite different occupations, or without any occupation. These, without a doubt, must benefit from training; and Canada most certainly will benefit. The pity is this step was not taken long ago.—Ottawa Journal.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

French Fascism

If French Fascism had come about as the result of a revolutionary movement aimed to defend the safety, security and morale of France, that would be one thing. If it had come into being in order to pick up the arms that the French democracy had been forced to abandon, it might be able to associate itself with the vigor and honor of France.

But French fascism cannot claim for itself any prestige at all. First of all, it undermined and weakened France by continual conspiracy with her enemies. The French Republic, the while it shut up Communists and people who were not Communists at all, but merely Left-wingers, treated the Right traitors with that tenderness which republics seem perennially to show to the upper classes. These people have always had a leaning toward Fascism, particularly of the Franco-Mussolini brand. The death-blow to France was their victory. But a new era is not started on the death-blow to a nation.

These remakers of the French Republic are, in fact, all the old political crooks of the Third French Republic, together with their scared fellow-travellers. M. Marquet, the dentist mayor of Bordeaux who founded the Neo-Socialist Party of brief life; M. Deat, who wrote that "We don't want to fight for Danzig"; M. Laval, the shrewd and cunning fixer; M. Baudoin, banker for Indo-China and representative of the purest plutocracy, are not men to give new life to the French nation—even if there were any immediate possibility of giving new life.

The most they can do is to toady to the conquerors and in doing so destroy the soul of France. The spectacle is more horrifying even than the French defeat.

They begin by casting into the dust the motto of a nation that under that motto lived its proudest and most glorious days: "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity". Those words on the flag of France were revolutionary words, and words that meant power and prestige; power over the imagination of men, and power in the actual, material world. Even the Nazis could not erase those words from the French heart and the French mind.

It remains for Frenchmen to attempt to do so, and to substitute for them "Labor-Family-Nation". One can only remark dryly that as long as France could practice and defend liberty, aquality and fraternity there was work for all in France—work for all Frenchmen, and work for a million and more aliens in France, a country that through the worst depression never had unemployment.

Family Long Cherished

France needs no motto from the boot-lickers of her conquerors to elevate in France the prestige of the family. No country in Europe has so cherished the family, and nowhere has the family been so clearly the basic social unit of the State as in the France of Liberty. And as for the nation—Who are these defenders of the nation?

They are the men who not so long ago were saying, "Better Hitler than Leon Blum", as some people in this country are able to whisper, "Better Hitler than F.D.R." They are the people who were more afraid of French labor than of German soldiers.

Of course behind their actions is a shrewd politicians' and financiers' type of calculation. They think: England too, will be defeated. Let us get on the bandwagon. Let us tie close to Mussolini. Thus we shall save the Empire. They will save it, in order to feed Germany and Italy with it.

The new Fascist regime in France does not mean that Hitler will not plunder the French countryside. Despatches tell us that that is happening. It does not mean that either Hitler or Mussolini will have increased respect for France. Quite the contrary.

France, as a nation, independent, integrated, free; France as a power and as an idea depends today, as she depended yesterday, upon the successful resistance to Hitler of the British Commonwealth. And if, with the assistance of the French, Hitler succeeds and Britain falls, then the reconstruction of Europe tomorrow into a continent in which peoples and individuals will again have freedom will depend upon revolutionary forces inside that continent. This regime will attempt to stifle those forces too.

Symbol of Slavery

There are lessons to be learned from history. Mustafa Kemal Pasha, Mussolini and Hitler rose out of defeated or frustrated nations. But they rose to reverse the defeat not to ratify it. The regimes that ratified the defeat all eventually were swept away in the rising tide of public indignation.

In France, and for the first time, Fascism becomes the symbol for a great people of capitulation, subservience and national slavery. This last recruit to Fascism is without elan. The French Republic is not liquidated by some fanatical upstart, but by a doddering old man. Petain will not lead French youth. He can only break their hearts, not inflame their spirit. His regime kicks the dead bodies of boys who died to fight Fascism.

This is the deepest humiliation of France.

Let us recall to France the words of Hitler:

"Had the German Republic taken up the sword which the monarchy relinquished; had it set to work to prepare the nation to reject a shameful peace; had it refused to rush to the fleshpots offered it by its conquerors, there would have been no Nazi movement, but all Germany would have followed the democratic republic".

What will the founders of the new France tell their children? How will they define the word "honorable"? Or will this quaint old-fashioned word pass at last, out of the dictionary of mankind?

Boston's South Shore is a Peaceful Haven

Boston's South Shore Market

A good antidote for troublous, changing times is a visit to Boston's famed South Shore. Plymouth Rock, Weymouth, Cole's Hall, all tell their stories of the Pilgrim Fathers of the trials and tribulations the furnace in which the elements that make up this great land were fused. At Plymouth Rock visit the Burial Hill and read the words on the obelisk in memory of Governor William Bradford: "Do not basely relinquish what the Fathers with difficulty attained." Beauty, interest, charm and a rejoicing in national pride lie in a visit to Boston and the South Shore.

Neat Countryside

On the way to Plymouth Rock, there are many interesting places in beautiful settings. Everything is tidy, simple and "just so." The countryside looks as though the pioneers had done a swell job of tidying up. Here are no great forests or exotic flowers, no tree-fringed lakes. But there are buildings whose every stone is history. The Adams Mansion, home of John Adams and John Quincy Adams; the First Parish Church established in 1689; he John Adams House where John Adams was born, and the John Quincy Adams House where the sixth President of the United States was born, are all "musts" on this travel itinerary.

Weymouth is a delightful town, with the star attraction Arnold's Tavern where the committee of safety met during and before the Revolution. Plymouth itself is a modern lively town, a manufacturing centre, and a summer resort as well. To leave all this lively modernity and come to Plymouth Rock is a fascinating travel experience.

Rock In-Shore

The Rock itself is easily located. A beautiful copy in granite has been erected over the historic stone. The coast itself is far from the "stern and rock-bound coast" of tradition. Sand is in great abundance and beaches and sand bluffs extend in all directions. Up from the rock is a stairway leading to Cole's Hill. Here is the spot where the Pilgrims stole wrapped in the mantle of night, to bury their fast-diminishing band, so that the Indians lurking nearby could not determine how many were left. Here sleep the Pilgrims and nearby is the monument of Massasoit, the great sachem of the Wampanoags, whose kindness protected and helped the brave little band.

Historic Shrines

At Leyden Street is the site of the first "Common House" raised in Plymouth and near it is the site of the first parish church, the church organization of the Pilgrims erected in 1683. Burial Hill, home of the historic and the humble hero dead, is another hallowed shrine. Interesting is the site of the first fort where in 1621 five cannons were placed after much difficulty and trouble. Fascinating is Town Brook which gave the Pilgrims their drinking water. It was full of fish too. Even today, trout lurk in many a dark corner of the brook, which today is surrounded by the beautiful Brewster Gardens, a town endowment.

The John Howland House, built in 1666; the Old Harlow House; Pilgrim Hall; the Pilgrim Monument and the Major John Bradford House are all places to be visited with pride in their historic importance and with admiration for their beauty. There, also, is the John Alden house, built in 1653.

A Japanese company is establishing a factory in Tientsin, China, for the annual production of 4,000,000,000 cigarettes.

Air chambers that form seats mounted on a frame that can be fitted into a rowboat or canoe make up a new life saving raft.

Reform That is Needed

The statement made in the House of Commons by the Minister of Transport, Hon. C. D. Howe, raises the prospect of the elimination shortly of commercial news broadcasting as practiced at present by almost all stations with the exception of those of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The fact that a news broadcast is sponsored by a business house bearing the cost of this emission does not signify that news thus distributed is fabricated. One must agree however, that in the case of news broadcasting, commercialization can have among other inconveniences the effect of subjecting to all hazards of competition the weighty responsibility of informing the public. It is practically inevitable that a commercialized news broadcast should seek to outdo its rivals and monopolize the attention of its listeners by having recourse for instance to the sensational presentation of news, to the exploitation of rumors more or less well founded. In this respect, we have called attention on several occasions to the audacity of certain dispensers of written or spoken news. In as critical a period as the present, it is necessary to keep a close scrutiny on public reaction to the march of events and to avoid broadcasting of all but news reports serving the best interests of our country.

To prohibit the commercialization of radio reporting and to confer news broadcasting upon an impartial organization seems to us to be a necessary reform. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will be able to take over the task of public enlightenment.

The measure announced by Mr. Howe obviously is not aimed at rationing radio listeners in the matter of information. It is not a question of reducing news on the radio. Under the proposal receiving study presently, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation would, in effect, pool news reports gathered by the various services and summarize them for the public, after having coordinated and supplemented them one by the other. Far from being deprived of radio news, the public would be better informed without having to put up with the repetitions it has known since the start of the war.

The Roosevelt government, for its part, is considering the creation in the United States of a similar system particularly with regard to broadcast news concerning the federal administration. The war has given the Canadian government the task of keeping under close surveillance the powerful agent of broadcasting which is radio. —Montreal Le Canada.

AIRMEN ARRIVE IN ENGLAND

London, July 12—(CP Cable) — A large draft of airmen from New Zealand, including officers and men, arrived in England on Wednesday to serve with the Royal Air Force, it was learned yesterday. Fliers, who will receive further instruction here before getting into action, are mostly pilots, plus some observers and air-gunners.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

New Exercise Treatment For Cross Eye

From time to time physicians are asked by parents who have a child with cross eye about the use of exercises to straighten the eye rather than have the child undergo a surgical operation. The physician points out that while exercise will help to some extent it takes a long time, perhaps months or years of exercise to obtain any results and complete correction is usually impossible with exercise alone.

A great step forward in the correction of cross eye, by exercise is reported by Dr. George Kent in Hygeia, the health magazine. It is called orthoptics, meaning straightening of the eyes, just as orthopedics means straightening the feet.

The new system or science is based on the principle of the stereoscope which was used years ago to look at photographs which gave depth or distance instead of just the flat picture.

This device combines the images of two similar pictures of an object divided into two parts the halves enclosed in black barrels, like binoculars but operated independently of each other. With this device the physician or operator can race the eyes in circles, swing them from side to side, measure the amount the cross eye is out of line with the other eye, and train the eyes to work together in a straight line.

With the patient seated before the machine, slides are inserted, a different one for each barrel of the instrument. One might be a bird, the other a cage. If your eyes are normal, you look in and see the bird in the cage. But if you are cross-eyed and the two movable barrels are separated a normal distance, you will see the bird or cage only.

The normal pair of eyes works as a team. The eyes are really two cameras which shoot or work together producing two clear images which overlap one another. In cross eye, one of the eyes (cameras) is turned at an angle and does not see because it does not hit or focus at the right spot at back of the eye. The object of the machine is to train the cross eye to focus on the right spot and so work accurately with the good or straight eye.

The average number of treatments required is two each week for six months.

In the majority of cases surgery is required for a complete cure. The exercise given before and after the operation greatly increases the number of cures following operation.

A new liquid insecticide used by spraying contains millions of bacteria deadly to insects but harmless to persons and domestic animals.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

A clue to the intensity of air warfare in the Mediterranean area and in northern Africa is given by the official announcement of Italian air force casualties since Italy entered the war. The announcement reported 151 Italian fliers killed or missing and 103 wounded.

That means some 75 or more Italian aircraft have been shot down or damaged in clashes with the Royal Air Force.

German and British casualties in the air battles over the United Kingdom, Germany and German-occupied territory must have been considerably greater. The huge air battle which took place Wednesday is reported to have brought about the complete loss of 14 German aircraft and the damaging of 23 or more others.

The human casualties in that operation alone for the Germans may run to 100 men killed and wounded.

All signs point, however, to more intensive air warfare in the days to come rather than to a slackening off. While the heavy German raids on the United Kingdom in recent days have caused a considerable number of casualties and some damage to essential property the German airmen are probably just feeling their way, gathering information and experience which may enable them to make bigger and bigger raids.

Meantime the Royal Air Force has not been inactive in an offensive way and daily raids over Germany or German-held territory have caused considerable damage.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Undecided About Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I plan to have a simple wedding, and I am undecided whether to have it at home or in church. It is to be for the immediate families only.

1. Would it be proper to have the simple ceremony in church, with only the members of the two families present, and then serve a buffet luncheon at my home afterward? Our families are large, and the house too small to take care of both.

2. If we follow this plan, is it necessary to invite the minister to luncheon? Should his wife be invited to the ceremony and to the luncheon?

3. Is it necessary to invite the organist to the luncheon?

4. Should the organist be paid by the bride's family? Or isn't she paid at all, since she is the regular church organist?

5. The groom pays the minister's fee, doesn't he? Should this be attended to in advance? ?

6. Is it proper to have no attendants?

7. Do you think it would be appropriate for me to have flower girls at my wedding? I would like to have my two little cousins, aged eight and ten.

Gloria.

1. Under these circumstances I like best the plan to have the ceremony performed in church, with the members of the two families present, and then serve a buffet luncheon at your home directly after the ceremony. This gives you what you apparently want to have—the ceremony in church. On the practical side, it gives you the opportunity of having the arrangements made at home for the luncheon.

2. Since only the members of the families are to be invited to the ceremony and to the luncheon, it will not be necessary for you to invite the minister. He will completely understand the necessity of your having to limit your guests to this intimate group. His wife will not expect to be invited either to the ceremony or to the luncheon.

3. No, this invitation is not necessary, either.

4. Yes, the bride's family pays the organist. Usually a special fee is paid for this service at a wedding. I suggest that you consult either the minister or the sexton about what the arrangement is about this.

5. It is the groom who gives the fee to the minister, usually after the ceremony.

6. At such a small wedding it is not strictly necessary to have any attendants, but customarily the bride has one attendant, and the groom has a best man. Sometimes the groom has a best man, and the bride has no attendants.

7. If you especially wish to have these two little girls as flower girls, it is entirely proper for you to make this plan. Somehow I judge from your previous question that you would prefer to have no grown-up attendants, but only these two flower girls. This would be proper. However, if you have a sister who would naturally expect to be your attendant, you should not pass her by.

Toast to the Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Who proposes the toast to the bride?

2. Will you please suggest a few simple toasts?

G. J.

1. Usually it is the best man who proposes the toast to the bride and the bridegroom. The bridegroom responds to this toast, for his bride and himself.

2. This toast generally is as brief and simple, as "To Mary and John—and to their happiness always." Or, "To Mary and John, and may they always walk with happiness. Or, "Here's to Mary and John, and here's to the wish that we may all be with them on their Golden Wedding anniversary day!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

There is an unquestionable magic in being in love with a person near at hand. Love has a way of creeping through all the defences and barricades.

Don't fool yourself by imagining you are indifferent to the person in love with you. You may kid yourself along, but you're bound to think the boy or girl is a person of exceptionally good taste. That's where the magic begins to creep through the barricades, when people are young, emotional and thrown together—we call it propinquity.

This accounts for so much falling in love when youngsters are thrown together in offices, shops, factories. The miracle has come about a million times, and it will happen a million times more.

But the magic of propinquity fails when a man makes a girl too conspicuous by unwelcome attentions; or, contrariwise, when a girl is too affectionate to the boy for whom she has fallen, and makes him the subject of amusement. Nothing brings about a cure for love so quickly as having anyone too gooey or sweet—it's like trying to eat your way through a five-pound box of candy.

When men and women are no longer young, a display of unwanted affection is a horror from which we turn. At the movies, in a bus, train or restaurant, you may have seen a woman trying to hold a vanishing love. Her hand seeks his. The man sits straight as a ramrod, grim endurance in every feature, or he shakes off the unwanted hand without ceremony.

Then there is the couple opposite you in a restaurant. He's decided to break it off, and she has begged to meet him at lunch. He orders cocktails and puts on a "best for you and best for me" expression as she tries desperately to bring back the past by endearments, tasteless to him as cold mutton gravy. Her overheard, "Won't you miss me a little," you'd rather not have heard. The man has a job to get through with, and he wastes scant ceremony over it.

When women break off an outgrown love affair, they're more artistic about it than men. They're not above letting the axe fall at the beginning of a vacation, sparing themselves unpleasant scenes. They may write letters, saying something to the effect that they have discovered how unsuited they are and how much happier he will be with another type of girl, more domestic, more worldly, more intellectual, or whatever kind of "more" will flatter him, and make the break easier.

Outgrown affection is an abhorrence that cannot be borne. But the unspoken love that comes in the morning of life, when a boy begins to wonder why she blushes, and her eyes brighten when she sees him in the elevator, or a girl wonders why he says so tenderly, "Miss Smith, will you take this letter, please," that's the unspoken word that creates magic before which barricades weaken and defences blow down.

Picnics on the Lawn

From Everybody's London

A certain English duke has a castle with beautiful grounds which he has thrown open to the general public. The few acres that form his garden, are, however, kept private. So he and his duchess were understandably annoyed one Sunday afternoon last summer when they saw a family party spreading a picnic cloth right in the middle of the tennis lawn.

His Grace walked out to make a personal protest.

"Look here," he said, "there are plenty of other nice, quiet spots round here for you to have your meal. Can't you leave us in peace?"

At this the father of the family came out in a pillar-box hue saying nobody was entitled to own all that land, it belonged by rights to the people, he wasn't going to be treated like a doormat by the aristocracy.

"Since that is your attitude," said the duke quietly, "I must ask for your name and address."

"You can't scare me!" blustered the intruder—and gave them.

The sequel came exactly one week later.

In a small red villa in a suburb of London, father and family were having their midday meal. Suddenly a sleek Rolls-Royce drew up at the gate. Out of it stepped the duke and duchess. They entered the tiny garden carrying a picnic basket which they set down on the only visible patch of grass.

For a moment the family sat paralyzed. Then the father jumped up indignantly and threw open the window.

"What the devil do you think you're doing?" he bellowed.

"We've decided to have our lunch here," replied His Grace. "Surely you don't object? According to your ideas, this land is as much mine as yours."

The householder stood sputtering helplessly — until his sense of humor prevailed. He began to laugh. . . .

Some minutes passed before he was capable of speaking again. Then he said: "It looks rather like rain. You'd better come inside and eat with us!"

And the duke and duchess did!

FASHION FLASHES

STILL ON TOP is the little hat for formal wear. An advance model, desigend to wear with late afternoon clothes, is a black felt cap with a forehead "bang" of chartreuse, violet and purple ostrich tips on black velvet stems.

CASTING IS ON for Autumn shows and soon fashionable premieres will bring out beautifully gowned women. A beautiful evening coat is of ermine done on longer length bloused packet lines. It has sharply tailored revers, slim straight sleeves and a softly tied sash belt of the snowy fur.

TAKE OUT a smart bag to complete a good-looking costume. A new model is of dull red capeskin framed in a border of black calfskin. Its chain handle is of big links covered in black and red leather.

THE WEARING OF THE green is going big this summer. A handsome spectator sports outfit is of white linen with a wide skirt hem border of lime green linen to match the green bolero.

On Home Grounds

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph. D.

While my wife and I were attending the annual convention of the National Congress of Parents at Omaha we learned of the fine backyard playground program which has been sponsored the past eight years in Lincoln, Nebraska, by the Lincoln Council of Parent-Teacher Associations. Cooperating in this enterprise is the Lincoln Recreation Board. We obtained the following facts of Mrs. Fred E. Easterday, Recreation Chairman, Lincoln Council of Parents and Teachers.

Great interest in making the home the centre of family recreation and safety and adequate space and equipment for home play are among the objectives sought in this campaign. Its slogan is, "The Home, the Centre of Family Fun."

Try For Awards

Awards are made for originality, the use of waste materials and utilization of limited spaces. Design and appearance of home-made equipment are encouraged while suitability of the playground for use by the entire family, the variety of activities, and the time spent there are important factors in rating a playground for an award.

A feature of this campaign is the Handy Club to which all the boys and girls with playgrounds registered in this campaign are eligible. Membership is achieved when an acceptable piece of handcraft made from waste materials is completed. The purpose of this club is to encourage the use of waste materials in making "something from nothing" and at the same time stimulate interest in constructive vacation activities that will continue over a period of time. Badges made from waste bits of wood are given those who achieve membership in this club.

The Lincoln Recreation Board, for the past two years, has sent out releases to the registrants in this campaign giving suggestions for games, handicraft, and equipment suitable for home recreation. A booklet on outdoor fireplaces was also made available last year.

Chance For All

Playground activities and highlights in Lincoln vary from year to year. One year tree-houses predominated. Another year play houses and work shops were the popular trend. Last year out-door fireplaces and croquet courts were characteristic of a large number of the backyard arrangements. Some of the backyards became neighborhood areas. However, this campaign is not planned to compete with the city's summer supervised playgrounds, but rather to supplement them with such activities as may bear a very definite relationship to the home and family life.

Prize Winning Experts Say:

"Make Jam and Jelly with CERTO—it's Quicker—Easier—gives Sure Results"

Start now to make lovely Jams and Jellies this Quicker, more Reliable way

Saves Time and Energy

It's astonishing how quickly you can make jam and jelly with Certo. Here's the reason. For jams you need give only a one-minute to two-minute full rolling boil—for jellies only a half-minute to a minute. "Certo saves me time, fuel and work over a hot stove," writes Mrs. Ed. Cooper, Prizewinner at Beechy Fair (Sask.).

3 out of 4 Prizewinners in Jam and Jelly Contests use CERTO

Writes Mrs. G. H. McLachlan of Magnetawan, Ont., Prizewinner at Magnetawan Fair: "I have been using Certo for a number of years, and would not think of using any other method for making my prize-winning jams and jellies."

FREE BOOK OF 72 RECIPES

Under the label of every bottle of Certo there is a book of 72 tested recipes for jams and jellies. Different fruits need different handling, so Certo gives you a separate recipe for each fruit . . . Be sure to follow each recipe exactly.

More Jam or Jelly

Because very little juice can boil away in so short a boil, you get up to half again as much jam or jelly from an equal amount of fruit. Mrs. A. Connell, Prizewinner at Red Deer Fair (Alta.) agrees. "Because of the shorter boiling I get more jam or jelly," she writes.

Better Taste and Colour

The Certo boil is so short that the fresh fruit flavour and colour remain unchanged and unspoiled, whereas long-boiling affects both taste and colour. "The short boiling time keeps the colour and flavour of the fruit," writes Mrs. Arthur Stewart, Prizewinner at Edmonton Exhibition.

You Can't Go Wrong

If you follow exactly the recipes given with every bottle of Certo you can be sure of lovely jams and jelly. Mrs. E. M. Sawyer, Prizewinner at Sherbrooke Exhibition, knows how true this is. "You can depend on Certo if the instructions are carried out carefully," she writes.

CERTO is concentrated FRUIT PECTIN . . . the natural jellifying substance extracted from fruit in which it is most abundant.

BRITAIN LAUNCHES OWN BLITZKRIEG ON CHATTERBUGS

People Urged to Join "Britain's Silent Column" Composed of Sensible People, Who Know When Not to Talk

TIGHTEN CONTROL

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 12—(CP Cable) — Britain yesterday launched her own type of blitzkrieg—an attack against chatterbugs, rumor-mongering and defeatism—with newspaper advertisements three columns wide and nearly a page long urging readers to "join Britain's silent column" which is described as composed of "sensible people who know when not to talk."

Issued by the Ministry of Information, the advertisement contained injunctions against discussing troop movements, passing on knowledge of air raid damage, and trusting enemy broadcasts. At the bottom of the page was the slogan: "Keep it to yourself; make others do the same."

The Herald and Mail used the appearance of the ads as the subject of editorials urging the government to play its part in killing rumor by telling as much as possible about the war and allowing the press to pursue its legitimate functions unhindered.

The Mail said that Alfred Duff Cooper, Information Minister, "Hankers after tightened control of the press" but has promised he has no intention of interfering with expression of opinion.

The Mail pointed out that considered views are impossible without full, free and accurate recording of news. It recalled the "meagre official versions" issued when the Germans were marching across France which resulted in the public being unprepared for the final catastrophe.

For weeks The Canadian Press London staff has had a mutual agreement that any member guilty of howling calamity must treat the crowd.

INSTALMENT 5

Fifteen minutes later Mrs. Ballard noiselessly went up to her own bedroom. Everything was very silent there.

Sudden fright possessed Sally Ballard. She felt her knees weaken and her mouth water. Where was Will?

Then she saw him. He was lying peacefully asleep on the big couch by the fire; his even breathing was that of a weary and happy child. On his face was an expression of complete calm. It had been years since his wife had seen that expression on William Ballard's face.

The only reason Joyce Ballard lived through the next dark week at all, she herself was convinced, was that Paul von Schwerin came to see her every day. Miraculously, swiftly, just as Mother always had said it would happen, the right man had appeared, and almost immediately he became like a son in the house—very much more like a son than Ben was, in fact.

Paul was tall and lean and fair and irresponsible; and giddy; he was deeply interested in the Ballards' predicament and although he never made a sensible suggestion or seemed able to grasp the full seriousness of the situation, he was so gay, so silly, so eager to push pianos and tables about and say ridiculous things to the men who were making the inventory that the girls laughed and laughed at him and his very presence helped to carry them through trying and humiliating hours.

Every one in the family of course knew why Paul von Schwerin was abandoning his father's magnificent apartment and giving all his old friends the cold shoulder. Joyce knew it too, and her nineteen-year-old heart almost burst for joy. The collapse of the Ballard fortunes, the strained cold atmosphere of the house as one treasured possession after the other was turned over to the representatives of the creditors, the scrambled uncomfortable meals in the kitchen, were only a background to the old miracle. She and Paul von Schwerin were in love with each other.

She had not been able to believe it at first. Partly because no other boy had ever seemed in earnest and partly because Paul was so much more than merely eligible, Joyce had schooled herself sternly to believe that nothing was going to come of it. But before she had thoroughly established this policy in her heart and mind, his actions had belied it. He liked her very much indeed. He told Joyce about his flunking out of school, his hating the fellows there, his loathing for the military camp where most of his boyhood's summers had been spent. His mother had remarried and was living in Paris; he loathed Paris. His stepmother was "keen," but she was only thirty and she and the old man were always on the move. He loved home life, kitchens, fires. Everything the Ballards did seemed to him amusing and unusual, and his manner left her in no doubt that he thought Joyce especially the most witty and daring and amusing and companionable girl he had ever seen.

Without Paul the situation would have been insufferable. Even with him these were strange days. Strange to have the maids depart. Strange to have shadows and dust gathering in the house, and the dining-room deserted; strange to hear the new hard note in their mother's voice, to note their mother's frozen silences.

For Sarah Ballard in her characteristically optimistic assured little fashion could not forgive her husband. It was so unnecessary, she said, for Will to have sprung this on them in that harsh unsympathetic way! Weren't they all in this together? Couldn't they have thought up some plan. Some moderate way of meeting the situation? Why, if she and the girls had known how things were going last year, or even a few months ago—She said she was not angry, she was only hurt and surprised. She would not speak unnecessarily to her husband at meals, or indeed at any time.

William Ballard did little to lessen the strain. He had adopted a casually indifferent air; everything was all right; he had always wanted to live in the country and now he was going to live in the country. If any of them did not want to do it, then by no means were they even to think of it.

Lissey would look at him with narrowed eyes and compressed lips when he talked this way; Dodo's big eyes would fill with tears; Ben usually met it by beginning a counter-conversation relative to his finding a good job.

"Good," his father would say heartily, "I hope you do!"

But even at this moment somehow her father never fooled Joyce. She knew how he felt; she knew it was all bravado. She had moments of feeling terribly sorry for him.

One night he brought home new rubber hip boots; he had bought them at a sale. He said that he would need them in winter.

His wife and older daughters looked at the boots coldly, without comment, and after a while he carried his purchase upstairs. Joyce, unable to think of the right thing to say, sat silent, her heart aching for them all.

"Dodo thinks maybe Dad's just fooling, and the last minute he'll tell us we're not really going down to that ghastly place to live," Joyce told Paul on the very last day.

"She's a great pipe-dreamer, Dodo!" Paul said with a chuckle. He and Joyce were walking downtown; it was four o'clock on a cold foggy spring afternoon. He had come out to help box the last of the books. Afterward Joyce had made herself look her nicest to go down to the St. Francis with Paul for tea.

They had known each other only a few weeks, but from the first moment of meeting there had been a special bond between them. Today their feeling for each other had passed some other milestone; both had been conscious of it all through the thrilling hours before this hour. Paul had been not less funny, not less giddy, but today he had had moments of seriousness too, moments almost of bewilderment. Joyce had felt them as he had. She had heard him call her "dear" more than once as if inadvertently; only it had not been inadvertent. Tomorrow they were parting, for a while anyway, and he was not going to let today go by without some special word.

They went into the big hotel and found a table. Joyce loved the atmosphere of warmth and quiet and fragrance; it was good to sit back luxuriously watching other men and women moving about, meeting and talking over teacups and parting.

"I had a talk with my father last night," Paul said. Joyce could only look at him expectantly; she could not speak. Stars and rockets were wheeling about her; some lilac perfume; the orchestra was softly playing Auf Wiedersehen.

"I told him about us," Paul said. Joyce's eyes were fixed on his; her senes swam. "I said we liked each other," the boy went on. "He was swell."

Joyce saw his eyes mist; she felt her own eyes prick although she was smiling.

"Oh, I said there wasn't anything settled about it," Paul began again almost roughly. "I said you had to go away with your people, and darn it, I flunked my law course at Christmas! You knew that? It made my father awfully mad. I told him that everything was different, now that I knew you, and I said I'd do anything he liked if he'd only—"Paul's young voice had grown hoarse. "You will wait for me, won't you?" he stammered.

The room was moving about her in slow enchanted circles; the music was the music of Paradise. Joyce could not speak. Her hand crept over his.

"You knew I felt that way, didn't you, Joyce?"

He had moved his hand to grip hers; the contact went through her whole being like an electric current.

"I feel that way," she said, swallowing.

"I mean—we're only kids—I'm twenty-four." Paul went on rapidly, urgently. He seemed to Joyce the incarnation of everything that was dear and honest and handsome, squared about to face her, his hand over her hand. "I told him we'd hardly talked about it. I didn't tell him about night before last," he added with an awkward little shred of laughter. Joyce's color rose in a flood and she laughed in embarrassment too. "But that was the first time I ever kissed a girl, Joyce and mean it," Paul ended.

"I guess it was the first time with me too," Joyce said.

"My father wants me to finish up with my last year," the boy burst out anxiously. "And then he says we can go ahead!"

Joyce looked at him, awed. He hadn't really told his father that they loved each other! It couldn't be that matters were moving as fast as this. Fresh love for him welled up into the heart that was filled already with a girl's wild first trembling love.

"You see, here's what Dad said," he was going on earnestly. "Dad said it wouldn't be any good my trying for a job; I couldn't get one anywhere. But he says that if I go back and coach this summer—Tanner, who runs a coaching camp at Lake George, was talking to me about it before I came away—Dad says that if I get in again in October and finish up—I'd finish a year from Christmas—that then I could go right into the firm with him, and we can be married right away."

A year from Christmas! It sounded like centuries. But under the centuries the miracle of their loving each other, waiting for each other, belonging to each other would run.

"He's awfully kind. He doesn't know me."

"The old man is swell. We talked about two hours," he added "I told him I'd changed. I said, 'You've been telling me I had to wake up all these years; I've waked up!' I told him that you were the —the most wonderful companion I had ever known, that we just seemed to belong to each other from the very beginning."

He fumbled in a side pocket, took out a wisp of tissue paper and unrolled it carefully.

"Listen," he said, "I couldn't buy you a ring. I'm going to cost my father a lot of money if I go back, and he's kind of hard up as it is. I thought he was going to pack me off to a ranch somewhere and just let me slide and find my job. But, look, this was my grandmother's; it isn't worth much, I guess. It's only an amethyst; it's pretty isn't it? I want you to have it. And listen, we'll write each other all the time. I write rotten letters, but you won't care!"

She held the ring in the palm of her hand; looked up to smile at him through a dazzle of tears.

"It's beautiful, Paul."

They looked radiantly into each other's eyes.

"We're engaged," he said.

Cincinnati Reds in Fair Way To Repeat '39 Pennant Drive By Increasing League Lead

Reds Defeat Dodgers 6-5 in Night Game to Go 1½ Games in Front

INDIANS ON TOP

Cleveland Defeats A's 8-5 While Detroit Tigers Stopped by Senators 7-3

By BILL WHITE
Associated Press Sports Writer

If you're looking for contrasts, how about the gloom along the Gowanus in Brooklyn and the frivolity along Fountain Square in Cincinnati?

Today the Rhineland Burghers are making overtures toward the ticket windows marked "advance sale—world series" out in Ohio, while the mourners march on Flatbush Avenue, for the handwriting on the wall looks suspiciously like the Reds are in a fair way to repeat their 1939 pennant drive.

Not that last night's 6-5 victory over the Dodgers automatically gives them the championship—but it shows once again that the Reds always seem to be ready when the chips are down.

Brooklyn, fired up by a double loss to the Bees before the All-Star holiday and determined to get back on top and stay there, shot the works in an attempt to win— but the mastery of Bucky Walters was not to be denied. His five hit performance gave the Reds a vital edge in the Cincinnati-Brooklyn seasonal series—7 games to 6.

In Front Game And a Half

That put the Reds out front by a game and a half and made the third place Giants, who beat St. Louis, 8-6 in an 11-inning struggle just that much closer to the Dodgers.

In the other National League doings, the Boston Bees and the Chicago Cubs split a double bill. Sebastian Sisti's long fly in the 10th scored Eddie Miller for a 2-1 nightcap Bee victory after Bill Nicholson's three run homer helped the Cubs win the first game, 8-2.

The Philadelphia-Pittsburgh game was postponed by rain.

Biggest news in the American League was Red Rolfe's eyewash and its wondrous cure. The redhead has been bothered with a minor eye ailment. He found a new prescription yesterday—and promptly belted out two triples and a homer to pace the Yanks to a 6-4 win over the St. Louis Browns, as the world champs opened a long home stand.

Detroit Out of Lead

The see-saw American League first-place race kept up its dizzy doings. The Cleveland Indians, on homeruns by Ben Chapman, Lou Boudreau and Ken Keltner, beat the Athletics 8-5 and went into the top spot. Young Sid Hudson of the Washington Senators scattered nine hits to down the Detroit Tigers, 7-3 and drop them from the loop lead.

Bobby Doerr belted a 13th inning homerun to give the Red Sox a 3-2 decision over the Chicago White Sox in the day's longest duel.

Jurist Suggests Sports World 'Carry On' in Canada

Justice Davis Says "Would be for Best Interests of the Country and People"

ARMY COMES FIRST

(By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 12—(CP)—Effect of Canada's compulsory service plans on sports remains to be determined but in the meantime, Mr. Justice T. C. Davis suggested today, "The sports world should carry on as usual."

"In a general way I wouldn't consider it in the best interests of the country to pursue a policy which would crush sport," said Mr. Justice Davis of the Saskatchewan Appeal Court, Deputy Minister designate of the new Department of National War Services.

"I don't think sports should fold up because of the war," he added. "It shouldn't be our plan to kill sports and I think sportsmen should all operate as usual, using their best judgment in the light of conditions."

With Hon. J. G. Gardiner, soon to take office as Minister of the new department, Mr. Justice Davis is engaged in working out plans for national registration, preparatory to the calling up of men for compulsory home service under the Mobilization Act.

Mr. Gardiner said he thought the relation of sports to voluntary war service should receive careful consideration.

To Get Views

"I think it would be a good idea to get the views of persons interested in sports," he said. "In the last war units in training had their own hockey and football teams.

"Men were often enlisted in a particular regiment because of their athletic abilities."

The Agriculture Minister said he had not had an opportunity to give the matter of sports any particular consideration but he thought the matter of sports would come under his new department in co-operation with provincial authorities.

Help Public Morale

Personally he was inclined to think that football games this fall would be a good thing to help public morale. He saw no reason why men in units stationed near a city should not take part in football or hockey. But that, he added, was a matter for the Defence Department.

It is up to the officer commanding any outfit as to whether a man will be alowed leave to practise or play with his civilian team. But . . the army comes first.

In any event the policy of holding intra-unit and inter-unit contests and arranging games between army teams and civilian teams will be continued.

As for the matter of mobilization of men for training and home defence, Mr. Justice Davis said the government had not as yet formulated any detailed plan that might be of assistance to managers of baseball, football and hockey teams. He added he realized the uncertainty facing them as they looked to the future.

Neither amateur nor professional sport will be considered an essential industry, he said, and would thus be subject to the same drain of manpower for service as any other form of activity.

The drain might even be greater because athletes are young and physically fit. But it was Mr. Justice Davis' belief that individuals and organizations should carry on as usual, always consistent with the expectations of service to the country.

"A sane attitude is what is needed," he said. "But if the players are needed, they will be called."

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, July 12.— (AP)— If you've been wondering how Kayak II is training, he stepped a mile in 1:38 the other day—wore four leg bandages, too . . . Jack Dempsey says he gave Cowboy Luttrell more punishment in two heats than Godoy took from Louis or Galento from Baer.

Bobby Jones, who was a sensation at 14, has a son that age who shows absolutely no inclination for golf. Incidentally, Bobby makes his first competitive appearance in New York in 10 years tomorrow in a Red Cross match at the Lido Club. In the 1929 open he toured the same course in 69 . . . Boston fans still are wondering what Joe Cronin was thinking about when he let Pee Wee Reese get away to Brooklyn . . Joe Louis already has knocked out four of the N.B.A.'s current top 10 heavies.

Maybe you noticed the sound effects went dead during parts of the Baer-Galento fight films . . they were cut off . . . Max's language was the reason. Lip readers say some of the things he said to Tony were for too hot for the celluoid.

Ever since Detroit Tigers paid Rice's J. P. Wood a $4,000 bonus to sign with their Beaumont Farm Club, Texas papers have been howling for Judge Landis to do something about the Major Leagues taking ball players out of school. . . . Wood was captain of the ball team and one of the key figures in football plans.

EXPECTS BR. HORSES

TOM GORMAN

English racehorse owners are planning to ship many famous thoroughbreds to Canada to prevent their being destroyed in the event of a German invasion, according to an announcement by Tommy Gorman, of Montreal. As head of the Quebec Racing association, Mr. Gorman stated that cabled acceptances had been received from British owners in response to an offer from the association to accommodate British thoroughbreds in Canada. Some of the horses will possibly run on Canadian tracks.

MONTREAL SQUAD IN THIRD PLACE

Seventh Straight Win Registered at the Expense of Buffalo 9-4

(By The Associated Press)

If Clyde Sukeforth's Montreal Royals keep on going as they have in the past week, there's going to be a lot of crowding up front in the International standings.

For Royals, in the fifth place just a week ago, are now tightly entrenched in third place.

They are now riding along on a current winning streak of seven straight—the seventh coming last night in a 9-4 romp over the Buffalo Bisons.

The Royals were held to three hits by Floyd Stromme during the first six innings, but broke loose with a six-hit assault in the seventh good for five runs, and then added three more tallies in the eighth.

Red Howell helped Baltimore Orioles to a 14-9 victory over Jersey City Giants with two homers and a double. Those were the most important of the 16 hits the Orioles got. Giants matched the flock blow for blow, but couldn't bunch them as well.

Syracuse chiefs came up with a three run rally in the ninth to score a 7-6 decision over Newark Bears.

Rochester-Toronto game was postponed by rain.

TENNIS

Quebec, July 12—(CP)—Surprise of the Dominion tennis championships is red-haired Lewis Duff of Montreal, who sprang the major upset by defeating the highly-regarded Ross Wilson of Toronto.

Duff, who maintains that this is his last year of serious tournament tennis, is sixth-ranking player in the Dominion.

During his entire career, the stocky Montrealer, who graduated from the University of Miami this year, has won only one major tournament—the Ontario singles title in 1938. By his semi-final round victory over Wilson, he stands a fair chance of winning the Dominion crown when he meets Don McDiarmid of Ottawa in the final.

While it is true that Wilson was far below his usual form in their match yesterday, it detracts little from the showing of Duff. For the wily Duff, realizing that Wilson's overhead was his forte, played all shots for his opponent's feet.

Duff held the lead all the way and walked off the court with a 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 victory.

Third-ranking player in the Dominion, McDiarmid is still favored to beat Duff in the final for the title, however. Recent winner of the Quebec singles crown, the Ottawa star showed his game at its best by disposing of Roger Durivage of Montreal in the other semi-final, 7-5, 6-2, 6-1.

The pair who meet in the singles final remain in the running as a team in the doubles. Duff and McDiarmid teamed to beat the Quebec entry of F. Pouliot-F. Surveyer in a quarter-final match yesterday, and today they will meet Roger Durivage and Dr. G. Leclerc of Montreal. In the other semi-final, Phil Pearson-Ross Wilson will play the Montreal team of Joe O'Hara-Jim McDougall.

Highlight of today's play will be the women's singles semi-finals. In one match the highly-favored Eleanor Young meets Winnifred McConnell of Ottawa, and in the other the second-seeded Jean Millne plays Mrs. Rene Bolte.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken I. Colling

Two more anecdotes about Pitcher Lefty Gomez of the Yankees were reported the other day by Jimmy Powers, sports editor of the New York Daily News.

Joe Glenn, garrulous catcher now with the Red Sox, was Lefty's receiver one day at Yankee Stadium, relates Powers. Lefty was having trouble getting Joe's intricate finger-wagged signals.

Finally, Glenn called time and walked to the mound.

"What's the matter," he asked, "don't you know the signals?"

"Are those signals?" Lefty retorted, "or are you tryin' to hypnotize me?"

A few weeks ago, Lefty was riding the third base umpire in a game at the Stadium. Lefty imitated the umpire, waving his arms and doing his version of a Russian ballet dance. His umps stood it long enough and finally thumbed the dancing Lefty from the dugout.

A few days later came the official notice. . . . "$25 fine."

"Wow" moaned Lefty, "talk about your ten-cents-a-dance girls! That jig cost me 25 bucks!"

Kingston will be back in the Ontario Baseball Association before the ink is dry on this copy. Yes sir, believe it or not the fruits of minor league baseball sponsorship has already begun to bear in a most prolific manner. After two years of successful operation in a City Baseball League the Kingston mentors feel their efforts have borne fruit and "Star" Reid, the guiding light of minor league ball in Kingston, is seeking a bye for the Kingston kids into the junior O.B.A. playdowns. Deloro and Bancroft have already affiliated, while Napanee is expected to get into the baseball swim, in the intermediate "B" ranks, before play-off time rolls around. Coming closer to home we hear the Cannifton "Sluggers" are toying with the suggestion of entering a team from the South Hastings League into the O.B.A. also. If the Sluggers decide to affiliate they could use any available players in Belleville. We understand the only thing holding them back is the lack of an experienced catcher. Well, that could be easily remedied as "Speedy" St. Louis would be the ideal man to fill that post.

Did you know that the Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Browns are the only clubs that have not had at least one hurler on the firing line in any of the seven All-Star frays. The Philadelphia Athletics and Boston Red Sox have both been represented by the same man—Robert (Lefty) Grove, who entered the 1933 dream game as a member of the Athletics, then represented the Bosox in the 1936 and 1938 mid-summer events.

The Phillies and Brooklyn Dodgers each have had one pitcher in an All-Star combat, although Van Mungo of the Flatbushers represented the N. L. in both 1934 and 1937. Bucky Walters, as a Phil, was a pitcher in the 1937 game.

Four major outfits have been represented by three twirlers in one or more dream contests. They are: Cleveland—Harder (4); Feller (1); Allen (1); Cincinnati—Vander Meer (1); Derringer (2); Grissom (1); Chicago Cubs—W Lee (2); Warneke (3); C. Davis (1); St. Louis Cardinals—J. Dean (4); Hallahan (1); W. Walker (1).

Do you remember when Jess Willard lost his last fight 17 years ago today when he was knocked into oblivion by the Argentinian Luis Angelo Firpo at Jersey City. Willard who won the world heavyweight boxing title from Jack Johnson at Havana in 1915 in a 26-round match, lost the crown to Jack Dempsey in 1919, when his seconds threw a towel into the ring after the fight had gone three rounds.

Unbeknown to the golfers up around the Belleville Golf Club the club caddies have a lengthy vocabulary of their own for describing the temperaments of the various local golfers. The caddies refused to divulge what classes Joe Legault, Harry Ridley, Jack Marsh, Joe Cather and "Mac" McElrath come under, but here are some of the names the caddies pin to local golfers. For instance a "thicket thumper" invariably stays in the rough; a "tusk hog" is a golfer who slices off one tee and hooks off the next—just at the angles of tusks. Then there is the "grass nibbler" who tops his shots; a "trapper", who stays in the bunkers. "Catfishers" always get into the water traps, while there are "stump strippers" and "motorboats", the latter meaning golfers who—"putt-putt-putt."

Travelling in a large Robt. Simpson bus, the Simpson ladies softball team arrived in Trenton last night to play the R.C.A.F. boys at softball. Inclement weather halted proceedings and after the girls had been entertained at the Airport, they agreed to return next Thursday night and play. All tickets for last night's match will be honored next Thursday. The rains came and forced the postponement of the Big-Z versus Metros. game here also, leaving tonight's Five-ten versus Corbin game on at the Collegiate tonight. Over at the Flats it's Point Anne and Shell battling in their old feud.

While training for his bout with Henry Armstrong next week, Lew Jenkins was presented with the Ring magazine gold belt, emblematic of his world lightweight championship.

SPORT SPICE—That's a real dog-fight in the American League. . . . The Nationals beat the Tigers yesterday to allow the Indians to take over the league leadership after beating the A's. . . . Buck Newson, Detroit hurler, and Sports Scribe Bob Ruark, (Washington Daily News), exchanged punches yesterday after Newson objected to some of Ruark's remarks. . . . yes, there's never a dull moment in the business. . . . The St. Louis Browns have lost their last seven games, after having proven the surprise team of 1940 . . . . Be prepared for a big shake-up in local softball circles over the week end. . . . Remember, Monday is the last day for the signing of players in the O.A.S.A. . . . Mr. Justice Davis, of Ottawa, suggested that sports should be carried on with vigor during the war period. . . . after all, the public should have some chance to forget their worries and relax and there is no better method of relaxation for the general public than through the sport lanes.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

FRUMPIEST WOMAN IN BELLEVILLE GETS BEST DRESSED VOTE

You remember her—the woman who never bothered about her appearance—who got to thinking no one ever looked at her anyway.

Look at her now! She's smart—chic—up-to-the-minute — and now she's the best dressed woman in town.

A friend decided something could be done about that woman's appearance. She reasoned that if one item in her wardrobe could be spruced up, the rest would follow automatically. So she started with the shoes and—you've guessed it—she told her to use Nugget Shoe Polish—the polish that preserves as it shines. And the rest was easy!—Adv.

Largest Trout to Date Taken by Fishermen Is Twenty Pounds

South Bay, July 12.—Now that is is expected that better catches of trout will be taken from Lake Ontario waters, Point Traverse fishermen are vying for the biggest fish of season which has not been duplicated since 1938, when W. J. Ostrander & Son netted a 25 pound lake trout which measured forty inches in length. The largest trout brought in to the Point Traverse fishing colony to date is twenty pounds.

Initialed Grain

On the farm of W. J. Ostrander, Point Traverse, a large field of oats and barley is growing, each leaf of the grain being marked with letter "B". Mr. Ostrander exhibited some of the grain to The Ontario Intelligencer and its correspondent can confirm the statement.

Mr. Ostrander informs the paper that it also appeared on grain during the last year of the Great War, and is of the opinion that it stands for Britain, which will leads us to victory.

Calls at Ducks

One of the finest cabined cruisers on fresh water, Jean III of Rochester, N.Y., with a fishing party aboard called at the Main Duck Island this week. The palatial yacht is 80 feet in length and powered with two Winton engines of two hundred and fifty horsepower each. She was built at a cost of seventy-five thousand dollars.

Many trim sailing yachts called in the Duck vicinity seven passing by the light in one day.

Guide boats from Cape Vincent are bringing fishing parties to the for Britain, which will lead us to being reported taken from those waters.

Commercial fishermen have been busily engaged painting up their crafts and the fleet has taken on a natty appearance.

Berlin Communique

Berlin, July 11—(AP)— Today's German High Command communique follows:

"The success of our air force against British convoys already announced in special communiques, has led, according to final investigations, to the destruction of one cruiser of 7,000 tons and four merchant ships totalling 21,000 tons. Further one cruiser and seven commercial vessels, including one tanker, were so seriously damaged or set afire by bombs that they must be regarded as lost.

(These claims were not confirmed in London.)

"Our fliers yesterday achieved effective successes against airports in southeast England and harbor facilities on the south and southwest coasts and also against factories and armament industry. Great explosions were observed especially at munition dumps in Pembroke and at the harbors of Plymouth and Swansea.

Also tanks at Pembroke and Portland were fired.

(A British Ministry of Home Security statement said: "Bombs were dropped at a number of points in South Wales. A chapel and other buildings, including a factory, were damaged. At a southwest coast port fires were caused and minor damage is reported in other districts in the south of England.)

"An enemy attack on the airport at Amiens-Glisy by seven British bombers ended with the shooting down of all seven planes, as announced in a special communique. There was also an air battle during a (German) attack on a convoy in the English Channel when 10 enemy fighters were shot down. In the night of July 10-11, no enemy flights were made into the Reich. In air battles yesterday, a total of 35 planes and a barrage of balloon were shot down. Seven of our own planes are missing.

(No attack on Amiens-Glisy has been reported by the British Air Ministry. British losses in the air battle over the English Channel were two fighters; the Germans lost 14 aircraft.)

"In the commercial war against England, successes constantly increase as a result of the favorable operations of our U-boat bases. In the six weeks prior to July 8 alone, 609,000 registered tons of enemy commercial shipping were sunk. Therefore, the average sinkings by U-boats increased to over 100,000 registered tons weekly."

(These claims have not been confirmed. British shipping losses for the week ended June 30, the last announced by the Admiralty, totalled 30,377 tons. For the week before that they totalled 88,789 tons, which was the heaviest total in some time).

Location of new minefields laid by the British navy between the Orkney Islands and Iceland and between Iceland and Greenland is shown on the map. Object is to guard Ireland against possible German invasion from Norwegian bases and to help bottle up the Nazi fleet.

"Mind My Bike, Please"

Starting off for one of the ceaseless patrols that the R.A.F. maintains against German air raiders—and which often turn into hard-hitting raids against German objectives—the rear-gunner of a British bomber cycles to the airfield and then turns his "bike" over to a member of the ground crew. "It saves walking back to quarters," he grinned.

NORWEGIAN SAYS NAZIS USED RUMOR OF 'INSIDE JOB'

President Hambro Declares Occupation Not Due to 'Fifth Column'

GOLD WAS SAVED

New York, July 12 (AP).—The occupation of Norway by the Germans was "in no sense an inside job", says C. J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian parliament for fifteen years.

"I can prove that reports to this effect were spread by the Nazis themselves," he said in an interview on his arrival in New York yesterday.

"Nothing demoralizes a people more surely than rumors that they have been betrayed by their neighbors, by members of their own government, even by officers in the defence forces. Such rumors are a most effective Nazi weapon, and if my country is anything like others that have suffered the same fate, they are largely unjustified and untrue.

Hitler Works Fifth Column.

"The truth is that there is less of a fifth column in Norway than in any other country. Hitler works the fifth column idea for all its worth. He wants to create the impression that there are thousands, even millions, of Nazi sympathisers everywhere.

"It should be remembered that we never expected to be attacked. We lacked military equipment, had no fighting planes, no anti-aircraft guns."

He said Norway had saved virtually all of her merchant marine, totalling more than 4,000,000 tons, which is chartered to Britain and France but still flies the Norwegian flag. Few of these ships are in French hands.

Nerse Gold In U.S. and Canada.

Norwegians, he reported, are proud of the fact they succeeded in getting all of their gold reserve, about $100,000,000, out of the country. It is now deposited in the United States and Canada, Hambro said.

Little Change in Prices On Produce Markets

Toronto, July 12 — Cheese and butter prices gained fractions in light trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while Grade A-large eggs eased slightly under the pressure of a small surplus.

Butter's fractional upturn was a reflection of improved buying on the Montreal market. Local demand remained spotty, and the market here was not active. First-grade Ontario creamery solids sold at 21 1-2c. Some sales of western butter were made at 22 1-4c.

While other grades stayed steady, A-large eggs in the graded section eased to a range of 25 1-2c to 26c. Receipts of these eggs were a little more plentiful than could readily be absorbed. A good demand was evidenced for A-medium and A-pullet eggs, but the movement of A-large was slow. Grade B eggs moved upward slightly to a range of 20 1-2c to 21c and Grade C to 15 1-2c.

Repatriated as American Citizen in Special Court Sitting

New York, July 12.—(AP)—Lady Ribbelsdale, the former Mrs. John Jacob Astor, long a leader of London society, renounced her title yesterday and was repatriated as a United States citizen.

She became plain "Mrs. Ava Ribbelsdale" after swearing allegiance to the United States and taking a special oath by which she discarded the title in a Federal Court ceremony bestowing citizenship on 250 other aliens.

Mrs. Ribbelsdale arrived from Europe as a war refugee several weeks ago. The widow of John Jacob Astor, who perished in the Titanic disaster in 1912, she married the late Lord Ribbelsdale in London in 1919. She is the mother of Vincent Astor of New York city.

23 NAZI PLANES

Scotland, one bomber.
East coast, four bombers.
South coast, one bomber.
Southwest coast, two planes of unspecified type.

Wave after wave of heavy British bombers blasted military objectives deep in Germany last night, it was reported by aviation circles in anticipation of an official outline of the R.A.F.'s work.

During raids yesterday on German-occupied France and The Netherlands, it was announced, one British bomber penetrated far into Germany's industrialised Ruhr Valley and in broad daylight attacked oil depots.

Three British planes failed to return from Germany, but the Air Ministry balanced this loss by announcing that fighter commands of the British defence had confirmed the loss of another German plane in yesterday's actions over Britain, thus bringing yesterday's total of German planes destroyed to 23.

Tabulation of Losses

The defenders of the British Isles started a new tabulation of German losses today with an Air Ministry announcement that four German bombers were blasted into the sea off the east coast this morning.

The four planes, caught by the gunsights of swift pursuit planes, were among 12 planes in a new attack on shipping.

Earlier unofficial reports told of the downing of two German planes by fighters off the southwest coast. In early afternoon another bomber was shot down in northeast Scotland and still another was said to have been caught in a screen of heavy anti-aircraft fire at a south coast port and brought down.

German planes crossed the southwest coast in the early morning light but were quickly intercepted by a British fighter. Bursts of gunfire from the fighter were followed immediately by the dropping of six bombs within less than half a minute. Bombers, when attacked, frequently try to lighten their planes by emptying their bomb racks, target or no target.

3 Houses Demolished

Three houses of a southwestern coastal town were demolished and others were damaged. One bomb struck a children's playground.

The Air Ministry said that night raiders crossed the eastern and southwestern coasts, dropping bombs "in a few districts near the coast" to launch a new day of assault on sea and land objectives.

Casualties in the night attack were "slight" according to the Air Ministry, and none were fatal.

Raids Over Scotland, England

Nazi raids were broadened today to include Scotland as well as southern England. A German bomber roared out of the clouds over a northeastern Scottish city shortly after noon and three Spitfire fighters met it with a swift-rising challenge.

The invader dropped two bombs as the fighter roared up. The bomber had run a gauntlet of anti-aircraft fire but apparently was caught by full bursts of the fighters' guns.

Like a wounded bird, the plane circled the city, losing height. Smoke poured from the tail. The bomber just cleared rooftops on the outskirts. It struck a tree and bounced across a road into a building where both it and the building burst into flames. The crew perished.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire was heard in a southern English town at 1 p.m.

As violent as the attacks have become, officials expect they will be made "infinitely stronger" within the "very near future."

Enemy Listens

Minister of Information Alfred Duff Cooper said in a broadcast last night:

"Unfortunately, the enemy read our Press; the enemy listen to our broadcasts and nothing that is printed or said escapes the eyes and ears of the enemy."

Single instances of damage done and casualties caused yesterday may give an idea of the extent of casualties throughout the attacked areas:

In the northeast, three bombers which killed "several" persons made some 30 to 40 houses uninhabitable.

After dusk last night in one southern England point 14 were killed and 47 wounded.

97 Raiders Down Since June 18.

Since the daily raids began June 18th, the Royal Air Force has shot down 97 raiders, including 22 yesterday, and damaged almost an equal number so severely it is believed they failed to reach home. British losses are described as "very much smaller."

Today's raids began shortly after midnight as a German raider dropped six bombs on the residential districts of a southwest town. Two of the raiders were shot down off the coast.

Shortly afterward raiders appeared over Wales, but apparently no bombs were dropped.

In yesterday's raids "several" persons were killed and in the northeast 30 or 40 houses were rendered uninhabitable. Their occupants presumably were in air raid shelters as they were not reported hurt.

Private Evacuation to Continue

Although the government plan has been postponed it is not proposed to interfere with the private evacuation of children to Canada and the United States.

The government decision came when thousands of children all over the United Kingdom had been selected to go to Canada and all arrangements made on both sides of the Atlantic for their maintenance Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, recently pointed out to the British government that extensive plans had been completed in the Dominion to receive the children and that widespread disappointment would be created by any decision to postpone or abandon the scheme.

Children Likely Disappointed

Disappointment is no doubt rife among the children themselves. Several cases are known where children who refused to evacuate London and other cities were eager to leave their families when the chance to live in Canada came their way.

It is known that the government is highly sensitive of its responsibility to see that sea evacuees should have such protection as would reasonably ensure a safe voyage. The recent fate of the Arandora Star showed that even fast passenger vessels could not always rely on speed for safety when not escorted.

While it is recognised that children privately evacuated may be travelling in unescorted vessels, they would not be under a government scheme and the responsibility for their safety would not rest with the government.

MARSHAL PETAIN

It is not known yet whether Hitler will consider residents of Alsace-Lorraine—part of Germany before the last war—as "Frenchmen" with the right to vote in such a referendum.

May Transfer Capital

Although more than half of France is occupied by troops of conquering Germany, Petain showed his intention to extend at least his civil power over that region by his desire to move the capital from this famed health resort to Versailles.

What Petain and his triumvirate of advisers — Pierre Laval, General Maxime Weygand and Adrien Marquet—can make of their new France appeared to depend on how much support Berlin was willing to give.

They seemed particularly anxious to convince Germany and Italy that the new government is not just the old democracy temporarily masquerading under a totalitarian "front."

Petain drew the outlines of the new French system in a broadcast yesterday.

"International capitalism and international socialism are things of the past," he said.

Basis of State Stated

"The base of our new state must be work, the family and the fatherland."

The state will return to the provincial system of pre-republican France, he announced. The 33 former provinces will be re-established with governors to wield the local power which under the third republic was vested in prefects of 90 departments.

Petain's government will include 12 ministers. Some of them will function in Paris if the Germans approve.

(Among Frenchmen in Switzerland it was reported the impression was growing that under the new system, with Weygand regarded as a Royalist sympathiser, France was closer to return of a monarchy than any time since 1875. The Duke of Guise, as head of the House of Orleans, and his son, the Count of Paris, are the active pretenders to the throne. They now are in Spanish Morocco.)

Paul Baudoin, Foreign Minister in the last cabinet of the republic, told an Associated Press correspondent that a "family vote" was being considered.

Each head of a family would have one vote for himself, one for his wife and one for each child, whereas a bachelor would have a single vote.

Text of Acts Passed

The text of three "constitutional acts" almost royal in tone, which marked the end of the republic, follow:

The First Act

"We, Philippe Petain, Marshal of France, in view of the constitutional law of July 10, 1940, assume the functions of Chief of the French State. In consequence, we decree that article two of the constitutional law of Feb. 25, 1875, is abrogated."

The Second Act

"Article 1: The Chief of the French State has full governmental power to name and revoke Ministers and Secretaries of the State who are responsible only to him.

"First, he exercises legislative power in the cabinet until formation of new assemblies and, second, after formation, in cases of foreign tension and of serious internal crisis, under his decision alone and in the same form. Under the same circumstances he can decree measures of a budgetary and fiscal order.

"Third, he promulgates laws and assures their execution.

"Fourth, he names persons to all civil and military posts for which the law provides no other means of appointment.

"Fifth, he disposes of armed forces.

"Sixth, he wields the right to pardon and amnesty.

"Seventh, Envoys and Ambassadors of foreign powers are accredited to him. He negotiates and ratifies all treaties.

"Eighth, he can declare a state of siege over one or many parts of the territory.

"He cannot declare war without a previous agreement of the newly created legislature.

"Article 2: All dispositions of the constitutional law of Feb. 25, 1875, and of July 16, 1875, incompatible with the present act are abrogated."

Third Act

"Article 1: The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies will subsist until the assemblies provided for by the constitutional law of July 10, 1940, are formed.

"Article 2: The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies are adjourned until further notice. They may henceforth meet only when convoked by the Chief of State.

"Article 3: The first article of the constitutional law of July 16, 1875, is abrogated."

SCIENTIFIC DIET

5. Take over fields which the farmers are not making produce and last ounce of foodstuffs.

While the government moved toward rigid food conservation, it was emphasised that present supplies are plentiful. The truth of this statement is borne out by the well-laden dining tables to be found in private homes and the variety of courses that can be ordered in restaurants.

However, the time is foreseen by such prophets as David Lloyd George when the onslaught of the Fascist forces may be expected to hamper the vital flow of foodstuffs and other materials to these isles. The little Welshman told the House of Commons:

"I have no doubt that the attack is going to be much more formidable in character, not merely on ships at sea but upon our ports and communications."

While Robert Hudson, Minister of Agriculture, has not revealed the nature of the "scientific diet" that lies ahead — he has only warned that it may be less palatable at first — it is authoritatively hinted that the people are likely to be required to eat more home-grown vegetables and less meat. Potato flour bread is believed to be just around the corner from the pantry.

If the promise of "stomach control" caused any shock to the beef-loving Briton, Mr. Hudson artfully removed it by partially lifting the cloud that has hung over the United Kingdom since it was hinted that a curtailment of the hop harvest might cut down the nation's beer. The Minister of Agriculture told the cheering Commons that he was doing everything possible to ensure an "adequate supply of beer."

Even though the dinner plate contains only 'arf a portion of meat, the Briton won't really mind so long as he can wash it down with a tanker of real 'arf and 'arf.

BRITISH DEFENDERS

London, July 12 (CP). — British "flying columns" of mechanized units are harrying Italian troops off in the forts of Capuzzo and Maddelana on the frontier of Egypt and Italian Libya, military informants said today.

Strong Italian columns had advanced to the frontier and momentarily pushed back British armored car patrols operating in a 60-mile zone behind the frontier.

These columns, part of Italian forces in Libya estimated here at 250,000 men, reoccupied forts which British troops previously had taken from garrisons of native Libyan troops.

The British "flying columns" now have flanked the forts and are harrying supply trains.

A pipeline running from the coast to supply the forts with water also has been cut, the informants said.

The main Italian stroke in the Libyan theatre has been a "reconnaissance in force" as far as the British-held town of Salum (Sollum) on the Mediterranean just within Egyptian territory. Salum still is held by the British forces.

HUSBAND FACES MURDER CHARGE

was last seen when she left the home of her parents on Keele Street Wednesday night on her way to meet Matthew.

Police said Matthew, who said first he had not met his wife, told them the woman jumped out of their automobile as they drove along the Dundas highway. They claim Matthew placed his unconscious wife in the car and drove to Erindale where he removed most of her clothing and attempted to revive her.

According to police, the body was dragged 75 feet and thrown into the water.

Coroner A. B. Sutton of Port Credit said there were several marks on the woman's face indicating that she might have been struck. He said a post-mortem examination revealed drowning as the cause of death.

Walter Green, the girl's father, told police Matthew returned home early Wednesday and said he had not seen his wife all evening. Matthew had said he was worried and he left the house, saying he was going to see if his wife was at her sister's home.

The woman's disappearance was reported afterwards to police who detained Matthew and questioned him at length before placing him under arrest on the murder charge. He collapsed at the police station.

Police said the interior of Matthew's car and his clothing will be examined by medico-legal experts.

ORANGEMEN

Resolution Against Pacifists, Defeatists

A resolution presented to the mass meeting at Exhibition Park following the Toronto parade called upon Orangemen to "resist and expose traitors, pacifists, defeatists or any other variety of disloyalists."

At Tillsonburg's Lisgar Park, about 2,000 Orangemen from Elgin and Oxford Counties, East Middlesex and South Perth held their first joint program since 1916. At London, Mrs. Ruth Day, Grand Mistress of Women's Auxiliaries for Ontario West, placed a wreath upon the Cenotaph where London district lodges held a memorial service for Canada's war dead.

Similar ceremonies were held at numerous other points throughout the province.

Another large celebration was held at Paris, district lodges being in attendance as well as many from Niagara district points. Harriston was the scene of another Western Ontario celebration.

Northern Ontario Orangemen travelled to Sundridge where 2,500 lodge members participated. North Bay members paraded 200 strong before they left for the mass meeting.

One of the day's oldest participants was Thomas Mara, 91-year-old former mayor of Brampton. He joined his local lodge in the gathering at Brampton which saw Orangemen from Halton, Peel, Dufferin, York and adjoining centres get together as guests of the Brampton Orange Association and the Peel County Orange Lodge.

Notable absentees in the ranks of the numerous parades were the sons of many members who are now on active service with Canada's fighting forces.

Simcoe County lodges, about 3,000 strong, turned out at Bradford for the "glorious twelfth".

Toronto, July 12 (CP).—Toronto Orangemen paraded today, as they have for more than a century. Men and women, boys and girls, from veterans of four score years to tots of four and five were in the procession.

There was a notable difference in its tone compared to other July 12 parades. The ancient Orange tunes from Ireland which breathed of shindies and shillelahs were soft-pedalled by the fifes and drums today. In their stead rose the strains of "Onward Christian Soldiers", "Abide With Me" (as the paraders paused at the cenotaph) and other hymns, and all the bands played up the popular new patriotic ballad, "There'll Always Be An England". The emphasis was patriotic rather than partisan.

Need of Unity Stressed.

"We are placing the emphasis on the need of unity in behalf of our Christian civilization," said John Elliott, youthful county master, before the parade.

The speaker of the day, Rev. J. Wesley Bready, whose historical works on John Wesley and Lord Saftesbury are well known, is not an Orangeman, but his theme was the practical value of the order in maintaining the principles of Protestantism.

10,000 At Carleton Place.

Ottawa, July 12 (CP).—Bright, cloudless weather smiled on Orange day celebrations in the Ottawa valley today as thousands of members of the Orange order gathered at various points for celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

No meetings were held in the capital, but most Orangemen journeyed forty miles west to Carleton Place, Ont., where 10,000 members of the order gathered with their families from Lanark, Ottawa and Carleton Counties. Smaller celebrations were held at Prescott, Perth, Smith's Falls and Woodlawn.

Montreal Orangemen "Walk".

Montreal, July 12 (CP).—Montreal Orangemen, numbering about 150, paraded today to Bonaventure Station, where they entrained for Dunvegan, Ont., to take part in the Orangemen's parade there. They were led by Worshipful Master W. J. Johnston.

Brockville, July 12 (CP).—Brockville Orangemen and women, about 300 strong, gaily uniformed and accompanied by fife and drum bands, are today celebrating the "glorious twelfth" at Prescott twelve miles east of here.

Rides White Horse.

Toronto, July 12 (CP). — W. H. Harper, veteran County Orange Lodge Marshal and "King Billy" in Toronto's July 12 parades during the last forty years, rode a new white horse today.

Mayzie, whose daily occupation is hauling a bread wagon, had her day in the limelight. Polly, who has led the parade for several years, convalesces in an equine maternity home in the country.

Hamilton, Ont., July 12 (CP).—Two thousand Orangemen left here today for Paris to celebrate the 250th anniversary of the battle of the Boyne.

Most disappointed Orangeman in the city was Gordon Forbes, 23, master of L.O.L. 779, youngest master in Orange West, who was unable to get away for the walk. Carried by his grandfather in his first parade when he was 11 months old, he hadn't missed a year since.

ON NEUTRALITY PATROL

Washington, July 12 (CP) President Roosevelt, at his press conference today, said in reply to a question that United States warships in the vicinity of the French island of Martinique were merely on neutrality patrol.

British warships are also in the area keeping a check on a portion of the French fleet at Martinique.

Reported Activity Of Nazis in S. America Called Intimidation

Washington, July 11. (AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull said today that reported German activities in Latin America in connection with the forthcoming Havana Conference apparently was a species of intimidation of nations whose sovereignty was entitled to the fullest respect.

The conference of American nations will meet July 20 to conside. methods of joint action on western hemisphere defence and economic unity.

Hull's comment was promised by questions at his press conference about dispatches, particularly from Central American countries reporting that German diplomats had warned the governments of those countries against any action aimed directly or indirectly at Germany.

This German warning was reported to have been given to the Central American governments by Dr. Otto Reinebeck, the Nazi envoy to the five republics.

There was no theory Hull said, on which any country should attack such sovereignty or freedom of action.

Meanwhile, the United States was said reliably to be excluding all non-American nations from advance discussion or information on western hemisphere economic and defence proposals to come before the Havana Conference.

4 Billion Dollar Naval Bill Goes To White House

Washington, July 11—(AP)— A $4,000,000,000 naval expansion bill was sent to the White House today by the United States Congress.

It was a major portion of the defence campaign and legislators on Capital Hill were manifesting a desire to approve President Roosevelt's request for $4,848,171,957 in cash and authorizations to start this expansion and to increase greatly the army's land and air forces.

The Defence Commission announced meanwhile that it had let $100,000,000 in contracts in recent days for new warplanes for the army and navy. Other contracts are being negotiated, it was said, with a view to adding 25,000 planes by July 1942.

The navy expansion measure, sent to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature by unanimous House of Representatives agreement to minor Senate changes, would virtually double the size of the present navy now built.

There have been unofficial estimates that completion of the $4,000,000,000 program, together with other naval construction already authorized, would give the United States a fleet of 618 warships capable of meeting simultaneous threats in the Atlantic and Pacific.

Sentiment for the $4,848,171,957 addition to the defence program was coupled with congressional approval for President Roosevelt's pledge that no United States troops would be sent to fight in Europe.

100 Persons Crushed When Subway Train Hits Bumper Block

New York, July 11 (AP)—Nine hundred passengers were thrown into darkness and confusion and 100 persons crushed, bruised or cut by shattered glass when a crowder, 14-car early morning commuters' train crashed into a dumper today at Grand Central Terminal.

The impact—and recoil from the bumper block—threw standing passengers to the floor, while others trampled upon them. The train, arriving from North White Plains, was plunged into darkness.

The company said the accident was due "apparently to insufficient reduction of speed."

ACTRESS ABOARD CLIPPER

New York, July 11.—(AP)— The Atlantic Clipper arrived today with 17 passengers after a non-stop flight from Horta, the Azores. Among those aboard were Madeleine Carroll, movie actress, who went to France about a month ago in an effort to see 200 children she has been taking care of in an orphanage.

The German invasion prevented her from seeing them.

Other passengers included Archduke Otto of Austria.

Major A. Mowat to Command Hdqrts. Company of Regt.

NEWS OF INTEREST

Trenton, July 12.—(Special) — The streets of Trenton resounded to the tunes of drum and fife bands this morning, as the Orange Lodges passed through this town to Plainfield for the 12th of July Celebration. A band collected on Front Street this morning and treated the crowd, that soon gathered to hear several selections.

Police Checking Up

Trenton police are checking up on reports that Jehovah's Witnesses are in the district and will make every effort to apprehend these people should they come to Trenton. The Jehovah's Witnesses was declared an illegal organization in an Order-in-Council table in the House of Commons last week. The Witnesses are a religious group which distributes literature contrary to the Defense of Canada Regulations and carries on an active missionary campaign with an automobile equipped with loudspeakers.

To Command Company

Major Angus Mowat, former Trenton resident, will take command of the Headquarters Company of the second battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, stationed in this town. Major Mowat was born here and received his education in Trenton. Later he was employed as librarian at the Trenton Public Library before moving to Belleville to take over the position of librarian at the Corby Public Library. At the time of his military appointment he was Inspector of Public Libraries for Ontario.

To Open Recruiting Office

The recruiting station at the Armouries will be opened the first of the week and recruitng will start immediately. Volunteers will be called for and training will be held two or three times a week in the evenings.

Game is Postponed

Rain prevented the Trenton Softball fans from seeing a girls' softball team perform against the R.C.A.F. men's team, here last night. The Simpson's Girls' Team from Toronto were scheduled to meet the boys from the Airforce at the Bayside Park but a continuous rain yesterday afternoon, turned the park into slippery mud and it was impossible for the teams to play.

Efforts are being made to have the game played here next Thursday night. The proceeds of the game will be turned over to the R.C.A.F. Women's Auxiliary.

AT THE BELLE

"20 Mule Team"

Wallace Beery and Leo Carrillo who teamed sensationally as Pancho Villa and his lieutenant in "Viva Villa" join forces for first time again in "20 Mule Team," saga of the pioneers of Death Valley which is next at the Belle Theatre.

Beery is seen as Bill Bragg, veteran muleskinner of the desert trail, driving back and forth through blistering heat to the railroad at Mojave, 162 miles away, while Carrillo appears as his faithful "swamper," the Indian Biute Pete. Completing the trio of leads is veteran character actress Marjorie Rambeau as Josie Johnson, owner of the hotel and saloon where Beery is in the habit of "undehydrating" himself.

Another Beery, Noah, Jr., joins his uncle for the first time, playing the romantic male lead of the young company paymaster, Mitch. Anne Baxter, newcomer from the New York stage, is the feminine heart interest as Jean, Josie's daughter, who jilts Mitch and tries to elope with the gambler, Stag Roper, played by Douglas Fowley. Completing the featured cast are Clem Bevans as the prospector, Chuckawalla, Berton Churchill, Arthur Hohl, Charles Halton, Minor Watson, Oscara O'Shea and Lloyd Ingraham.

Filmed on location in the original locale, Death Valley, "20 Mule Team" has all of the wild riding and gunplay of the best westerns as the fight is on to locate a new "mother lode."

"These Were the Days."

With William Holden, Bonita Granville, Erza Stone and Judith Barrett at the head of the class (or cast), Paramount's new comedy romance about college life, "Those Were the Days," is announced as the added feature attraction. Based on the riotous Siwash stories of George Fitch, this is the picture which presents a true idea of what college life was like at the turn of the century, when the boys wore turtle neck sweaters and played sixty minutes of football and the girls wore high hair dos and the thingamajigs which pinched them in at the waist. For more than sixty minutes the narrative is peppered with hilarious incidents—battles between frosh and sophs, love making in the old horse and buggy style and attacks, sometimes subtle but more often obvious, on professors who think marks are important.

'F.D.R.' Avoids Question About Third Term

Washington, July 12—(AP)—President Roosevelt said at a Press conference today that he definitely would not go to Chicago to attend the Democratic convention but again he avoided every question designed to bring about a disclosure of his third term stand.

FLIES TO ALASKA

MAJ.-GEN. H. H. ARNOLD

Accompanied by defence strategists, Major-General H. H. Arnold, chief of the U.S. Army Air Corps, sped by plane to Alaska to inspect army bases there and seek sites for auxiliary flying fields. With Russia only 60 miles distant and Japan only a few hundred, Alaska is being transformed into a citadel of air defence.

ON SURPRISE VISIT

His coming unannounced and shrouded in secrecy, Eske Brun, Danish governor of North Greenland, arrived in Boston, Mass., aboard a heavily armored coast guard cutter. Denying that he had come from the Arctic country to discuss its acquisition by the U.S. as a protectorate, Brun announced that his mission was merely to build up trade. He was greeted by Henrick De Kauffmann, Danish minister to Washington and received a 19-gun salute.

Shot Down — Escapes

Shot down near the Belgian frontier by Nazi airmen, this Royal Air Force pilot disguised himself as a Belgian refugee and after 12 days of hair-raising adventure making his way through enemy-occupied territory, he arrived back in England. The New Zealander is shown with his new Hurricane plane ready to return to action.

Starting Monday, the 15th., the regular playground schedule of sports will begin.

MEN EXPECTED TO FIND OWN JOBS

Acting Premier of Ontario States There is Plenty of Work for All

Toronto, July 12.— (CP) —Hon. Harry C. Nixon, Acting Premier of Ontario, said today Toronto is Ontario's worst offending municipality in not attempting to force people off relief and into jobs.

"Toronto is the worst spot in the whole of Ontario", he said, "but I notice they are showing some interest now". He pointed to an order of the city that those who do not show up for work will be cut off relief.

The Acting Premier produced Labor Department records showing 1,071 jobs vacant in various parts of the province, 711 industrial and 360 farm jobs.

The majority of the Industrial jobs are in the Belleville-Trenton area, he said.

Mr. Nixon said the government is not going to find jobs for men' "They are expected to find jobs for themselves—and there are lots of jobs".

He said he has not received any ruling from the Federal Government whether employables on relief will be conscripted first under the registration opening in August.

An Airman's Letter

(Hamilton Spectator)

In a recent issue of the London Times appears a letter from a young R. A. F. pilot in a bomber squadron, who has been reported "missing, believed killed." It was written to his mother, to be sent to her only in the event of his death. The iffical's station commander, having read the letter, as was his duty, forwarded it to the mother and asked permission for its publication, in the hope that it would be read "by the greatest possible number of our countrymen at home and abroad." In that hope we reproduce below extracts from the letter.

In an editorial the London Times expresses the desire that this moving epistle could be read and inwardly digested by our enemies "Our statesmen have said noble things about the British Empire and what that Empire knows itself to stand for," says the; Times; "here is one, not a statesman speaking to the world, but a fighting man revealing his thoughts in the hush of the utmost intimacy; and he shows that in his secret heart he knows that vision of the British Empire to be the true one. It was built by sacrifice; it holds the present and future of peace, justice and freedom for all, and 'not only concerning our own land.'"

After devotedly thanking his mother for the sacrifices she had made on his behalf that he might have "as good an education and background as any one in the country," he tells her that she must not grieve over his death; for that does not mean "that your struggle has been in vain. Far from it. It means that your sacrifice is as great as mine. Those who serve England muct expect nothing from her; we debase ourselves if we regard our country as merely a place in which to aet and aleep. History resounds with illustrious names who have given all, yet their sacrifice has resulted in the British Empire, where there is a measure of peeace, justice and freedom for all, and where a higher standard of civilization has evolved, and is still evolving, than anywhere else. But this is not only concerning our own land. To-day we are faced with the greaest organized challenge to Christianity and civilization that the world has ever seen, and I count myself lucky and honoured to be the right age and fully trained to throw my full weight into the scale. For this I have to thank you. Yet there is more work for you to do. The home front will still have to stand united for years after the war is won.

"For all that can be said against it, I still maintain that this war is a very gdo thing; every individual is having the chance to give and dare all for his principle, like the martyrs of old. However long the time may be, one thing can never be altered—I shall have lived and died an Englishman. Nothing else matters one jot, nor can anything ever change it. You must not grieve for me, for if you raelly believe in religion and all that it entails, that would be hypocrisy. I have no fear of death; only a queer elation . . . I would have it no other way. The univers s so vast and so ageless that the life of one man can only be justified by the measure of his sacrifice. We are sent to this world to acquire a personlity and a character to take with us that can never be taken from us. Those who just eat and sleep, prosper and procreate, are no better than animals of all their lives they are at peace.

"I firmly and absolutely believe that evil things are sent into the world to try us; they are sent deliberately by our Creator to test us . . . I count myself fortunate that I have seen the while country and known men of every calling. But with the final test of war I consider my character fully developed. Thus at my early age my earthly mission is already fulfilled and I am prepared to die with just one regret, and one only—that I could not devote myself to making your declining years more happy by being with you; but you will live in peace and freedom and I shall have directly contributed to that, so here again my life will not have been in vain."

Religious Service Will be Held Throughout France to Honor Dead

Nova Scotia Sailor Says Evacuation of Dunkirk 'Indescribable'

Halifax, July 112—(CP)—A 17-year-old Nova Scotian sailor was back in Canada today after seeing the evacuation of Dunkirk but he couldn't find words to tell about it. "It was indescribable," Billy Clow, son of a former mayor of Shelburne told reporters.

Although he had seen the German war machine in action before, Clow said: "I have never seen so many planes in the sky at one time." Then he told of the narrow escape he and other members of the crew of a freighter had had from the death that rained down out of the skies.

When "things got too hot," Clow related, the captain had ordered the ship to pull anchor for England. Shortly after, a bomb blasted the moorings to which they had been tied, spraying debris over their deck. The young seaman is keeping a reminder of the event, a piece of the debris that snowed down on the ship.

Clow said the ship had first put into Antwerp to unload a cargo they had carried from Canada but had found the Germans too near for safety. Their next port of call was Dunkirk.

ROWED 400 MILES

London, July 12—(CP)—Twenty seamen of the British motorship tanker Athellaird, torpedoed July 2 rowed nearly 400 miles in a 20-foot lifeboat, making only occasional use of sail.

Subsisting on six biscuits, corned beef, condensed milk and rain water, they were only eight miles from the Irish coast when sighted by a vessel and arrived at an Irish port today.

Another lifeboat bearing the captain and 21 other survivors was picked up 200 miles from the coast by another ship.

The Athellaird, 8,999 tons, was bound for Cuba when sunk about 400 miles southwest of the Irish coast.

GIVE BRASS, COPPER ORNAMENTS FOR MUNITIONS

London, July 12 (CP)—Turn over your brass and copper household ornaments to the government to make munitions, the Ministry of Supply urged the British public today. The call followed a plea from the Ministry of Airplane production for aluminum.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Long range forecasting! Three hundred years ago Francis Bacon, the great English philosopher and essayist suggested a 35-weather cycle which was later investigated and is now known as the Bruckner cycle. This and other cycles for forecasting the weather are based on idea that weather repeats itself. It does to a great extent but not regularly enough to make it possible to satisfactorily forecast by cycles. There are now about as many cycles as advocates and one is about as good as another for predicting the weather. When a good method for forecasting the weather more than two or three days has been found, it will probably be much more complex than the simple arithmetic of the cycle method.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

NOVELTY ADVERTISING ATTRACTS CROWDS

The value of advertising through the medium of drawing the attention of the purchasing public by some unusual feature has long been realized, and the practical, demonstration of two novelties in downtown windows was seen to be getting the wanted effects as they drew that attention to passers-by this morning. The first novelty was that of a very life-like and friendly appearing doggie appearing in the show window of a local drug store. Sitting up in the window with his feet against the pane, he would, through some mechanical means, keep up a continual tap-tap against the glass with his paws, much to the amusement of passing pedestrians.

The second novelty was the ever-to-be-relied-upon monkey as he, or she, entertained his, or her, audience with a whole bag full of tricks and antics. This little pantomime was taking place in front of an uptown theatre and proved a great drawing card for the children.

WEIGHTLIFTING EXPERT WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Jack Cooper, well known Belleville weightlifting expert, won the Canadian amateur heavyweight division weightlifting championship at the Canadian Weightlifting Championship held in Toronto this week. Lifters from all parts of the Dominion competed in the tournament, which was held in Toronto. Young Cooper's ability as a champion weightlifter has improved since he took up the sport some two years ago. Cooper has been training for the Canadian championship contests for the past two months in Toronto, but returned home for a well earned rest after winning his division.

Berlin Communique

Berlin, July 12—(AP)—The text of the German high command communique today follows:

"Fighting and dive bomber units of the air force on July 11 raided airports, port facilities and armament plants in southern and central England as well as ships off the southern English coasts.

"In the harbors of Plymouth and Lowestoft facilities were hit by bombs. In Portsmouth and at industrial plants near Burton-Upon-Trent fires were caused by bombs.

"In the channel we succeeded in sinking a tanker of 15,000 registered tons as well as four merchantmen totalling 15,000 tons. Another nine merchant ships were severely damaged by full hits.

"In the course of these raids our fighting and dive bombing planes as well as our chasers and destroyers downed several enemy pursuit ships. Enemy bombing in western Germany was limited and caused no damage.

"The enemy's total losses yesterday were 13 planes, of which three were hit by anti-aircraft. Seven of our own planes are missing.

(The British statement dealing with the German raids said damage was done to buildings. Twenty-three German planes were shot down yesterday. Britain's total losses were four fighters. R.A.F. bombers blasted military objectives deep in Germany and throughout the night.)

"Navy and Airforce successes in the economic warfare this reached a height perceptible to England. Up until July 8 we sank:—

"A. (By torpedo hits and mines of our submarines) 1,920,439 registered tons.

"B. By surface craft and other means of sea war, 1,362,461 registered tons.

"C. (By attacks of the airforce) 1,046,313 registered tons.

"Thus, since the beginning of the war a total of 4,329,213 registered tons of enemy shipping space or shipping space usable by the enemy has been sunk. To this figure of ships sunk must be added over 300 ships damaged, primarily by the airforce, which in part were hit so severely that they are unable at present, or, because of necessary repairs, will be unusuable for months".

(A compilation by the New York Times places British shipping losses from the outbreak of war up to July 10 at 847,908 tons—or about one-fifth of the Nazi claims.)

London, July 12.—(CP)—An authoritative British source declared that the figure of 4,329,213 tons of British Shipping Germany today claimed she had sunk since the beginning of the war actually was more than four times the total British losses up to July 1.

This source said Germany had lost about 877,000 tons of merchant shipping and Italy about 244,000 tons —captured, scuttled or sunk—more than the total British losses since the outbreak of the war.

PATROL YACHT SUNK

London, July 12—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today that the patrol yacht "Warrior II" was sunk by an enemy bombing attack in the English channel yesterday with the loss of one seaman. The rest of the crew were landed safely.

STRONG PROTESTS AGAINST HOUSING OF WAR PRISONERS

Residents Complain About Them Being Housed in Summer Resort District

LIKELY NO ACTION

Toronto, July 12.—(CP)—Acting Premier Harry Nixon said today that strong protests against the housing of German war prisoners in buildings in a summer resort district in the province are being received by the Ontario Government.

Mr. Nixon added that he had referred these protests to the Federal government but he did not expect that Federal authorities would take action in the matter.

"I pointed out how much better it would be to put them further north out of civilization where there is adequate accommodation for them", Mr. Nixon said. The Ontario Government holds that war prisoners should be housed in the far north where camps are available for them and not in the heart of a summer resort district.

The Acting Premier said he believed that interned Germans might be housed closer to the civilian population but not war prisoners who have been captured in battle. The interned Germans will be housed in Government institutions.

Present Hospital To Massey July 16

London, July 12.—(CP Cable)—The Canadian Red Cross Hospital in Buckinghamshire built by donations of the people of the Dominion amounting to nearly $1,000,000 will be formally handed over to Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, July 16 to be operated by the Royal Canadian Army Canadian Overseas Red Cross Commissioner in London, announced today.

"We are glad to be able to present such complete modern equipment for the uses of our doctors and nurses and such comfortable quarters for our wounded and ill", Col. Nasmith said

"Thanks to the generosity of the Canadian people we have been able to buy the most modern equipment to allay suffering and speed recovery, and to house it in an attratcive building".

He added that the operating rooms would be envied by the most up-to-date metropolitan hospitals and that the X-ray and dental departments could not be excelled anywhere.

German Invasion Of Holland Seemed 'Like a Play'

Toronto, July 12—(CP)—William G. Stark, Toronto-born assistant commercial attache at the Canadian legation at The Hague, said in an interview here today that his first sight of the German invasion of Holland "seemed like a play."

"We knew it was coming," he said referring to the invasion. "We had been prepared for it, yet it all seemed somewhat unreal at the start. We could even see the parachute troops drifting down. I suppose it was so perfectly executed it tended to make it seem like some great stage setting."

Mr. Stark told how he and other members of the Canadian legation staff and the British legation staff were evacuated on a British destroyer three days after the Germans first began attacking The Hague and nearby Rotterdam.

He saw Nazi fifth columnists fighting Dutch regulars in the streets, he said, relating there were fifth columnists in every street.

He confirmed stories of Dutch soldiers being shot down before they could detonate fixed explosives on bridges, roads and canals designed to impede an invader.

Toronto, July 12—(CP) — Two-year-old John Patterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Patterson, Toronto, drowned in two feet of water in Centre Island across Toronto Bay today. Sells $50 Worth War Savings Stamps To One Citizen

Commenting today upon the Motion Picture Industry's "Win the War", Campaign Tommy Mascaro, manager of the Capitol Theatre here, stated that the Motion Picture Industry's drive for war charity funds will result in a hundred per cent profit for the fund, while the purchasers retain the war stamps they buy and in addition are privileged to attend the performance at any one of the three local theatres by merely displaying tickets given for stamps", explained Mr. Mascaro as he urged public response in Belleville.

Mr. Mascaro added he had sold $50.00 worth of war savings stamps to John V. Vasil, while the former was eating his lunch at noon.

Turkey Told Control Of Dardanelles Must be Impartial

London, July 12—(CP)—An informed neutral source said today that Soviet Russia had told Turkey her control of the Dardanelles must be impartial and free from suspicion of manipulation by any other powers.

The Russian position on the Dardanelles question was described authoritatively as being that "misuse of control of the straits would constitute a danger to Russian security which the Soviet state could not countenance."

This source said there had been no Russian ultimatum to Turkey.

A Soviet source declared that Russia's foreign policy is "aimed solely at peace and security for Russia."

Military Bands Are Coming Back In U.K. And Empire

London, July 12—(CP Cable)—Military bands, sorely lacking in the United Kingdom and elsewhere in the Empire since the outbreak of the war, are coming back. It was announced today that the war office will resume payment of grants necessary to meet the upkeep of bands. There has been considerable criticism of the funeral air of columns marching without the martial music which is recognized as a pepper-upper to soldiers and civilians alike.

Blockading of British Ports by Air Attacks is Miserable Failure — Damage Inflicted on Shipping is Small—R.A.F. Continues Raids on Objectives in Enemy Territory With Telling Effect — 300,000 More Called to Register Before Nightfall

London, July 13—(CP)—Britain's new, highly-geared mobilization program, which has been putting 700 men to a day into khaki, was extended today to include 32-year-olds as the nation dipped deeper into its reserves of manpower to meet the threat of invasion.

Approximately 300,000 men were called to register before nightfall in response to the latest call to the colors, bringing the total summoned to date to more than 3,300,000.

Lending urgency to the mobilization speedup was the growing activity of Germany's bombing squadrons, which roared across the channel again during the night to rain explosives on southwest England, Wales and Scotland.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett Takes Full-Time Post In British Ministry

Ottawa, July 13.—(CP)—Former Prime Minister R. B. Bennett has assumed a full-time post in the British Ministry of Aircraft Production, it was learned Friday.

Mr. Bennett went to England in February, 1939, and while over there has been active on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross. It is not known just what position he is filling in the Aircraft Production Ministry, which is headed by Lord Beaverbrook, like Mr. Bennett a native of New Brunswick.

Another Canadian helping the dynamic Lord Beaverbrook to speed up British production of warplanes is Beverly Baxter, formerly of Toronto, now engaged in spreading the gospel in aircraft factories that increased effort by the workers enables an increased effort by the Royal Air Force to defend the empire and democracy.

Macdonald Starts Job as Navy Head

Ottawa, July 13—(CP) — Hon. Angus L. MacDonald started his work as Naval Minister here today with no definite plan but resolved "to do the best job I can."

He told newsmen when he arrived here from Halifax late last night that he had been sorry to leave the Premiership of Nova Scotia for the Federal Cabinet post, "but in these days you must do what you are asked to do."

Asked if he would run for Parliament in Kingston where a vacancy was created when Hon. Norman Rogers was killed in a plane crash, Mr. MacDonald said: "It has been talked about" but would not elaborate on this comment.

He is anxious to get a seat soon, however, to be able to expound and defend the naval policy of Canada in the Commons.

Convoy Bringing Children to Canada Had Brush With Subs During Voyage

Reported One Sunk, Another Forced to Submerge and a Third Frightened Away

HEARD GUNFIRE

An Eastern Canadian Port, July 13—(CP)—Convoyed across the Atlantic by the Royal Navy, British passenger ships rested at their moorings here today after a brush with enemy submarines during the voyage. They brought 2,000 haven-seeking passengers, mostly children, to Canada.

The passengers reported as soon as they landed yesterday that enemy submarines attempted to torpedo ships in the convoy but that a workmanlike job by the Royal Navy probably destroyed one, forced another to submerge quickly and frightened still another away.

(Naval authorities at Ottawa said they had no knowledge of such an incident).

Two days out of sight of the last landfall in England, the passengers said, they heard the roar of gunfire from a naval vessel and the thunder of depth charges, indicating the presence of submarines. They said the third submarine appeared the following day.

The luxurious vessels were packed to capacity. Besides the children all private passengers, there were a few Frenchmen and 200 Canadian soldiers invalided home or returning on leave.

The Canadian soldiers told of the marksmanship of their comrades during their brief stay in France. Canadian riflemen alone, they said, brought down three German planes while taking pot shots at the pilots.

The children were a noisy, jostling, happy lot. They lined the rails when the ships were docking and sang and cheered.

Most of the children were bound for points in the Dominion, mainly Ontario and Quebec, and will live with relatives.

Villagers With Hayfork, Toy Pistol Capture Crew of Nazi Bomber

Somewhere in Southern England, July 13 (CP).—Two villagers armed with a hayfork and a toy pistol were credited today with capturing the crew of a German bomber.

The village innkeeper and a house painter saw the bomber crash in a field last night near where they stood.

They found one of the crewmen dead and the other four injured. The innkeeper substituted one of the Germans' revolvers for the toy pistol he carried and held the injured men at gunpoint until a passing motorist obtained military assistance.

MEIGHEN CHARGES ENTIRE CONTROL ON NEWS BY GOV'T

Challenges Accuracy of Information Issued by Government

FEARS RADIO CONTROL

Claims That 'Nothing Will Go Over Radio That is Not Exactly Colored to Suit Administration'

Ottawa, July 13—(CP)—Conservative Leader Meighen in the Senate Friday raised the subject of news discussions of the bill creating the National War Services Department. The bill would empower the Minister to co-ordinate existing public information services of the government and originate or employ any other means in order that they may be used most effectively in obtaining aid from the people of Canada in the emergency.

Senator Meighen challenged the accuracy of public information issued by government and declared further:

"I am informed and I am pretty sure that my information is correct, that the government intends to see that no independent news agencies get access to the radio in Canada, whether the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation or any other, and that all news is going to be put out by the Canadian Press after this, I think, four times a day and it will be well edited by the government when it is

LAVAL DESIGNATED EVENTUAL CHIEF TO SUCCEED PETAIN

Aged Head of Authoritarian Government Set Up at Vichy, France, Chooses Vive-President

LAVAL'S CAREER

Vichy, France, July 13 (AP). — Pierre Laval, apostle of appeasement for dictators, became the key man of the new French authoritarian government today with his designation as eventual chief of state in succession to Marshal Henri Philippe Petain.

The 84-year-old Petain chose the 75-year-old Laval as "vice-president of the council of ministers" in a cabinet of twelve men, including himself as its head.

The cabinet planned to meet today for the first time.

The aged "hero of Verdun", set up the succession especially by ordering that in the event he is 'impeded" from exercising the functions of chief of state before the nation ratifies the new constitution, Laval "will assume them in full right".

Nazi Aluminum Rods Will be Sent Back To Germany With Interest

New York, July 13 —(AP)— The British Broadcasting Corporation said today that the German air force is "contributing" to the British campaign to collect and conserve aluminum.

"A number of aluminum rods about four feet long by three quarters of an inch thick, with a square plate at one end, have been picked up after German air raids on this country," said the broadcast heard here by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

"The Air Ministry now tells us that these rods are used for holding incendiary bombs and are dropped with the bombs. It advises finders to hand them straight over to the local scrap metal salvage so they can be returned to Germany with interest."

Recruiting Appeal Result 'Magnificent',

Ottawa, July 13 (CP).—The response to the appeal for recruiting made by Defence Minister Ralston last Wednesday night "has been magnificent", the defence department said today in a statement.

Innumerable requests have been made to headquarters here as to where recruits may sign up and directors have been sent to the officers commanding the various military districts to provide detailed information in their respective areas.

Applications should be made to the nearest militia unit, the statement said. All infantry units of the non-permanent active militia have been authorized to recruit up to war strength and other units, such as artillery, army service and army medical corps, to recruit as needed.

Many commercial and industrial institutions have already arranged with their employees to grant leave for camp and are organizing their staffs to carry on while the militiamen are taking training. One Toronto firm has notified all its employees that they will be given full pay for the time spent in camp and their usual holidays in addition.

Full-time staffs are being authorized for all military units, so the recruiting offices will be open all day and also in the evenings.

SAYS REPLY DEEMED NOT SATISFACTORY

Shanghai, July 13 (AP)—Col. Dewitt Peck, United States marine commander in the Shanghai district, was reported today by the Japanese news service Domei to have "failed to give a satisfactory reply" to a complaint of Maj-Gen. Saburo Miura against treatment of rested July 7.

Col. Peck and Gen. Miura conferred two hours, Domei said, and the Japanese officer expressed "the strong attitude of Japan."

(The Japanese claim that the plainclothes men, arrested in the Shanghai defence area by American marines and held for five hours were generally maltreated.)

Help Movie Theatres to Raise $1,000,000 by War Stamps Sale, Attend Program Mon. Eve. July 15

Citizens of Belleville and district have the opportunity on Monday evening, July 15, of supporting the Win-the-War Campaign of the Motion Picture Industry of Canada by their presence at the free show at any of the theatres in Belleville and everywhere else in Canada when the only requirement for admission will be the purchase of two or more war savings stamps which will remain the property of the purchaser and will entitle the buyer to a ticket of admission to the gala performances on that occasion.

Here is the opportunity first of all to help push the sale of war savings stamps, thereby performing a patriotic duty in assisting the nation to carry on its war effort and at the same time making an investment which is as sound as the foundations on which Canada stands. Then it is the opportunity to help the motion picture industry and houses of Canada in their donation to the patriotic cause of helping the sale of war savings stamps. The movies are one of the great agencies for reaching and contacting people of all classes and it is the effort of the industry to utilize this great fact, backed by all the genius and ability of the people engaged in the industry to bring to the heart and mind of every citizen the duty that rests upon him or her to save and buy war savings stamps and certificates. The motion picture industry of the Dominion stands all the costs of entertainment and the public which supports the effort secures a free admission as well as savings stamps.

It is recognized by all Canadians that through the medium of the motion picture industry and houses the importance of supporting the sale of war certificates through the purchase of war savings stamps, the sale will have so widespread an appeal that very large numbers of citizens will receive the inspiration to follow the lead set by the theatres and continue buying stamps and certificates.

The stamps are only 25 cents each and purchasing of such is within the range of the greatest number of people.

A debt is owing the theatres and motion picture industry for their contribution in effort and in defraying the expenses of entertainment for a million persons who will throng the theatres of Canada on Monday night, July 15th., and for bringing to public attention the duty of and opportunity in buying of these war savings stamps.

It is a great voluntary effort, the result of which will not end with Monday but will continue as long as the sale of stamps and certificates is deemed necessary by the government.

It is confidently expected that the Belleville theatres and theatres elsewhere will be packed to their capacity. The theatres deserve this support in their patriotic effort and contribution to the cause of Canada in the war.

Ottawa, July 13—(CP)—A full complement of war departments and additional cabinet minsters today facilitated the government's war activities on a wide front.

With the actual establishment of the two new departments for naval affairs and national war services, the heavy administration load was distributed on a broader and more efficient basis.

The bills creating those departments became law just before midnight last night after the Conservative section of the Senate had delayed the measure setting up the War Services Department.

Despite the hour, Prime Minister Mackenzie King then took the ministers for the two new departments down to Government House to be sworn in by the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General. The Legislature decks were then clear of basic administration war measures.

17,000 Political Arrests Made In Nazi-Occupied Area of France

By SAM ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 13 (CP).—The Exchange Telegraph reported today it had learned reliably that 17,000 political arrests had been made in the Nazi-occupied sections of France.

"It now seems quite possible," the British News Agency said, "that moving of the Petain government to Paris will be followed by the Germans occupying the rest of France to restore order by methods of the machine gun."

Stating there is a growing realization by the French people that they had been betrayed by the Bordeaux government, the agency said the Petain-Laval decision to move from Vichy to the Chateau Versailles "where the swastika still flies and to Paris shows they are aware of the growing storm."

The Exchange Telegraph dispatch which did not disclose the source of its information continued:

"The Germans are removing everything of value on which they can lay their hands. They are not content with looting banks and paying for the upkeep of their armies wtih worthless paper money. Livestock is either taken from France or killed for immediate consumption and in this way agriculture, the basis of French economic life, is being ruined. Next winter will see famine in France, the like of which has not occurred since the sixteenth century."

Editorial Charges Turkey of Treason To Balkan Entente

Request Officials Who Are Responsibile for Mutual Assistance Pact With Britain and France be Replaced — Germany Issues "White Paper" Alleging Conspiracy

ACTION AGAINST JEWS

Christian Wives of Jews Must Give Up Government Jobs in Rumania—Press is Placed Under Rigorous Control

Bucharest, July 13 (AP). — Rumania was reported authoritatively today to be ready to sever her Balkan entente ties with Turkey unless officials responsible for Turkey's mutual assistance pact with Britain and France are replaced.

The German legation here told King Carol's government that the latest Berlin white book "proves conclusively" that Turkey planned with the allies for an attack on Rumanian as well as Soviet oil fields.

The government censor approved an editorial in Bucharest's German language newspaper Tageblat charging Turkey with "treason" to the Balkan entente, consisting of Turkey, Rumania, Greece, Yugoslavia, by "conspiring against the sovereignty and integrity" of Rumania.

In German circles here it was reported that Gen. Ion Antonescu, leader of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard, still is in prison.

Action Against Jews.

King Carol's new totalitarian regime put into effect today anti-Semitic orders forcing Christian wives of Jews to give up government jobs.

This was one more of a series of steps being taken speedily to create in this country a small-sized model of Europe's larger totalitarian states.

Diplomatic circles said Rumanian foreign policy was reviewed in what they labelled the beginning of closer German-Rumanian co-operation.

As in the early days of Fascism and National Socialism, Rumanian Jews have borne the brunt of many attacks and many new laws.

They have been denounced in speeches by cabinet members as "poisoners of the national life". Jewish songs no longer may be sung nor Jewish music be played in public. No orchestra may contain Jewish musicians. Jewish artists are barred from the stage.

Press Under Control.

All Rumanian newspapers have been required to discharge Jewish editors and staff members. Jews may hold neither public office nor government positions .

As in Italy and Germany, the press is under rigorous contral. Three newspapers already have been suppressed in Bucharest.

Strict censorship has been imposed on foreign correspondents.

Many Communists have been sent to concentration camps.

As in Germany, "racial purity" is being stressed. Help wanted advertisements in the newspapers now contain the phrase "please state ethnical (racial) origin."

ALMAZAN WILL CHALLENGE VOTE

Says Administration Trying to Provoke Him so That He Will Lose Patience

Mexico City, July 13.—(AP) — Followers of General Juan Andreu Almazan, indepenent candidate for President, indicated today they would challenge the official tabulation which the Administration's Revolutionary Party said last night gave its candidate, General Manuel Avila Camacho, 94 per cent of the votes cast in Sunday's turbulent election.

Spokesmen for the Conservative Almazan said that their own separate tabulation, which is now nearing completion, would show an "overwhelming" majority for their candidate.

Almazan himself, who has said that he would establish his own "legal" congress if he failed to get a fair count, declined to discuss the Administration Party's claims, but accused his political opponents of trying to provoke him into rash action.

He referred to a raid which Federal Secret police made with drawn pistols last night on his private offices here during which they broke down the door, ransacked the place and seized his files.

"They're trying to molest me to see if I'll lose my patience", Almazan said, and added firmly "But I won't".

COMPROMISE SEEN OVER BURMA ROAD

Tokyo Sources Say Britain Bans Shipment of Munitions and 'Gas' but Not 'All Food and Materials'

Tokyo, July 13—(AP)—Reliable sources reported today that Great Britain has agreed to ban shipment of war materials—including munitions and gasoline—to China over the Burma road.

This represented a compromise, these sources said, Britain declining to prohibit shipment of "all foods and materials" over the route, as Japan demanded.

The reported agreement came after a two-hour conference yesterday between Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador, and Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita. The Ambassador had received new instructions from London since Japan requested reconsideration of an earlier refusal to close the road.

(In London, it was reported that Sir Robert was authorized to offer to close the Burma route for two months during negotiations with Japan over the Burma issue, which has caused tension between Britain and Japan.

(Vernon Bartlett, commentator for The News-Chronicle, asserting the rainy season would hamper traffic in Burma for the next three months, anyway, expressed belief Britain would "take any action which Americans are prepared to take.")

ELECTRIC PLATE CAUSES DAMAGE

When an electric plate in a shed adjoining the home of Mr. William Warren, at 39 Sinclair Street, was left turned on, on Thursday evening, the plate became overheated and set fire to the building. A partition in the building marking off a coal bin was blazing merrily when firemen arrived on the scene but the damage otherwise was slight as the fire was soon put under control.

FINDING LETTERS ON RHUBARB LEAVES

They're even finding them on rhubarb leaves now! Found on the premises of a Picton resident, Mrs. Grace Kirby Hill, a huge rhubarb leaf was discovered to be the exact replica of a maple leaf, portrayed in a light yellow on the back of the rhubarb green. The maple leaf is so plain, says The Picton Times, that one would think a painter's brush has been used in painting it there.

The maple leaf measured 13 inches wide by the same number of inches high. The phenomenon of nature is thought to compare to the letter "B" in many places to be found on the grain leaves.

SONG WRITER VISITS IN P. E. COUNTY

Dick Tuttle, Canada's popular song writer, is spending a short vacation in Prince Edward County. Mr. Tuttle, who comes from Windsor, Ontario, has written a new song, entitled "Canada." The Essex Scottish Regiment and Canadian Engineers are singing this song at Camp Borden and it is growing more popular each day. The Legionaires Quartette use the number as a regular feature on all programs. The song is set to a snappy march tempo and the words of the chorus are descriptive.

Mr. Tuttle is organizing a fraternity of song writers in Canada who will unite in their efforts to make the songs of Canadian song writers popular by giving them an opportunity under a new cooperative plan.

DRIVER CHARGED AFTER COLLISION

Considerable property damage resulted to a motor car on Station St. shortly after 1.00 a.m. today and resulted in one driver being charged in police court this morning. Murney Blakely, Thomasburg, was proceeding north on Station St. in his motor car when another south bound vehicle, driven by Alex Brant, Deseronto, sideswiped Mr. Blakely's car. Police investigated and later arrested Brant on a charge of drunken driving. The authorities also also revealed that Brant was only in possession of a temporary driver's permit. The damage resulting to Mr. Blakely's car was centred about the left rear fender, body and axle.

Berlin Communique

Berlin, July 13—(AP)— Today's German High Command communique—

"German naval units have been conducting successful operations in overseas waters for a long period. Several merchantships with valuable cargoes, which were taken as prizes during these operations, have arrived in our harbors.

(There have been no reports from British sources of Allied ships being captured.)

"One submarine reported sinking 24,674 registered tons of enemy merchant shipping space. Fighting planes again attacked ships off the English east coast and channel, airports, port facilities and armament industry plants in England and Scotland.

(Britain has announced the loss of only one merchant ship. The Netherlands vessel Lucrecia, 2,584 tons, in the week ending July 12.)

"We succeeded in sinking a patrol boat and a merchantman of 2,000 registered tons and severely damaging five merchant ships by bomb hits.

(The Admiralty yesterday announced loss of the patrol yacht Warrior II.)

"Eight British fighting planes were destroyed on the ground of St. Merryn airport, while petrol tanks in Exeter, Portland, Newport and Dundee were effectively bombed, as well as quay facilities there and workshops of the armament industry in Billingham and Newcastle.

"Also in the night of July 12-13 British ariplanes again dropped bombs in Northern Germany ,destroying several houses and killing a number of civilians.

(London did not comment on the claimed raid on St. Merryn Airport. The R. A. F. nightly carries out long-ranging bombing raids on military objectives in Germany and German-occupied Europe.)

"Enemy losses reported July 12 were increased by four planes bagged by anti-aircraft at night from 13 to 17 aircraft.

(London announced the loss of four planes on the 12th.)

"Yesterday's total losses of the opponent amount to 13 planes, of which four were shot down in airfights during the day and one by night by a chaser. Five of our own planes are missing".

(Germany lost at least 11 planes over Britain yesterday, while the ..A.F. lost only two defending the country.)

Minimize German Losses

London, July 13, (CP)—An authoritative British source commented thus on today's German communique:—

"German high command communiques are systematically minimizing German air losses. Today's communique for instance halves the number of enemy machines brought down around British shores yesterday, where German losses were 11 bombers at a cost of two British fighters".

"Again today's communique, while fabricating a new claim for British losses announced on the 12th avoids mentioning the number of German losses announced on that date, which was 23 machines as against four British fighters lost in action".

ADMIRALTY THANKED

London, July 13 —(CP)— Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, Prime Minister of the Polish Emigre Government and commander-in-chief of its military forces, thanked the Admiralty for its "magnificent help" in bringing the Polish legion out of France. The Admiralty replied that it welcomes "the heroic Polish army, whose undiminished gallantry and determination is an example and inspiration to all."

ASSAULT CHARGE LAID AGAINST OSHAWA RESIDENT

R. W. Wolfrain, Charged With Assaulting Wife After Alleged Family Quarrel

FRIEND ARRESTED

Picton, Ont., July 13.—(Staff)—A rapid sequence of events that included an alleged assault on a woman, an alleged fist-fight between an arrested man and a county constable in a car that was travelling 45 miles an hour, and an alleged curious inebriate, whose questions brought him trouble, culminated in Roy W. Wolfrain, 43, and Leonard Pritchard, 27, both of Oshawa, being lodged in jail charged with serious offences.

County Constable Earl Marvin, Wellington, is under medical care suffering with lacerations and painful body bruises following what is described as a dramatic fight in a swiftly moving automobile when Wolfrain, who had been placed in custody and was being taken to the county jail, suddenly turned on the police officer, Marvin declared.

Caught by surprise, Constable Marvin stated that he managed to beat off his assailant while the car careened dangerously across the highway. Fortunately no other traffic was in sight. Subduing his man, although bruised and cut, the police officer succeeded in bringing him to jail.

Wolfrain had been arrested following an alleged assault on his wife, who had been staying with friends in Wellington. Marvin had been called by neighbours after Wolfrain allegedly had attempted to force the custody of their three-year-old child from the arms of Wolfrain's wife. He was formally charged today with being intoxicated, and assault and bodily harm.

Returning to Wellington, Constable Marvin was accosted by Pritchard. Pritchard's allegations caused the policemen to search his car and there he found, he said, six bottles of beer and six empty bottles. Pritchard was immediately placed in custody and takrn to jail, where he was charged with not being in possession of a driver's permit, and with illegal possession of intoxicating beverages.

FRENCH PORTS PUT UNDER NAVY

Exact Meaning of Petain's Decree Concerning the French Navy is Not Clear

Grenoble, July 13 (AP)—All French ports, harbors and river mouths from the Seine to the Bidassoa River on the Spanish frontier, together with all ports along the Mediterranean coast and in North Africa, were placed under authority of the French navy today. This was announced in a decree signed by the chief of state, Marshal Petain.

The decree specifically mentioned the sea and river ports of Nantes and Bordeaux on the Atlantic and Rouen on the Seine. But since the Channel, Atlantic and Bay of Biscay coastlines all are part of German-occupied territory, the exact meaning of the decree was not clear.

Liner Washington Arrives From Galway With U. S. Refugees

New York, July 13 (AP)—The United States liner Washington arrived from Galway, Eire, today on her final war refugee removal trip, with 1,610 passengers, 273 of them aliens.

The voyage was uneventful in contrast to her last trip when she was stopped by a German submarine.

Three hundred and eighty of the passengers were children under 10, and the ship, as on her last two voyages, resembled a floating nursery.

One of the children was the 9-year-old son of Alfred Duff Cooper, British information minister, going to stay with unnamed friends at Easthampton, Long Island, N.Y.

Another was the 10 months' old son of Ernest Simpson, former husband of the Duchess of Windsor, and his second wife, the former Mrs. Mary Raffray of Baltimore. The Simpsons are still in England.

Despite the addition of 600 passengers beyond the Washington's regular load, there were few complaints. One woman said she paid $315 for a cot in a cabin with five others.

Sightseers a Menace

London, July 13 —(CP)— Sightseers are proving a worse menace to crops than German bombs in some instances. The Ministry of Agriculture, issuing an order making trespassers liable to a $200 fine, said:—

"In a recent instance negligible damage was done by a bomb to a wheat field, but the entire crop of 25 acres was completely ruined by being trampled by sightseers."

FIREMAN JAMMED BETWEEN BOILER, FRAME OF ENGINE

C.N.R. Locomotive Jumps Tracks Near Lindsay and Overturns in Ditch After Collision With Truck

2 COACHES FIRED

Driver of Truck Jumps from His Machine When a Collision is Unavoidable

Lindsay, Ont., July 13 (CP) — Conrad Smelser, Canadian National Railways fireman, is in a serious condition in Ross Memorial Hospital here after being removed from an overturned locomotive on the C.NN.R. line near Omemee village today. Smelser was jammed between the boiler and the frame of the locomotive when it jumped the tracks and turned over in a ditch. He had to be removed by cutting away part of the engine with an acetylene torch.

Two coaches were destroyed by fire in the accident which involved an oil truck, driven by Phil Harford, Peterborough. The train was a Port Hope-Toronto passenger No. 93.

Harford, driving west on No. 7 Highway, jammed on his hand brake and jumped from the cab of his oil truck when he saw he could not avoid being struck by the fast local. The truck went into a skid and struck one of the rails springing it so the engine jumped from its track and rolled over, Constable Alvin Pitts, Omemee, said.

Driver Unhurt

Harford was unhurt when he jumped from the oil truck. Almost immediately after he jumped it caught fire from the impact with the engine and burning oil spread to the passenger coaches which were destroyed before the Lindsay fire department could arrive with extinguishers. The passengers were able to abandon the coaches without injury.

"I never saw such grit as that shown by the fireman," Constable Pitts said. "He was an hour and a half jammed by the boiler and when they put him in the ambulance I offered him a glass of water. He was suffering terribly, but he just said "couldn't you just put a drop of whisky into that?"

Police learned the party were returning to nearby Montreal from Coteau when the accident happened. Boysuk was driving the car, and lost control on a surve.

Millhand Executed In Poison Flour Plot At Budapest

Budapest July 13.— (AP) —Paul Fazekas, 42-year-old millhand, went to the gallows today as the mastermind of a "poison flour" murder plot which killed three persons and left 12 permanently paralyzed.

The execution ended one of Hungary's greatest crime sensations, which started two years ago when Fazekas, one of his brothers-in-law and two sisters-in-law were charged with conspiring to poison the rest of the family to divide a 50-acre farm.

Fazekas' three co-conspirators were convicted with him and now are serving life terms.

The War This Week

(By Don Gilbert
(Canadian Press Cable Editor)

The battle between Great Britain and Germany for supremacy in the air began in earnest in the 45th week of the war. Royal Air Force bombers ranged over the congested industrial areas of Western Germany while at home the fighter squadrons proved their mettle. In one day 23 of the Nazi attacking planes were shot down.

For military reasons little information was given out on the damage the Germans have been able to inflict in Britain, but judging from the small number of casualties it has not been great. On the other hand, news allowed out of Germany by the Nazi authorities indicated that the R.A.F. had seriously complicated industrial life in the bombed regions. But as usual no material damage of importance was admitted.

In France, Marshal Petain, using the royal "We", assumed absolute powers. Eighty votes were cast in the National Assembly against the Petain-Laval group's plan for a Fascist France, but the spirit of the opposition was not strong.

Petain announced the seat of government would be moved from Vichy to Versailles in the occupied area.

Daring British Attack

Britain kept further units of the French fleet out of enemy hands. The new battleship Richelieu was put out of commission by a daring British attack in the harbor of Dakar, French West Africa. French naval units at Alexandria gave in without a fight. The vindictive spirit of the Petain government was reflected in its order for a raid by French aircraft on the Rock of Gibraltar—which happily caused no damage.

With the danger of the French fleet removed, British battle squadrons took up the task of running down the Italian navy. Contact was made briefly east of Malta and one hit scored on an Italian battleship. An Italian destroyer and a submarine were sunk. Fantastic claims of Italian successes in this skirmish were declared in London to be without foundation.

In the Balkans the crisis abated, Hungarian leaders were summoned have told them that Germany would view with displeasure at this time any further dislocation of oil production in Rumania and that Hungarian claims would have to to Munich where Hitler is said to wait. Russia denied that she plans demands on Turkey following her annexation of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina.

Glancing back 25 years the campaign in German southwest Africa ended July 9, 1915, when German forces capitulated to South African troops under Gen. Louis Botha. Two days later the cruiser Konigsberg, last German raider at large, was sunk by British munitions in the Rufiji River, German East Africa.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Women in War" is the feature presentation which comes to the McCarthy Theatre screen for the Monday evening performance, sponsored by the Motion Picture Industry in Canada.

The story is replete with characters, who, though fictional, are as alive as life itself. Lovely Wendy Barrie gives an unforgettable performance as the cynical, bitter Pamela, who finds peace through the lessons of war and Patric Knowles wins laurels for his delineation of the fatalistic young officer with whom Pamela falls in love. Elsie Janis, famous figure of the last World War, marks her screen comeback with a deftly handled portrayal of the matron of nurses.

Such capable character performers as Mae Clarke, Dennie Moore, Billy Gilbert and Barbara Pepper enhance every scene.

You will thoroughly enjoy this superb motion picture, we feel certain, and the stage program in addition with Mr. Fred Jobson, local bandmaster, as master of ceremonies promises to make the McCarthy Theatre Monday evening show a gala event. Remember your admission is free with the purchase of two or more war savings stamps which remain your property until redeemed by the government.

AT THE CAPITOL

"FLIGHT ANGELS"

A thrilling story of those career girls of the skyways — the airline hostesses, will make its local debut on Monday at the Capitol. "Flight Angels" is an adventurous comedy describing the flight of an ace pilot who is forced to teach a group of girls how to become airline hostesses. The pilot is played by that romantic "Scotsman" who won your hearts in "Three Cheers For the Irish", Dennis Morgan. Virginia Bruce is the beautiful hostess whom Morgan wants on his life-time schedule, and Jane Wyman is the kicking, scratching girl-friend of Morgan's foolhardy buddy, Wayne Morris.

Ralph Bellamy as the flight superintendent, is torn between loyalty to his profession and friendship for his over-adventurous buddies.

Don't miss this power-drive drama of a theme that has never before been shown on the screen—to training and life work of air hostesses.

AT THE BELLE

"20 MULE TEAM"

Creating a new character team, Wallace Beery and Marjorie Rambeau get off to such an auspicious start in "20 Mule Team" that a continuation of the teaming appears inevitable judging by audience reception throughout the country. . . . And when the name of Leo Carrillo is added to the latter twosome, as in "20 Mule Team", you can make the duo a trio from now on. "20 Mule Team" is on the Belle screen today and Monday.

As Muleskinner Bill Bragg, who drives a borax train back and forth across Death Valley's treacherous flats and through the sun-baked canyons to the nearest railroad point 162 miles away, Beery presents a characterization unequalled since "Viva Villa!" Miss Rambeau is Josie Johnson, owner of the hotel and saloon where Beery is in the habit of "undehydrating" himself, and the battles between the two are reminiscent of the best brawls in "Min and Bill" and "Tugboat Annie". Carrillo, as Beery's Indian "swamper", Piute Pete, repeats the success he scored with Beery in "Viva Villa." Between the three there are a dozen laughs a minute.

Photographed in Death Valley, with breathtakingly picturesque scenic background, "20 Mule Team" offers further effective characterizations by Noah Beery Jr., as Mitch, young borax company paymaster; by Anne Baxter, a newcomer from the New York stage, as Jean, Josie's daughter by Douglas Fowley as the gambler, Stag Roper, and by such other favorites as Berton Churchill, Arthur Hahl and Clem Bevans. Director Richard Thorpe has kept his action moving as steadily as his wagons roll, while Producer J. Walter Ruben has blended all the elements of the best Westerns with authentic history and setting provide grand entertainment.

"Those Were The Days."

Paramount has assembled a notable cast for its picturization of the famous Siwash Stories of George Fitch [illegible]ich is announced as the [illegible] feature attraction, under [illegible]hose were the Days". In featured roles are William "Golden Boy") Holden, Bonita Granville, Ezra ("Henry Aldrich") Stone, Judith Barrett and Vaughan Glaser.

The popular Belle newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

ONTARIO GOV'T TO COOPERATE

Will Try to Secure Inexperienced but Able-Bodied Young Men to Work on Farms

Farmers throughout the province are to have the co-operation of the Ontario Government in securing inexperienced but able - bodied young men for two or three months for haying, harvesting and general farm work.

In making this announcement, N. O. Hipel, Minister of Labour, intimated that the Ontario Department of Labour, had made arrangements to register all workers who would be willing to help harvest the crops which are vital to Canada's war effort.

Mr. Hipel pointed out that there was a scarcity of experienced farm help and asked all farmers who required extra workers to co-operate with the government by using the men available. It was suggested that farmers would have to exercise patience and realize that these men could not be expected to attain complete efficiency at first.

Farmers who desire extra men should apply to the nearest Ontario Employment Office or write direct to A. MacLaren, Director of Farm Training, Department of Labour, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

Already the Minister of Labour stated, many willing workers had registered for work on farms and were available for immediate employment.

FRENCH LEGION UNDER DE GAULLE TO BE MECHANIZED

General to Put in Practice Theories of Warfare He Prophesied Years Ago and Used by Nazis in France

London, July 13.—(CP Cable)—General Charles de Gaulle leader of the French forces fighting beside Britain, now intends to put into practice the theories of mechanized warfare which he prophesied years ago and which he saw adopted by the Germans and used with devastating success against his country.

The French Legion forming under his command will be mechanized, he said yesterday in an interview. It will have three branches—air, sea and land—complete with the most up-to-date weapons. The number of men cannot be disclosed but the General is satisfied. They will fight under the French flag.

For de Gaulle is a soldier. The force he has formed, a force to which answering echoes come from all parts of the world, is a fighting force, not a political one.

No New Government

"There is only one France", he said. "The French Legion makes no pretence of setting up a new government. It has to be a mobile, perfected instrument, representing free France effectively as well as symbolically, fighting at the side of its Allies, Britain and the Dominions, for a British victory and the deliverance of the Motherland".

Photographs of the tall, serious-looking man do not reveal the quiet strength and kindliness and warmth that soften his reserve in conversation.

"Fear is governing France", de Gaulle declared. "The armistice was dominated by local and abnormal conditions. The people of France were kept out. They were not informed nor consulted. They knew nothing and are only just learning the results. One must remember this when reading anything emanating from France".

Even what the French government said came through a curtain of fear—fear that Germany would violate or repudiate the armistice. Fear dominated the people, fear for their families and the violence which may be committed against them.

"When I left Bordeaux people already had ceased to talk," he said. "Confusion reigned and they were afraid. What must it be now? But you know France—you must have seen and known there was not capitulation in the hearts of the French people."

"When fighting a war, in the last analysis it is a question of strength," General De Gaulle said. "We want France to continue as a military force.

"But morally it is even more necessary. France cannot speak. People are forced to be silent—but they can think. It is necessary that they know there are Frenchmen who continue the war, who carry on for them."

Gen. De Gaulle said the defeat of France was not due, as Gen. Weygand had said, to the greater numbers of Germans. It was due to incomprehension of the new form of warfare. It was not men but training for a war of movement, and machines, which were lacking.

"An army of 10,000 men properly trained and mechanized would have been more effective than 100,000 or more with their rifles," he said.

France's generals and troops had been trained for other tactics. The idea of "lines" in depth and the "front" dominated Gen. Weygand. The French soldier had been trained for a soldier in front of him. He found no Germans in front. Instead they formed into a powerful knife-like weapon which cut through and then spread out behind the French.

De Gaulle had expected warfare of that kind. Now he is training his army to meet it.

DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE PRESENT BOMBER

The magnificent work of all the chapters of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire in Canada in raising funds for the purchase of a Bolingbroke bomber for presentation to the Canadian Government is an evidence of the spirit which animates the women of Canada. The presentation of this bomber means more than the addition of one bomber to the strength of Canadian arms but it means that the hearts of the people are beating as a united heart in this effort of backing the Motherland to the limit and to victory. Such loyal work is the forerunner of many more great patriotic efforts on the part of various groups of the Canadian people including the chapters of the I.O.D.E. so that Canada may do her utmost and give her best for the cause of the Empire in which alone she can find freedom and the maintenance of civilization as she has known it.

The work of the Belleville chapters of the I.O.D.E. deserves highest praise for the loyalty and devotion of the members of the chapters and the response of the citizens to the cause of liberty has been enthusiastic.

STRUGGLE IN MEDITERRANEAN

Italy has surely seen the notice which Britain has served upon the world that she is determined to defend the imperial lifeline, the New York Times remarks, and to save the empire. She has given clear notice to Italy that the war is to be carried to her shore regardless of the grapple with Germany in the north.

In the first engagement, the British had the best of it, their fleet was not damaged nor were there any British casualties, while the Italians admit that a large ship of theirs was hit and that an Italian submarine and destroyer were sunk.

In the Mediterranean will be staged one of the greatest struggles from the standpoint of importance to the history of the nations involved and to the world at large. There is the control of the Mediterranean by Gibraltar and Suez, there is also the Near East problem of the Dardanelles, of Syria, and of the rest of the Near Orient. There is, too, the effort carried on by the Fascists and Nazis to keep the Balkans quiet for the duration of the struggle now going on.

"It is the war for Africa, for India, for naval supremacy, for all those points at the solar plexus of the world on which imperial power is based," the Times says.

The battle in the Mediterranean the other day wherein the Italians suffered losses and hied themselves away under a heavy smoke screen is no doubt the herald to great history-making events.

Today with her great navy Britain keeps the guard on the great waterway, which links the western world with Africa, the Near East, the Red Sea and the faraway Orient.

PLAN OF GERMANIC UNION

The actions of Germany do not impress. They do not impress the British, who see the insincerity and the ruthless and iron hand of the Nazis in their dealings with the overrun states, whose flower has faded in the blight of the sordid German spirit. They do not impress the conquered states. They do not impress the neutral world.

What has happened in regard to the conquered states is just what was expected — the German "protectorate" becomes a Germanic Union which is decreed for the Scandinavian states.

Those states, until freed, will feel the ever-increasing blight of the Hun and the nazi upon their people, their institutions and customs and their political development as France has learned to her sorrow. France, the light of liberty, now becomes totalitarian under nazi domination. That is the Hun intention with regard to Norway and Denmark and all the rest of the world.

The Hun does not know generosity or magnamity. No one but a fool would expect the Hun as conqueror to be less grotesque and ruthless than he has been in prosecuting the war of conquest against the states he has overrun.

For those who think at all there has to be asked only one question. What is the state of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg since conquest and why is not a word allowed out of these lands now under the heel of the German nazis?

The answer is clear—the Hun does not act otherwise after he has taken a state than he did in taking it. He is the same as he ever was and he is the one who has to be crushed.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Tracheitis—Inflammation of Windpipe

I was having lunch with a throat specialist one day and mentioned that I had a patient who was not losing weight, had no temperature, yet had a persistent cough which was not relieved by drugs nor inhaling drug fumes. His throat was not red nor were his vocal cords. He did not appear to be sick yet the persistent cough disturbed his rest and caused fatigue.

"He likely has tracheitis", said the specialist, "but you cannot see down into the trachea—windpipe — with your instruments. I have found a number of these cases where the inflammation is about an inch below the upper end of the windpipe. I have been able to help them by applying a counter irritant drug direct to this spot. It relieves the cough almost at once".

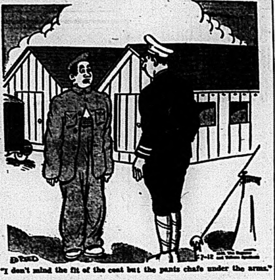
That tracheitis—inflammation of the windpipe—is more common than has been suspected is undoubtedly true and many of these sufferers are pouring cough medicines down their throats that have no local effect as they do not pass over the trachea or windpipe.

The outstanding symptom of tracheitis is the hard dry irritating cough which brings little or nothing up from the bronchial tubes. There is a feeling of strangling and hoarseness, with soreness on pressure above and below breast bone.

Dr. Burnett Ham in British Medical Journal gives some suggestions for treatment of tracheitis.

1—Give sodium bicarbonate in half teaspoonful doses every three hours to control the strangling cough, (2) have patient inhale the steam of frair's balsam (tincture of benzoin compound or pine), (3) thirty per cent guaiacol in glycerin freely applied and rubbed in at the top of breast bone where soreness is usually found, will usually give a good night's rest; (4) the nose and throat should be treated to maintain the ventilation.

As mentioned above, it is because ordinary cough medicines cannot reach this spot that they give no help in tracheitis.



"I don't mind the fit of the coat but the pants chafe under the arms."

Parachute Fire Fighters Used by U. S. Forest Service

(Canada Lumberman)

Parachuting fire fighters are being used in the U. S. National Forests for the first time this year. This follows tests made by the U.S. Forest Service on the Chelan National Forest in Washington last fall with a crew of parachute jumpers, which indicated the practicability of dropping fire fighters from airplanes to put out small fires in some of the inaccessible back-country areas of the National Forests. Just recently a new radiophone has been developed so that the "smoke-jumper" can keep in touch with the plane pilot and with his headquarters when he reaches the ground.

The smoke jumpers use a specially designed parachute which has a rate of decent of about twelve feet per second and permits a certain amount of steering toward the landing spot. A special chute harness and protective suit and headgear were also developed to so protect the jumpers that they can land almost anywhere at any elevation—in tall trees or open spaces, or on rough ridges. Jumpers who went down into stands of young lodgepole pine last fall christened them "featherbed landings" because the young pines will catch a parachute readily and absorb most of the shock on their bending, swaying tops. In order to facilitate descent from tall trees, the jumpers carry a coil of light, strong rope.

A small number of complete units of equipment have already been purchased, the Forest Service reports, and these will be used to train smoke-jumpers in actual work on forest fires this summer. The work began last month in national forests in the northern Rockies and northern Cascades of Montana and Washington.

Parachuting Procedure.

Planes which deliver the parachuting fire-fighters scout the fire on their first trip over the spot and drop a small test chute with a ten-pound sand bang to determine wind drift. They then circle back and make a second approach, at which time the parachutist descends, and by using the steering flaps on his parachute, generally manages to reach the ground close to the selected landing spot. On a third approach the pilot drops the fire-fighting kit which is carried down by a burlap parachute with a yellow streamer attached to prevent its being lost—a method used by the Forest Service for some years to deliver tons of equipment to back country fire-fighters. The burlap chute pack contains necessary tools, rations, first-aid kit and the like but the parachutist will carry with him the new light-weight radio so that he can contact the pilot or his headquarters immediately if necessary or can make reports later.

The small type radiophone developed by the Forest Service weighs only six pounds with dry batteries and all accessories, and is not quite as large as a loaf of sandwich bread. It measures 2 by 4½ by 12 inches, and operates on ultra-high frequency between 30,000 and 40,000 kilocycles, having a two-way communication range covering an optical distance which with sufficient elevation may be as much as a hundred miles.

According to H. K. Lawson, associate radio engineer of the Forest Service radio laboratory at Portland, Oregon, the transmitting portion of the tiny radiophone is crystal-controlled, a system of maintaining accurate transmitting frequency heretofore used only in permanently located stations or in relatively bulky, portable or mobile units.

SEAL OF HITLER'S DOOM

The Archbishop of York, speaking at York Diocesan Conference, said that it was not impossible that historians of the future, looking back, would say that the event which sealed the doom of Hitler was the defection of Leopold of Belgium, because it led to the collapse of France. The result was the concentration of the power of the British Army in defence of Britain itself, and there came the necessity that if Hitler was to go forward he must attack this island, for which he had not the resources. — London Times.

Are Athletes Brainier Than Less Active Fellows?

by LANCE CONNERY

ARE ATHLETES brainier than their less active fellows?

In other words, do academic and athletic proficiency go hand in hand, so that the better than average sports enthusiast may expect scholastic record?

After years of study, educational authorities in Ottawa and elsewhere have come to the conclusion that two special skills are not correlated at all. Sometimes they may be combined in the exceptional and admittedly fortunate individual—but exceptions prove every rule, in this case lack of one.

R. D. Campbell, athletic instructor at Glebe Collegiate Institute since 1922, has reached that conclusion, too. He feels—and this is a little novel, coming from a person of his profession—that there can be a definite danger in over-emphasizing athletics among secondary school students.

To support the thesis that there is no relation between skill in sports and knowing one's way about the classroom, Mr. Campbell has only to recall the survey made at Glebe some 10 years ago by two members of the teaching staff. They compiled a record of examination results for the entire school over a two-year period, and compared this general average to that of a special group of 75 who were exceptionally good in athletic pursuits. The difference in the two averages was less than one percent.

Which tended to prove that athletes are much like everybody else, neither better nor poorer at less strenuous pastimes.

"There's really no connection between the two abilities", Mr. Campbell repeated. "A fellow might be a stand-out athlete and a poor student, or vice versa. Or he might be good in both. My experience is there is no correlation at all."

Mr. Campbell explained that standards of academic proficiency set by the eligibility requirements for playing on school teams had in many cases a salutary effect on the would-be athlete's studies. The need for better marks in order to play games will spur the individual on to achievement that did not seem possible before.

"I know boys wanting to play games who have knuckled down and worked through school then through university, who otherwise would never have gotten past the first form."

Yet the expert from his 18 years of active experience at Glebe, would not present a 100 percent, case for participation in school athletics. He recalled that often participation in sports—with success, of course —had changed boy, and sometimes not for the better. Individual conceit is the next likely adverse effect.

"That isn't only my opinon; it's that of my colleagus. We don't believe in over-emphasizing athletics; that can be dangerous.

"But athletics are certainly good for the morale. They're valuable as a sort of safety valve—a means of letting off stream."

There is a "professional touch" which should be avoided, Mr. Campbell went on, noting he meant no reflecton on supervised professional sport. The player may concentrate more on winning the game than on the game itself.

"Then they're not playing for the fun of it any more."

If sport does fill the major part of a boy's life, to the exclusion of other interests, it is obvious he has less time to spend an academic work—and less time to think about it.

"Athletics are a means to an end; they can be of really great value."

Principal W. D. T. Atkinson, of Glebe Collegiate, agreed with Mr. Campbell that there was no relation between brilliance in sport and similar achievement in the classroom. Both he and Principal W. B. Wallen, of Technical High School, felt that physical fitness was essential for the student to make the most of his studies, however.

The child who has not had proper food and rest, who lacks the playtime exercise most children have in their early years, may enter school work with a major handicap at the start. If he's not well he can't work well. But that's quite a different thing from participation in competitive athletics.

Principal Wallen suggested the two skills could not be linked at all, any more than mechanical genius could be related to academic wizardry. And it was obvious that the person devoting a great deal of time to perfecting athletic skill could not spend as much time on classroom work.

"We've had complaints from parents that their children were majoring in sport", Mr. Wallen recalled. "A boy of 15 or 16 who spends several hours a day playing baseball or football naturally comes home dead-tired. He's hardly in condition to keep up his studies; he hasn't time for both."

Mr. Atkinson, however, has had few complaints of that nature. Parents, he noted, are required to sign a form granting permission for their children to take part in school sports before the latter are permitted to do so.

It's all very general, but on a subject like this hard and fast rules are strictly out; they cannot be applied. Dr. Jay Nash, of New York University, for instance, believes in strenuous games for both boys and girls before and during adolescence, but he emphasizes the danger of not letting nature take care of the amount of rest which each child needs, along with the strenuous activity.

The New York expert feels that physical activity for young persons, either alone or in groups, can build power which branches into mental growth. Such activity is a process of getting impulses and attitudes and emotions into shape. We lose this power if we don't use it.

Dr. Nash believes the power pyramiding age is about the 15th year, when the young person reaches a sort of physical plateau. In any case, he and other educators contend the best athletic play is not only a relief or change from "serious" life, but also a preparation for that life.

In home life, athletics find a friendly bond unequalled by any other, and so it is in social life. In commercial life, sports give valuable lessons in co-operation, division of labor, and patience, teaching the player his true relation to his opponents.

All these things educationists know. But they still cannot tell you why, out of three persons, one may set the athletic world afire, another may win medal after medal for his scholarship prowess, and the third may do both or neither. The human equation tells the story —and no educator yet has found it answer. —Ottawa Journal.

On the Isle of Orleans

Quaint and beautiful, seemingly forgot by time and trouble is the Island of Orleans, just half hour by motor or ferry from Quebec. Here, the habitants, descendants of the original settlers of New France, live in old world fashion, seemingly uninterested and undisturbed by the changing modernity about them. Cartier first visited the island in 1535 and he dubbed it the Isle de Baccus. The profusion of wild grapes that so impressed Cartier provide an industry for the habitants another old industry is that of the "refined cheese" made at St. Pierre, from a jealously guarded formula. Epicures rave over this one, and more than one gourmet has made a pilgrimage to the Isle D' Orleans to enjoy the native cheese and wine.

Superb Scenery

The parishes which make up the island are enchanting. St. Famille, first to be colonized, St. Francis St Pierre, St. Laurent and St. Jean and they carry on much the same as they did in the middle seventeenth century. The tidy farms, the carefully cultivated soil, the village church, the dependence on M. Le Cure for advice on matters temporal as well as spiritual weave a pattern of life that is remarkably akin to the life of Normandy and Brittany.

As for the scenery it is superb. Artists and writers have immortalized it in pictures and in stories. Every summer an art colony gathers there from all over America. Artists glory in the gardens filled with roses over which tower pink and crimson hollyhocks to match house doors painted a vivid scarlet. The farmers sewing by hand, reaping with a scythe and threshing with the flail, as in days of old, makes a marvelous picture.

Habitant Ways

Oxcarts and dogcarts carrying milk to the dairies move slowly and patiently along the nighways of Orleans. They provide a strange and picturesque contrast to the modern automobiles that come from the mainland. Old houses, stone structures with high-pitched roofs and well kept gardens, are remnants of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries when the culture and civilization of old France was impregnated here.

Old France dishes dot the menu, and in the pantry are delicious jams and jellies put up after ancient recipes brought by the original settlers from France. A meal at an habitant farmhouse is a delightful experience. If you have been wont to vacation in France, you'll find the Isle of Orleans, a delightful and satisfactory substitute.

However ancient the routine life on the Island of Orleans may be, its approach is truly modern, something which adds to its charm. A few years back the Province of Quebec finished a magnificent bridge, nearly three miles long, across the St. Lawrence from Montmorency to St. Pierre on the island. With a central span of 1,100 feet over the broad river, it offers an unparalleled view of the island and the country surrounding Quebec. It also provides entrance to the forty-two mile beltline highway which circles the Island of Orleans.

Who's Afraid of the Big Black Bear?

Two bears were sighted in the bush in the neighborhood of Port Arthur's Boulevard Lake, summer resort and swimming place, Sunday. Police were called and engaged in a hunt which, if successful, would probably have ended in the life of the bears.

Some may wonder or ask why it should be.

Why want to kill the bears? Why should they be regarded as a menace or a threat to the safety of people using the Boulevard Lake resort? Why not regard them as an attraction instead?

Readers are asked not to rush in with the answers. This newspaper knows what they would be but it is not convinced they are right.

The desire to kill bears that ventured into the vicinity of Boulevard Lake is based on some sort of fear that they might attack people thereabouts. The chances of that are, however, exceedingly remote. The bears sighted Sunday are reported to have taken flight when they, at about the same time, sighted the individuals who reported their presence. They would do that again and again. That they would attack or fight with humans is scarcely possible.

Neither bears nor any other animals to be seen in the woods of Thunder Bay district need be regarded as dangerous to human beings. An old bear that had come upon a meal while exceedingly hungry might fight back if anyone attempted to take its meal from it, or a mother bear might fight if someone attempted to run off with its cub, but if humans leave the bears alone they will leave them alone.

The chance of seeing bears in the wilds near Boulevard Lake should, therefore, be regarded as an attraction rather than contrariwise. People do not altogether believe this and, because they do not believe it but are fearsome instead, it is necessary for the police to go on the hunt when the presence of bears is reported.

This is not exactly an argument for protection of the bear. Bruin is an animal of some objectionable habits. He likes to eat little pigs. He likes mutton and veal and, so, he is frequently found running off with the farmers' pigs, sheep or calves. He therefore, has to be killed.

Bruin is also a nuisance around summer camps. He noses around the garbage cans, will enter an open door sometimes, if no one objects, and he frightens women and children. Apart from the killing of farmers' stock he wouldn't do any harm if people were not afraid of him.

It is related that at Batchewana Bay, summer resort on the more easterly portion of Lake Superior, a Chicago visitor came and, sighting a bear soon after his arrival, shot it. It turned out that the bear was one of a number that had been frequenting the camp with welcome from other tourists, who had been feeding them. The more permanent visitors were incensed at the killing of the animal but there was no penalty for that, so they had the offender from Chicago fined for carrying a gun without a licence. It only goes to show that, even as true sometimes among humans, it is only necessary to know a fellow to like him.—Port Arthur News Chronicle.

Seven Ottawas—But Only One That Matters

(Canadian National Railways.)

That Ottawa is an exclusive name would be the guess of many inhabitants of the Dominion, particularly as it is the Capital. Yet a railway agent might well inquire of the intending traveller which of eight communities was meant when asking for a "ticket to Ottawa". There are seven Ottawas across the border, in Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Nor is the repetitous use of place names confined to the Capital. Even Montreal which would appear quite safe because the title clearly designates Mount Royal the central physical feature of the Metropolis, has its counterpart in Michigan, although on a somewhat smaller scale.

Quebec, too, is definitely Canadian, but communities in Louisiana, Montana, North Carolina and Texas have borrowed the name.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, with its positive English name was so called from a patriotic motive. It is not clear what motives stirred those who in Massachusetts, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia gave the name to towns. There are seven Torontos across the border.

The record for repetition goes to Hamilton. The Ontario steel city has relatives in New Brunswick and Quebec, and 24 in the United States, Wisconsin heading the list with two. Victoria, British Columbia, comes second with a Victoria in New Brunswick, 13 in the United States and three in Mexica. Windsor, Ontario, is third with one namesake in Nova Scotia and 16 beyond the international boundary.

Calgary has a rival in Texas. Vancouver has one in Washington, while Fredericton, capital of New Brunswick shares the name with a place in Prince Edward Island.

Ten cities and towns on the continent are called St. John but there is only one "Saint John", the special mark and privilege of the New Brunswick port.

Canadian cities which hold their names exclusively are Winnipeg, Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon, Moncton and Charlottetown.

April is an in between month for fatal accidents, which average 251 per day in that month, compared with an average of 285 for the other months.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press.

British recognition of Haile Selassie, exiled Emperor, as the lawful ruler of Ethiopia points to extended operations against Italian power in Africa from time to time since the outbreak of war reports of armed rebellion have come from Ethiopia and it is known that the Italians never completely succeeded in pacifying the country following their conquest a few years ago.

Since then Italy has been forced to maintain a large garrison there and if the Ethiopians loyal to Haile Selassie can be supplied with arms they can make serious trouble for the Italians.

Italy's position in northern Africa is bound to become increasingly difficult as the war continues and the British fleet holds control of the Mediterranean.

Communication between Italy and its African territories can be carried on only as the risk of loss and a shortage of supplies or reinforcements for Italian troops in Africa will lend encouragement to the Ethiopians to fight harder to regain their independence even though they may be none too well supplied with arms themselves.

When Italy defeated and conquered Ethiopia in 1936 there was nothing to impede the Italians in moving troops and supplies of all kinds. A new outbreak of Ethiopian resistance would find the Italians handicapped in meeting it.

DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE PRESENT BOMBER

The magnificent work of all the chapters of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire in Canada in raising funds for the purchase of a Bolingbroke bomber for presentation to the Canadian Government is an evidence of the spirit which animates the women of Canada . The presentation of this bomber means more than the addition of one bomber to the strength of Canadian arms but it means that the hearts of the people are beating as a united heart in this effort of backing the Motherland to the limit and to victory. Such loyal work is the forerunner of many more great patriotic efforts on the part of various groups of the Canadian people including the chapters of the I.O.D.E. so that Canada may do her utmost and give her best for the cause of the Empire in which alone she can find freedom and the maintenance of civilization as she has known it.

The work of the Belleville chapters of the I.O.D.E. deserves highest praise for the loyalty and devotion of the members of the chapters and the response of the citizens to the cause of liberty has been enthusiastic.

STRUGGLE IN MEDITERRANEAN

Italy has surely seen the notice which Britain has served upon the world that she is determined to defend the imperial lifeline, the New York Times remarks, and to save the empire. She has given clear notice to Italy that the war is to be carried to her shore regardless of the grapple with Germany in the north.

In the first engagement, the British had the best of it, their fleet was not damaged nor were there any British casualties, while the Italians admit that a large ship of theirs was hit and that an Italian submarine and destroyer were sunk.

In the Mediterranean will be staged one of the greatest struggles from the standpoint of importance to the history of the nations involved and to the world at large. There is the control of the Mediterranean by Gibraltar and Suez, there is also the Near East problem of the Dardanelles, of Syria, and of the rest of the Near Orient. There is, too, the effort carried on by the Fascists and Nazis to keep the Balkans quiet for the duration of the struggle now going on.

"It is the war for Africa, for India, for naval supremacy, for all those points at the solar plexus of the world on which imperial power is based," the Times says.

The battle in the Mediterranean the other day wherein the Italians suffered losses and hied themselves away under a heavy smoke screen is no doubt the herald to great history-making events.

Today with her great navy Britain keeps the guard on the great waterway, which links the western world with Africa, the Near East, the Red Sea and the faraway Orient.

PLAN OF GERMANIC UNION

The actions of Germany do not impress. They do not impress the British, who see the insincerity and the ruthless and iron hand of the Nazis in their dealings with the overrun states, whose flower has faded in the blight of the sordid German spirit. They do not impress the conquered states. They do not impress the neutral world.

What has happened in regard to the conquered states is just what was expected — the German "protectorate" becomes a Germanic Union which is decreed for the Scandinavian states.

Those states, until freed, will feel the ever-increasing blight of the Hun and the nazi upon their people, their institutions and customs and their political development as France has learned to her sorrow. France, the light of liberty, now becomes totalitarian under nazi domination. That is the Hun intention with regard to Norway and Denmark and all the rest of the world.

The Hun does not know generosity or magnamity. No one but a fool would expect the Hun as conqueror to be less grotesque and ruthless than he has been in prosecuting the war of conquest against the states he has overrun.

For those who think at all there has to be asked only one question. What is the state of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg since conquest and why is not a word allowed out of these lands now under the heel of the German nazis?

The answer is clear—the Hun does not act otherwise after he has taken a state than he did in taking it. He is the same as he ever was and he is the one who has to be crushed.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Tracheitis—Inflammation of Windpipe

I was having lunch with a throat specialist one day and mentioned that I had a patient who was not losing weight, had no temperature, yet had a persistent cough which was not relieved by drugs nor inhaling drug fumes. His throat was not red nor were his vocal cords. He did not appear to be sick yet the persistent cough disturbed his rest and caused fatigue.

"He likely has tracheitis", said the specialist, "but you cannot see down into the trachea—windpipe —with your instruments. I have found a number of these cases where the inflammation is about an inch below the upper end of the windpipe. I have been able to help them by applying a counter irritant drug direct to this spot. It relieves the cough almost at once".

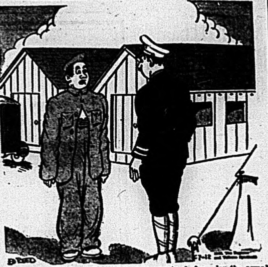
That tracheitis—inflammation of the windpipe—is more common than has been suspected is undoubtedly true and many of these sufferers are pouring cough medicines down their throats that have no local effect as they do not pass over the trachea or windpipe.

The outstanding symptom of tracheitis is the hard dry irritating cough which brings little or nothing up from the bronchial tubes. There is a feeling of strangling and hoarseness, with soreness on presure above and below breast bone.

Dr. Burnett Ham in British Medical Journal gives some suggestions for treatment of tracheitis.

1—Give sodium bicarbonate in half teaspoonful doses every three hours to control the strangling cough, (2) have patient inhale the steam of frair's balsam (tincture of benzoin compound or pine), (3) thirty per cent guaiacol in glycerin freely applied and rubbed in at the top of breast bone where soreness is usually found, will usually give a good night's rest; (4), the nose and throat should be treated to maintain the ventilation.

As mentioned above, it is because ordinary cough medicines cannot reach this spot that they give no help in tracheitis.



"I don't mind the fit of the coat but the pants chafe under the arms."

Parachute Fire Fighters Used by U. S. Forest Service

(Canada Lumberman)

Parachuting fire fighters are being used in the U. S. National Forests for the first time this year. This follows tests made by the U.S. Forest Service on the Chelan National Forest in Washington last fall with a crew of parachute jumpers, which indicated the practicability of dropping fire fighters from airplanes to put out small fires in some of the inaccessible back-country areas of the National Forests. Just recently a new radiophone has been developed so that the "smoke-jumper" can keep in touch with the plane pilot and with his headquarters when he reaches the ground.

The smoke jumpers use a specially designed parachute which has a rate of decent of about twelve feet per second and permits a certain amount of steering toward the landing spot. A special chute harness and protective suit and headgear were also developed to so protect the jumpers that they can land almost anywhere at any elevation—in tall trees or open spaces, or on rough ridges. Jumpers who went down into stands of young lodgepole pine last fall christened them "featherbed landings" because the young pines will catch a parachute readily and absorb most of the shock on their bending, swaying tops. In order to facilitate descent from tall trees, the jumpers carry a coil of light, strong rope.

A small number of complete units of equipment have already been purchased, the Forest Service reports, and these will be used to train smoke-jumpers in actual work on forest fires this summer. The work began last month in national forests in the northern Rockies and northern Cascades of Montana and Washington.

Parachuting Procedure.

Planes which deliver the parachuting fire-fighters scout the fire on their first trip over the spot and drop a small test chute with a ten-pound sand bang to determine wind drift. They then circle back and make a second approach, at which time the parachutist descends, and by using the steering flaps on his parachute, generally manages to reach the ground close to the selected landing spot. On a third approach the pilot drops the fire-fighting kit which is carried down by a burlap parachute with a yellow streamer attached to prevent its being lost—a method used by the Forest Service for some years to deliver tons of equipment to back country fire-fighters. The burlap chute pack contains necessary tools, rations, first-aid kit and the like but the parachutist will carry with him the new lightweight radio so that he can contact the pilot or his headquarters immediately if necessary or can make reports later.

The small type radiophone developed by the Forest Service weighs only six pounds with dry batteries and all accessories, and is not quite as large as a loaf of sandwich bread. It measures 2 by 4½ by 12 inches, and operates on ultra-high frequency between 30,000 and 40,000 kilocycles, having a two-way communication range covering an optical distance which with sufficient elevation may be as much as a hundred miles.

According to H. K. Lawson, associate radio engineer of the Forest Service radio laboratory at Portland, Oregon, the transmitting portion of the tiny radiophone is crystal-controlled, a system of maintaining accurate transmitting frequency heretofore used only in permanently located stations or in relatively bulky, portable or mobile units.

SEAL OF HITLER'S DOOM

The Archbishop of York, speaking at York Diocesan Conference, said that it was not impossible that historians of the future, looking back, would say that the event which sealed the doom of Hitler was the defection of Leopold of Belgium, because it led to the collapse of France. The result was the concentration of the power of the British Army in defence of Britain itself, and there came the necessity that if Hitler was to go forward he must attack this island, for which he had not the resources. — London Times.

Are Athletes Brainier Than Less Active Fellows?

by LANCE CONNERY

ARE ATHLETES brainier than their less active fellows?

In other words, do academic and athletic proficiency go hand in hand, so that the better than average sports enthusiast may expect scholastic record?

After years of study, educational authorities in Ottawa and elsewhere have come to the conclusion that two special skills are not correlated at all. Sometimes they may be combined in the exceptional and admittedly fortunate individual—but exceptions prove every rule, in this case lack of one.

R. D. Campbell, athletic instructor at Glebe Collegiate Institute since 1922, has reached that conclusion, too. He feels—and this is a little novel, coming from a person of his profession—that there can be a definite danger in over-emphasizing athletics among secondary school students.

To support the thesis that there is no relation between skill in sports and knowing one's way about the classroom, Mr. Campbell has only to recall the survey made at Glebe some 10 years ago by two members of the teaching staff. They compiled a record of examination results for the entire school over a two-year period, and compared this general average to that of a special group of 75 who were exceptionally good in athletic pursuits. The difference in the two averages was less than one percent.

Which tended to prove that athletes are much like everybody else, neither better nor poorer at less strenuous pastimes.

"There's really no connection between the two abilities", Mr. Campbell repeated. "A fellow might be a stand-out athlete and a poor student, or vice versa. Or he might be good in both. My experience is there is no correlation at all."

Mr. Campbell explained that standards of academic proficiency set by the eligibility requirements for playing on school teams had in many cases a salutary effect on the would-be athlete's studies. The need for better marks in order to play games will spur the individual on to achievement that did not seem possible before.

"I know boys wanting to play games who have knuckled down and worked through school then through university, who otherwise would never have gotten past the first form."

Yet the expert from his 18 years of active experience at Glebe, would not present a 100 percent, case for participation in school athletics. He recalled that often participation in sports—with success, of course—had changed boy, and sometimes not for the better. Individual conceit is the next likely adverse effect.

"That isn't only my opinon; it's that of my colleagus. We don't believe in over-emphasizing athletics; that can be dangerous.

"But athletics are certainly good for the morale. They're valuable as a sort of safety valve—a means of letting off stream."

There is a "professional touch" which should be avoided, Mr. Campbell went on, noting he meant no reflecion on supervised professional sport. The player may concentrate more on winning the game than on the game itself.

"Then they're not playing for the fun of it any more."

If sport does fill the major part of a boy's life, to the exclusion of other interests, it is obvious he has less time to spend an academic work—and less time to think about it.

"Athletics are a means to an end; they can be of really great value."

Principal W. D. T. Atkinson, of Glebe Collegiate, agreed with Mr. Campbell that there was no relation between brilliance in sport and similar achievement in the classroom. Both he and Principal W. B. Wallen, of Technical High School, felt that physical fitness was essential for the student to make the most of his studies, however.

The child who has not had proper food and rest, who lacks the playtime exercise most children have in their early years, may enter school work with a major handicap at the start. If he's not well he can't work well. But that's quite a different thing from participation in competitive athletics.

Principal Wallen suggested the two skills could not be linked at all, any more than mechanical genius could be related to academic wizardry. And it was obvious that the person devoting a great deal of time to perfecting athletic skill could not spend as much time on classroom work.

"We've had complaints from parents that their children were majoring in sport", Mr. Wallen recalled. "A boy of 15 or 16 who spends several hours a day playing baseball or footbal; naturally comes home dead-tired. He's hardly in condition to keep up his studies; he hasn't time for both."

Mr. Atkinson, however, has had few complaints of that nature. Parents, he noted, are required to sign a form granting permission for their children to take part in school sports before the latter are permitted to do so.

It's all very general, but on a subject like this hard and fast rules are strictly out; they cannot be applied. Dr. Jay Nash, of New York University, for instance, believes in strenuous games for both boys and girls before and during adolescence, but he emphasizes the danger of not letting nature take care of the amount of rest which each child needs, along with the strenuous activity.

The New York expert feels that physical activity for young persons, either alone or in groups, can build power which branches into mental growth. Such activity is a process of getting impulses and attitudes and emotions into shape. We lose this power if we don't use it.

Dr. Nash believes the power pyramiding age is about the 15th year, when the young person reaches a sort of physical plateau. In any case, he and other educators contend the best athletic play is not only a relief or change from "serious" life, but also a preparation for that life.

In home life, athletics find a friendly bond unequalled by any other, and so it is in social life. In commercial life, sports give valuable lessons in co-operation, division of labor, and patience, teaching the player his true relation to his opponents.

All these things educationists know. But they still cannot tell you why, out of three persons, one may set the athletic world afire, another may win medal after medal for his scholarship prowess, and the third may do both or neither. The human equation tells the story—and no educator yet has found it answer. —Ottawa Journal.

On the Isle of Orleans

Quaint and beautiful, seemingly forgot by time and trouble is the Island of Orleans, just half hour by motor or ferry from Quebec. Here, the habitants, descendants of the original settlers of New France, live in old world fashion, seemingly uninterested and undisturbed by the changing modernity about them. Cartier first visited the island in 1535 and he dubbed it the Isle de Baccus. The profusion of wild grapes that so impressed Cartier provide an industry for the habitants another old industry is that of the "refined cheese" made at St. Pierre, from a jealously guarded formula. Epicures rave over this one, and more than one gourmet has made a pilgrimage to the Isle D' Orleans to enjoy the native cheese and wine.

Superb Scenery

The parishes which make up the island are enchanting. St. Famille, first to be colonized, St. Francis St Pierre, St. Laurent and St. Jean and they carry on much the same as they did in the middle seventeenth century. The tidy farms, the carefully cultivated soil, the village church, the dependence on M. Le Cure for advice on matters temporal as well as spiritual weave a pattern of life that is remarkably akin to the life of Normandy and Brittany.

As for the scenery it is superb. Artists and writers have immortalized it in pictures and in stories. Every summer an art colony gathers there from all over America. Artists glory in the gardens filled with roses over which tower pink and crimson hollyhocks to match house doors painted a vivid scarlet. The farmers sewing by hand, reaping with a scythe and threshing with the flail, as in days of old, makes a marvelous picture.

Habitant Ways

Oxcarts and dogcarts carrying milk to the dairies move slowly and patiently along the highways of Orleans. They provide a strange and picturesque contrast to the modern automobiles that come from the mainland. Old houses, stone structures with high-pitched roofs and well kept gardens, are remnants of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries when the culture and civilization of old France was impregnated here.

Old France dishes dot the menu, and in the pantry are delicious jams and jellies put up after ancient recipes brought by the original settlers from France. A meal at an habitant farmhouse is a delightful experience. If you have been wont to vacation in France, you'll find the Isle of Orleans, a delightful and satisfactory substitute.

However ancient the routine life on the Island of Orleans may be, its approach is truly modern, something which adds to its charm. A few years back the Province of Quebec finished a magnificent bridge, nearly three miles long, across the St. Lawrence from Montmorency to St. Pierre on the Island. With a central span of 1,100 feet over the broad river, it offers an unparalleled view of the island and the country surrounding Quebec. It also provides entrance to the forty-two mile beltline highway which circles the Island of Orleans.

Who's Afraid of the Big Black Bear?

Two bears were sighted in the bush in the neighborhood of Port Arthur's Boulevard Lake, summer resort and swimming place, Sunday. Police were called and engaged in a hunt which, if successful, would probably have ended in the life of the bears.

Some may wonder or ask why it should be.

Why want to kill the bears? Why should they be regarded as a menace or a threat to the safety of people using the Boulevard Lake resort? Why not regard them as an attraction instead?

Readers are asked not to rush in with the answers. This newspaper knows what they would be but it is not convinced they are right.

The desire to kill bears that ventured into the vicinity of Boulevard Lake is based on some sort of fear that they might attack people thereabouts. The chances of that are, however, exceedingly remote. The bears sighted Sunday are reported to have taken flight when they, at about the same time, sighted the individuals who reported their presence. They would do that again and again. That they would attack or fight with humans is scarcely possible.

Neither bears nor any other animals to be seen in the woods of Thunder Bay district need be regarded as dangerous to human beings. An old bear that had come upon a meal while exceedingly hungry might fight back if anyone attempted to take its meal from it, or a mother bear might fight if someone attempted to run off with its cub, but if humans leave the bears alone they will leave them alone.

The chance of seeing bears in the wilds near Boulevard Lake should, therefore, be regarded as an attraction rather than contrariwise. People do not altogether believe this and, because they do not believe it but are fearsome instead, it is necessary for the police to go on the hunt when the presence of bears is reported.

This is not exactly an argument for protection of the bear. Bruin is an animal of some objectionable habits. He likes to eat little pigs. He likes mutton and veal and, so, he is frequently found running off with the farmers' pigs, sheep or calves. He therefore, has to be killed.

Bruin is also a nuisance around summer camps. He noses around the garbage cans, will enter an open door sometimes, if no one objects, and he frightens women and children. Apart from the killing of farmers' stock he wouldn't do any harm if people were not afraid of him.

It is related that at Batchewana Bay, summer resort on the more easterly portion of Lake Superior, a Chicago visitor came and, sighting a bear soon after his arrival, shot it. It turned out that the bear was one of a number that had been frequenting the camp with welcome from other tourists, who had been feeding them. The more permanent visitors were incensed at the killing of the animal but there was no penalty for that, so they had the offender from Chicago fined for carrying a gun without a licence. It only goes to show that, even as true sometimes among humans, it is only necessary to know a fellow to like him.—Port Arthur News Chronicle.

Seven Ottawas—But Only One That Matters

(Canadian National Railways.)

That Ottawa is an exclusive name would be the guess of many inhabitants of the Dominion, particularly as it is the Capital. Yet a railway agent might well inquire of the intending traveller which of eight communities was meant when asking for a "ticket to Ottawa". There are seven Ottawas across the border, in Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Nor is the repetitous use of place names confined to the Capital. Even Montreal which would appear quite safe because the title clearly designates Mount Royal the central physical feature of the Metropolis, has its counterpart in Michigan, although on a somewhat smaller scale.

Quebec, too, is definitely Canadian, but communities in Louisiana, Montana, North Carolina and Texas have borrowed the name.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, with its positive English name was so called from a patriotic motive. It is not clear what motives stirred those who in Massachusetts, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia gave the name to towns. There are seven Torontos across the border.

The record for repetition goes to Hamilton. The Ontario steel city has relatives in New Brunswick and Quebec, and 24 in the United States, Wisconsin heading the list with two. Victoria, British Columbia, comes second with a Victoria in New Brunswick, 13 in the United States and three in Mexica. Windsor, Ontario, is third with one namesake in Nova Scotia and 16 beyond the international boundary.

Calgary has a rival in Texas. Vancouver has one in Washington, while Fredericton, capital of New Brunswick, shares the name with a place in Prince Edward Island.

Ten cities and towns on the continent are called St. John but there is only one "Saint John", the special mark and privilege of the New Brunswick port.

Canadian cities which hold their names exclusively are Winnipeg, Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon, Moncton and Charlottetown.

April is an in between month for fatal accidents, which average 251 per day in that month, compared with an average of 285 for the other months.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

British recognition of Haile Selassie, exiled Emperor, as the lawful ruler of Ethiopia points to extended operations against Italian power in Africa from time to time since the outbreak of war reports of armed rebellion have come from Ethiopia and it is known that the Italians never completely succeeded in pacifying the country following their conquest a few years ago.

Since then Italy has been forced to maintain a large garrison there and if the Ethiopians loyal to Haile Selassie can be supplied with arms they can make serious trouble for the Italians.

Italy's position in northern Africa is bound to become increasingly difficult as the war continues and the British fleet holds control of the Mediterranean.

Communication between Italy and its African territories can be carried on only as the risk of loss and a shortage of supplies or reinforcements for Italian troops in Africa will lend encouragement to the Ethiopians to fight harder to regain their independence even though they may be none too well supplied with arms themselves.

When Italy defeated and conquered Ethiopia in 1936 there was nothing to impede the Italians in moving troops and supplies of all kinds. A new outbreak of Ethiopian resistance would find the Italians handicapped in meeting it.

LATE MISS ADA HAMILTON
(Sidney Township)

Tuesday afternoon, July 9 ,the funeral of Miss Ada Hamilton took place from the family residence in the seventh concession of Sidney Township, to the Baptist Church in that township, where an impressive service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Smith, who conducted also the service at the graveside in the family plot in Guffin's Cemetery.

The bearers were Mr. Cecil Ross, Mr. Nathan Reid, Mr. Harry Reid, Mr. Leonard Ward, Mr. Lorne Reid and Mr. Leo Ryan.

It is only seven months since the family suffered a bereavement in the death of Mrs. Hamilton, the mother of the family.

Put the Nazis on Road Work?

Why send German prisoners to an internment camp to be supported by Canadian taxpayers? Why not let them earn their keep by building badly needed road in New Ontario?

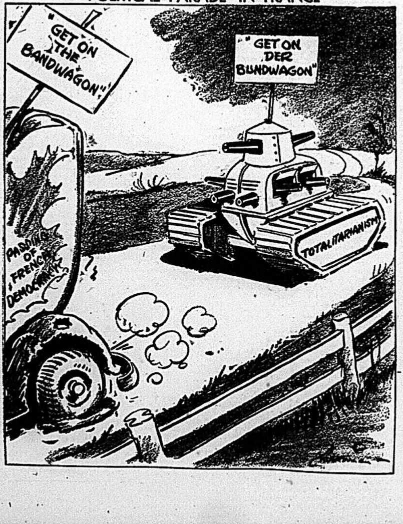
Between Schrieber and White River the trans-Canada highway has had a good deal of work done on it, but this section of some 140 miles is now in the unfinished condition in which the contractor left it when funds ran low a few years back.

There are 35 well-built camps all ready for a new force to finish the job, along the stretch between the two towns.

The newspapers have been allowed to announce that Nazi prisoners are being brought to Canada to prevent them becoming a danger in Great Britain when Hitler's threatened invasion becomes a fact. As Germany forces its conquered foes to labor, there seems no good reason why Canada should allow its war guests to idle. They should be asked to do a reasonable amount of work while they are kept in this country. The trans-Canada isn't completed yet.

It will be recalled that Britain housed German officers in luxurious quarters during the last war. While prisoners should be treated with consideration there seems no reason why they should be coddled in idleness. The road building season is a short one in the north.—Sault Daily Star.

POLITICAL PARADE IN FRANCE



Predicts Mackenzie River Valley Is on Eve of Great Development

Predicting that the Mackenzie river valley in Canada's northland was upon the eve of great development because of its vast natural resources and because of ever-improving methods of transportation, Rev. Harry Cook, Anglican church missionary at Fort Simpson, stated in a recent address at Woodstock.

In speaking of the natural terrain, of its inhabitants, of its vast reaches and of its rich natural resources, the speaker traced at first the interesting outline of the great Mackenzie waterway, which for many years had been the main artery of contact. He told of the division of the Mackenzie basin between Indians and whites, the former being divided into three main species. Of these, he said, the Crees were by far the most enterprising, while the Slavi tribe represented the lowest calibre.

"In speaking of the Indians of the far north," said Mr. Cook, "I might say that they do not wear bright colors as is the general belief. The women wear dark colored garments, as do the men. The latter almost universally wear blue serge trousers with dark sweaters. It is among the half-breeds that the love of bright color exists.

WOMEN THE SLAVES

"The Slavi Indians are indolent in a general way. The men do nothing more than is necessary, either in the winter or the summer. They attend to the trap lines, and the hunting of moose and the catching of fish for their dogs, as all dogs in the north are fed upon fish. Mending their equipment may be added to their labors, but there is little else. In general, they just idle away their time, while the women folk make the moccasins, make the clothing, attend to the gardens and otherwise all the heavy labors.

"They have no foresight or ambition. They are in every way indolent," said the speaker.

THE LONG SEASONS

The speaker explained the abnomal length of both the summer and the winter seasons. It was shown that for six months there was continuous daylight, with but little change for a short period between the hours of the two extremes, the result being that newcomers into the country were said to have difficulty in getting to sleep at night, even though not going to bed until 11 o'clock or later. Mr. Cook said, however, that after a period of about one year spent there, this difficulty all passed away, and no sleeping difficulties were experienced.

"Vegetables grow splendidly there, with the exception of corn and tomatoes. Our potatoes equal in every way the crop here in Oxford. Our vegetables on the whole equal those of either Oxford or Essex. Tomatoes do not ripen there because of the short season. Corn also does not do well there. Wheat and other grains are grown in the district, because at the Catholic mission there are a considerable number of cattle and horses kept. When it is seen that these crops are going to be effected by frosts which come with the change of the moon in August, they are cut green and stored away for food in that way. Most flowers outside of sweet peas do not grow there. It appears that the continuous hours of daylight have an unfavorable effect upon them. Plants which should ordinarily grow to four or five inches normally, will run along the ground a distance of four feet in some cases almost like a vine. The blossoms of the sweet peas do well however, and are beautiful. In this long summer season, traffic along the Mackenzie river is at its height, and there is much activity. This must be done, as there are six weeks in the time of the autumn freeze-up and six weeks again in the time of the spring break—up in which airplane freighting cannot be carried out.

"In the winter, it is a long, continous twilight. The homes at Simpson are warm, roomy and comfortable. We have our own electric light plants which serve very well. In our own quarters we have a splendid wood-burning furnace, wood being the fuel that is used entirely. In our quarters, the walls are of log construction, covered on the outside with clapboard, and lined on the inside with fibre board.

"We all get along very well in this way, and soon learn to make the best of the long twilight of the winter months. We have only one commodity missing of any consequence, that being running water. Prohibitive freight rates make it out of the question to bring in pumps and tanks for this purpose.

"With the Indians, it is not so well. The tepee is disappearing from the north, and for the Indians that is bad, because, as you doubtless have understood, the people of these tribes are very susceptible to tuberculosis. Most of them have it. When they had their tepees with the open hole at the top of the cone, they were assured of a constant circulation of fresh air. The tent is replacing the tepee and in these tents there is no air circulation of any kind. This change is having a very damaging effect. There is a question as to what may eventually become of these people. Their contacts with the white man has not improved their lot in any way.

THE TRAP LINES

"The handling of the Indian trap lines is of course the main employment and source of life for the Indians. They travel great distances on their lines. The average fur catch of a season brings to the trapper, be he Indian or other breed, around $1,400 per year. When the costs of dog feed, harness, toboggans and other equipment is considered, great inroads are made into the $1,400. Toboggans cost $60 each, and a good sized trap line will wear out two of these in a winter.

"The Indian has been getting away from his canoe to some extent also. He is employing what we call in the north "kickers." They are outboard motors attached to the back of the canoe. They have added materially to the financial troubles of the Indians, when one considers that gasoline there costs from 90c to $1.00 per gallon, and oil from 80c to 94c per quart. He would be better indeed to go back to his canoe," said the speaker.

The north was said to be a particularly healthy country for the white man, and among whites, there was, consequently, little sickness. At each settlement a doctor was available. Each summer, a dentist came down the river, it was stated and looked at that time to the dental welfare of the people.

"There is little comfort in that however, for the person who develops a toothache in the winter time, as I know personally. I lost three good molars. The medical doctor will extract teeth at any time, and thus I lost mine in the winter when they could not be cared for with the drill."

AVOIDED DOGS

The speaker said that he had learned to get along without dog-sled travel where he could avoid it. It was explained that the dogs, many of them of half-wolf strain, were not only costly to maintain and to equip, but costly to buy in the first place. It was shown that an average team of five dogs cost about $300.

"In addition to this, they are treacherous. They must be sternly watched. They are liable to turn upon you at any time. They get fighting. They chew up their costly harness. I have learned to avoid their use as much as possible," said Mr. Cook.

It was explained that the long winter season brought about a marked social activity in the settlements. In fact the speaker said that to be honest, there was too much of it. It was however in this long period that the people sought social intercourse through the medium of parties and dancing.

It was shown that in many cases, the Indian agent was also a doctor, and in this way was kept particularly busy, as he filled many offices in those dual capacities. Reference was made also to the work of the R. C. M. P. in the far north.

"Many of the Indians and other trappers live 50 or 100 miles from their neighbors, and the mounted police much call upon them twice each winter to see that their physical well being is in good order, and that all else is well. This in addition to the task of keeping general law and order. That within itself is not difficult however, as crime in the north is of the lesser variety. Game laws must be enforced however, and many other things looked after by these splendid officers."

The speaker told, too, of the fine work of other branches of government service as with one branch of army service made to fit in with the needs of the north, the radio station personnel, the Hudson Bay factors, the missionaries of varied churches, and others.

The visit of the late Lord Tweedsmuir to Fort Simpson was referred to, and the speaker quoted from a written opinion of that offical as to the possibility of future development in the great hinterlands of the north.

Mr. Cook said that methods of transportation were changing, and being improved steadily. The opinion was expressed that the advent of war would set back a great impetus to the onward trend of the country. Two good finds had been made recently in prospecting to the west of Fort Simpson, it was stated, and this too would have its place in due time in building up and opening up the country to a vast extent. It was stated that in one year 3,000,000 pounds of freighter were taken into the Mackenzie basin, this representing a greater total than the combined freight handling of all the lines in the United States. The freight was said to have been made up largely of mining equipment.

The speaker dwelt upon the methods of the missionaries, the fluctuations of the fur prices and consequent losses which frequently came between the time of buying the season's catch and the sale of same; the distances travelled by Indian agents, doctors, missionaries and others, the fact that Scottish and English were largely the whites who go into the district, and the high standards and tests set for many who go into the country to serve in varying capacities. Varied other points of interest were touched upon in what D. G. Cuthbertson, in expressing the club's thanks, said was an address "all too short in its absorbing interest."

First Jump With Parachute Made in 1783

Although its use in warfare—it was first used in the World War of 1914-1918 — is comparatively recent, the parachute is by no means new. As early as 1783 Sebastien Lenormand, a French physician, descended successfully in a parachute from the tower of the Montpellier observatory. He hoped that the parachute might be used as a means of escape for those trapped on roofs by fire. This is believed the first recorded jump in a parachute.

The French balloonist Jean Pierre Blanchard constructed a parachute in 1875 and he receives credit for being the first to use one as an adjunct to a balloon. A dog in a basket suspended from his parachute made a successful descent from a balloon at a considerable height. The story is told that Blanchard himself descended from a balloon in 1793, but because of the too rapid descent of his parachute his leg was broken when he reached the ground.

France pioneered in the use of parachutes as she did in ballooning; another Frenchman, Andre Jacques Garnerin, was the first person to make an entirely successful parachute descent from a balloon. He made many descents and to him belongs the credit for proving the practicability of the "lifebelt of the air." His first public descent took place at Monceau, in Paris, on October 22, 1797. He made another descent from a balloon in London on September 21, 1802. He is believed to have released his parachute at about 8,000 feet and was slightly injured when he struck the earth.

Garnerin's parachute was of white canvass, twenty-three feet in diameter and dome-shaped, resembling a large umbrella. He rode in a basket attached to the parachute which, in turn, was attached to his balloon. In those early days parachutes were none too trustworthy he became famous for his parachute descents and was acclaimed for his daring. His sister, who is said to have made some fifty descents, became the first woman parachutist.

The first use of a parachute in actually saving life is said to have been made by Jordaki Kuparento, a Polish balloonist. His fire-balloon, in which he ascended from Warsaw on July 24, 1808, caught fire, but he descended safely in his parachute. An American Army officer made the first descent in a parachute from an airplane at St. Louis, Missouri, in 1912.

Parachutes were used somewhat by the Germans during the last days of the World War of 1914-1918. Since that time various improvements, including the "seat pack", have been made in the equipment. The Soviet Army claims credit for pioneering in the training of parachute troops, and its historians assert that mass parachute descents were made in military manoeuvres in 1925 for the first time.—New York Sun.

On Thursday, July 11th., 1940, at the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, Mr. Walter Earl Lidster and Miss Anna Dorothy Tucker, both of Belleville, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. B. Tucker B.A., B.D., assisted by his brother, Rev. S. T. Tucker, B.A. B.D., both of Toronto and related to the bride.

After the signing of the Metropolitan Church Marriage Register, the happy couple were introduced to the Very Reverend Doctor Peter Bryce Ex-Moderator of the United Church of Canada, and now the beloved pastor of the Metropolitan Church, whose gracious presence and felicitous words were a veritable benediction, never to be forgotten by them.

WILSON—VOLKENBURG

Marmora, (Special)—St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, was the scene of an interesting wedding on June 29th., when Miss Beatrice Matilda Van Volkenburg, Oshawa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Van Volkenburg, Cordova Mines, became the bride of Thomas Hartley Wilson, of Sudbury, son of Mr. Wellington Wilson and the late Mrs. Wilson of Cordova Mines. Rev. W. P. Fletcher officiated.

Mrs. White played the wedding music and Mrs. E. C. Prentice sang "I Love You Truly" during the signing of the register.

Mrs. Douglas Moore of Oshawa, sister of the bride was matron of honor. Her dress was of blush pink triple sheer, with which she wore a matching wide-brimmed hat and carried a bouquet of roses and carnations. The groomsman was his brother, Murray Wilson of Frankford.

Roses, peonies and ferns decorated Calvary Tabernacle, Fort Erie, on Wednesday, June 19, for the marriage of Miss Edith Vesterfelt, Fort Erie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Vesterfelt, formerly of Belleville, and Mr. George Devereaux, Fort Erie. Rev. Betterly of Stevensville, and Rev. Hugh Thompson, pastor of Calvary Tabernacle, officiated in a double ring ceremony which took place in the afternoon.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white moire princess gown with a sweetheart neckline and short puffed sleeves. The dress was designed with a short train. She carried a bouquet of pink roses, lily-of-the-valley and forget-me-nots.

They wore matching headdress and carried pink roses. The flower girl, Mary Evelyn Doeppe, wore a printed silk dress of pink and rose, made on the same lines as the gown worn by the bride. She wore blue velvet bows on head and on wrists, and carried a basket of roses.

RICHER—CHOLETTE

Montreal, July 13.—The marriage of Jacqueline, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Cholette to Flight-Lieutenant Baxter Richer, R.C.A.F. son of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Richer of Outremont, took place this morning at half-past ten o'clock in the Roman Catholic Church at St. Hippolyte of Kilkenny, the Right Reverend A. V. G. Piette, P.A., officiating. Peonies, delphinium and other summer flowers were used to decorate the church.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a frock of white silk marquisette over white satin, cut on simple lines with the skirt finishing in a short train. Her veil of tulle illusion reached beyond the hem of her train and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Richer, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of china pink crepe with a black mohair hat.

The reception was held at the summer residence of the bride's parents at Lake L'Achigan.

Later Flight-Lieutenant and Mrs. Richer left for the Gaspe peninsula, the bride travelling in a frock of beige Lariche crepe with a turban of the same shade and white and gold accessories and carrying a polo coat.

They will reside in Trenton.

CALLERY—BROWNSON

Marmora, (Special)—A very pretty wedding took place in Sacred Heart Church, Madoc, on Saturday morning, June 29th., when Miss Ann Victoria Brownson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brownson, of Eldorado, was united in marriage to Michael Henry Callery, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Callery of Deloro. The ceremony was performed and Nuptial Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Hyland.

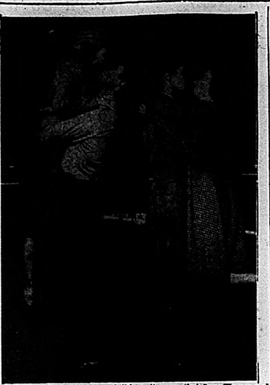
The bride looked charming in a dusty pink crepe gown and carried a white prayerbook with streamers and orange blossoms. She wore a corsage of American Beauty roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Frances Leady wore a gown of blue sheer and a corsage of pink roses. The groomsman was Simon Brownson, brother of the bride.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Charles Stockler and Mrs. Fred Meraw sang a solo. The altar was beautifully decorated with white marguerites and peonies and white ribbon with marguerites marked the guest pews. The bride and groom left for Belleville and points east and have since taken up residence in Deloro.

Dance And Floor Show Attended By Large Crowd

Realizing a splendid sum which will be devoted to the Bomber Fund of the Order, the dance and floor show at Hume Arena sponsored by St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E. proved most successful last evening. A large crowd attending and thoroughly enjoyed dancing to music by the Commodores, and the evening's feature entertainment, a floor show given by the dancing class of Mrs. Ashley. These talented dancers delighted the audience with their skill and grace. Added pleasure was provided by Jack Marsh, heard in several fine vocal solos.

The members of the Chapter expressed appreciation to all those who assisted in the success of the evening especially Sandy Burrows, Allan Meagher, the Arena Staff, Bud Haines and his orchestra, Foy and Irwin, Pepsi-Cola, Ottawa Dairy, B. J. Black, Mrs. Symons for flowers, Mrs. Ashley and her classes and Jack Marsh for giving services, free, for the occasion.



And from the appearance of things it seems that Jane Wyman and Virginia Bruce enjoy this scene with Wayne Morris and Dennis Morgan in "Flight Angels," which opens next at the Capitol, plus Don Terry and Rosalind Keith in "A Fight to the Finish."

One of the nice little recent events held in St. John's Mission on Herchimer Avenue, was the Strawberry and Ice Cream Social sponsored by the young people last week. The bright spot of the evening's program was the presenting of twenty-eight dollars as a contribution from the Mission toward the Bolingbroke Bomber Fund collected by the untiring efforts of Miss Amelia Waldron. The members thanked Miss Waldron for her splendid efforts, one of her many charitable undertakings. The evening was brought to a close with prayer by Rev. Mr. Heaven.

Story of Gray Fox

(New York Times)

A rather disturbing story about a gray fox comes from Mr. William H. Carr, well and favorably known to nature lovers as the director of the Trailside Museum at Bear Mountain. Mr. Carr has been accustomed to exhibit young foxes at the museum for a time and then release them. The present fox, reared from infancy by Mr. Carr's assistant, Mr. John Kenney, not only refused to be released but had to be pushed out of the cage. He hangs around the museum and gets fed while visitors look on. The chances are that he is stage-struck and wants to get into the movies.

Foxes in general are not easily tamed. According to George Jennison of the Manchester (England) Zoological Gardens, the red English variety can be domesticated "and becomes quite familiar," in spite of the efforts of the country gentry to exterminate it. Dr. Hornaday is authority for the statement that "there is little pleasure to be derived from foxes kept in captivity as pets," since "they are nervous, easily frightened, and, as a rule, are totally lacking in all the sentiments which resemble affection." The gray fox (Urocyon cinero-argentus) may possibly be more affectionate than the common red fox. It is Southern in origin and inclined to be sentimental.

But even though the fox at Bear Mountain is fond of Mr. Carr and Mr. Kenney, likes the attention it is getting and fatuously believes that some producer will soon appear with a fat contract, we believe it is making a mistake. If it keeps on the way it is going it is bound to be disillusioned, its public will grow tired of it, and in the end it will find that the bubble fame is no substitute for the field mouse or a free life close to nature.

Find Time to Read

By Garry Cleveland Myers Ph.D.

During the summer vacation, children of school age can find abundant time to read. I wish parents within the reach of a public library would encourage their children to borrow books from it and read them.

There are great opportunities for wholesome fun and education when older children read to younger ones, read to children much younger. A few years ago a mother wrote me of an interesting project in Flint, Michigan. A P.T.A. leader there enlisted the interest of a number of high school girls of a neighborhood to volunteer to read to children under six. Each girl read for half an hour or so to a group of four or five young children in a home. The girls liked it. They were sure it improved their expression. They felt they were doing a useful service at entertaining these tots so wholesomely, keeping them from the dangers of the street and relieving their mothers, for the time, of their care.

Backyard Confab

Another mother wrote from Milwaukee: "Since the children are having their vacation we have realized more than before that their activites require intelligent supervison. Several weeks ago we started reading with a group of children who play in the yard. We have three children, 4, 6 and 9 years and among their friends are some who are twelve years old. We read a story and as we go along the older children define the hard words so the youngest children can understand . . . .

"Our yard is very attractive to all the children since it has all the equipment in it which one finds on the playground. In this way we can allow the most desirable to play in the yard and from time to time we allow the less desirable to enter, one at a time and they gradually reform, so this privilege will not be denied them. The results are almost miraculous and make us all very happy."

They Like Stories

From Kansas City, Kansas, a mother writes of her two boys, four and six:

"They love having stories read to them and every two weeks we check four new books out of the public library. Neither the dish-washing nor the sweeping nor anything else would ever get done if I did all the story reading my sons demand."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 31 years old and my wife is the same age. We've been married almost three years now, and have been getting along fine. Recently an aunt and cousin—a young man of 22—came to visit us. As my wife is very fond of this aunt, I gave her money to send to help pay her railroad fare. And now the aunt said she would have stayed at home if she knew I sent the money.

The other day I put a lock on my closet door, because I didn't want this cousin to be wearing my clothes while I was at work. I explained to my wife and offered her one of the keys, but she was very angry, and told me I'd have to take the lock off. I refused to do this, and when I came home that evening she was gone. Do you think I did right or wrong?

Worried.

I don't see why your wife should object because you wished to safeguard your clothes, which were worn during your absence by the cousin, especially as you gave her a key to the closet.

Sometimes girls are apt to rush home to mama the minute things aren't just the way they want them. However, I hope your wife has returned to you before this time. Also, please remember the old saw "least said, soonest mended."

How Can She Break With Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've just been graduated from high school and start to college in the fall. My mother has forbidden me to go with any boys, thinking it might interfere with by education. I have been going with a boy who fell in love with me and said he would ask me to marry him when I graduated from college. I don't love him, but meet him secretly once in a while.

I wrote him a letter and somehow or other it was lost. He was so unhappy that he hadn't heard from me that one of my girl friends begged me to send him a line to stop his suffering. I thought if he is so hurt for such a little thing, how am I going to break off with him? He has always been such a gentleman since I've known him, and I do like him.

Marion

You're not in love with this boy at present and you're having a great opportunity in going to college. Do play fair. Tell the boy he has a friend in you, but that work will prevent your writing to him while you're at school. Encourage him to take up something in which he has a real interest. Never before has the government done so much for young people in the way of free education. Urge this boy to take advantage of it and make a success of his life.

Disregarded His Blessings When He Had Them

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married five years, and have a beautiful little girl of four, and no man ever had a better or more capable wife. She was pretty a good manager, a good mother, and devoted to me. And I'd be glad to do almost anything to get her back, but I'm afraid it's too late.

Although I had all these things and a nice home, I didn't appreciate them, and instead ran around with a girl of the type who doesn't care whether a man is married or not. It thrilled me when she smiled at me on the street and we began to talk, but I soon found out that a girl who will smile at one stranger will do the same to another.

I've asked my wife to take me back, telling her how sorry I am and that it won't happen again, but she won't listen, and divorce proceeding are going right on. It nearly kills me to see my home and all that I held dear crumbling before my eyes. If I had my time to go over, I'd do differently—quit skirt-chasing and take my wife to the movies occasionally and be really affectionate. Please print my letter; it may keep some other home from wreckage.

R. T.

I'm glad to print your confession, but don't you know, if it should catch some similarly affected husband's eye, he would regard you as lacking in technique for having become caught, and would hope to get away with his own brand of devility?

It is strange that a man with a wife such as you describe yours to be will risk everything for a little cheap amusement. But there is a type of man who does this every day in the year, and then regrets.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

One-Subject Monologists Made Dreadful Bores

Some people, like the Ancient Mariner, "fix us with their glittering eye" and make us listen, whether we wish to or not, to their concentrated talk about something which is of paramount interest to them but which doesn't concern or interest us much. To them conversation isn't a give-and-take; it's all give.

For example there's Dorothy, who talks about her weight, talks about her latest diet, talks about reducing. Nations may fall, and war questions may rise, but Dorothy talks on about her weight, her diet, her newest reducing plan. You think there must be something else that Dorothy can talk about but apparently there isn't.

Mrs. Bee's tongue buzzes with her troubles. To Mrs. Bee nobody else has troubles. That her listener has any troubles and has the good sense and the good taste not to talk about them, never occurs to Mrs. Bee. She wouldn't be able to understand such self-control and poise. So Mrs. Bee buzzes on, and the more she talks about her troubles the more they are magnified in her own mind and the more she belittles herself in the mind of her listener.

Similar to Mrs. Bee is Mrs. Dee as full of ailments as a medical book. She is the gloomy heroine of "Let me tell you about my operation". Mrs. Dee's theme song, written in a minor key, is "My doctor said", and she sings it lugubriously, repeating the chorus as many times as you will listen. The clinical thermometer is her dearest friend. The sad refugees trudging along the devastated roads of Europe have no sorrows compared to Mrs. Dee's tired feet after shopping or her headache after an evening concentrated on bridge. Dolorous Mrs. Dee hugs her ailments and her symptoms—they're the dearest things in life to her. She takes for granted that they are the dearest things in life to her listener.

Miss Kay is an expert in saying critical and destructive things about other people. The motif of her crest should be a hatchet rampant. Just mention anyone—her allegedly "dearest friend" or a mere acquaintance—and her sharp tongue begins its cutting remarks. Never an attempt to direct the conversation with a warm-hearted comment of appreciation of the person mentioned. No golden words from Miss Kay. Her words are leaden and, try as we may, we cannot lift them to the realm of kind and pleasant thoughts about other people. Miss Kay knows all the answers about how other people should lead their lives.

There are many other types of one-topic talkers. There is Carolyn who never comes to life until clothes or cosmetics are being discussed. There is Mrs. Donald, the doting mother whose children, we are supposed to understand from her unceasing talk about them, are the most beautiful, the most talented, the cleverest, the most glamorous in the whole wide world. There are the members of the Cult of the Great Misunderstood, who are miserably handicapped by their gloomy introspection and their self-pitying monologues.

You haven't only one topic of conversation on which you bear down unceasingly, have you? Or have you?

Formal Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—My daughter's wedding is to be informal. Should the wedding invitations be engraved, or should she write notes of invitation?

2.—If she writes the invitations herself, should she send announcements to those who were at the wedding?

S. F.

1.—Formal invitations (engraved) are sent only for a formal wedding. The kind of invitation sent indicates the type of wedding. For your daughter's informal wedding, notes of invitation are appropriate. You, the hostess of the occasion, may properly write the invitations or the notes may be written by your daughter.

2.—No. announcements are not sent to anyone who was invited to the wedding.

Courtesy Tip

When you are telling a story to a group of people, don't concentrate your look on only one person in the group. If the others in the group are interested, they should be included in your glance as you proceed with your story. If you think they won't be interested in the story that you are directing toward one person, then obviously your story shouldn't be told at this time.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

ADVICE

I have a letter from a woman who says her only son is marrying soon, and that his prospective wife knows absolutely nothing about life and its problems. She asks me to devote a column to all the problems a young couple faces today, as if addressed specifically to her son and his bride.

Well, I'm afraid that's too big an order for me. And I think that mother will be wise to be sparing in giving advice also.

The most acute problems that the young woman and her husband will be called upon to face are likely to be things I know nothing about. This is a new world, vastly different to my familiar, rather old-fashioned one, and probably to the mother's also.

Of course, there are certain age-old problems in relationships with which all of us elders are familiar—the give and take of family life you might call them, but as millions who have tried to solve them well know, there is no simple solution for them. Each married pair even if it is disposed to follow the advice of others, still has to learn to tread its way through the matrimonial maze on a basis of trial and error.

So, when it comes to giving a surefire formula for happiness to newly married couples, I'm afraid I'll have to pass. One thing I will venture, however: a proper diet has considerable to do with happiness.

We have all heard the old saying that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach and we have all laughed at it, perhaps, but there's a lot more truth than poetry in it.

In the last two decades science has done notable work in showing us how much particular foods do effect our temperaments as well as our health.

We truly dig our graves with our teeth. We also, to a large extent, influence our characters with them. Proper eating is the mainspring of all health. Seeing that her husband is properly fed is certainly a prime duty for a wife.

Fortunately for newlyweds for whom this is written by request of a mother, the most health-giving foods are usually the most inexpensive. Milk comes first on my list of important foods. The bride and her husband should use a quart or even two quarts a day. Next in importance are fruits and fruit juices, then leafy vegetables—lettuce, spinach, raw carrots, cabbage. Plenty of eggs must be in the diet list. All these come before meat and bread.

Walking Between the Raindrops

By HELEN FOLLETT

Be a rainy daisy. Just because the weather is bad, don't stick in the house. Misty-moisty air is a splendid tonic for the complexion. Women who live in foggy countries have beautiful creamy skins with good coloring and of fine texture. Those who live in dry climates suffer from scaling faces and do a lot of bawling about it.

Get out the old umbrella and prepare to clip off three miles; five are two miles better. Doesn't sound interesting, huh? That's the trouble. All you girls are looking for beauty magic that comes out of a cream jar. Cosmetics are all right, my children; we're for them. But they can't do for any one what is accomplished by good health habits.

Get Into Circulation

Walk with a springing step, erect carriage, high spirits. Toes straight ahead, hips tucked back, tummy tucked in, arms swinging easily. Take deep breaths. The purpose is to get moist and glowing.

The circulatory system will chase itself around. Muscles will be benefitted. Eyes will sparkle. Isn't the effort worth it? You bet it is.

Hair has a sympathetic nature. Anything wrong with the health and hair falls into a state of depression.

"Walk with springing step, erect carriage, high spirits."

The night before the shampoo, brush your tresses one hundred strokes. Trickle hot mineral oil along partings, wrap the head in a turkish towel that has been wrung out of hot water. This is a general reconditioning treatment, especially necessary if one has frequent permanent waves.

Dry Skin Yields to Good Care

Dry Skins sometimes stop having cutaneous fits when a change of soap is made. Complexions of that character are temperamental. The conditon is caused by sleepy sebaceous glands that aren't fulfilling the purpose for which they were intended. When functioning normally they spread upon the skin surface a thin film of oil. If the natural lubricant is missing, a state of desquama sets up, dead scales fluffing away faster than they should, leaving a harsh surface.

There's a way of deceiving a dry skin, not letting it realize that soap is being used. Begin with a cleansing by a cosmetic oil. Make several applications, removing them with tissues. Have a three minute massage with a heavy cream. Dip a soft wash cloth in warm soapy water, place over the face holding close with the hands. Repeat several times. Rinse with warm water, dry gently, use a foundation cosmetic to make the powder stick like a friend and a brother.

"The mirror makes a growth of light down on the cheeks appear heavier than it is."

More exercises out of doors, more butter on the bread, more cream in the coffee and plenty of drinking water will have a stimulating efect upon sebaceous glands.

If the skin is dry all over the body, add a little corn starch to the bathing water. After a gentle drying apply a bath of oil which will do the disappearing act in a jiffy.

Plainfield Is City For Day As Orangemen From District Celebrate 'Glorious Twelfth'

Colorful Parade of Many Lodges Witnessed by Largest Crowd to Gather in Eastern Ontario

MANY SPEAKERS

(By Staff Reporter)

Plainfield, July 13 (Special) — Plainfield, progressive village of South Hastings, became a city yesterday as Orangemen from all parts of the district swelled the hamlet's population to well over four thousand. Local committees had worked ceaselessly in preparation for the big event and their efforts were rewarded with one of the most successful Orange celebrations held in the province. At an early hour cars began streaming into the village and to the park where the event was to take place and by the noon hour little parking space was available. Under the auspices of the local lodge booths catering to the needs of the public in ice cream, hot dogs and soft drinks, though fully staffed with hustling helpers, seemed short handed. The large tent in which dinner was served, was packed during the dinner and supper hours.

Colourful Parade

About two o'clock the various visiting lodges gathered in a huge formation for the grand parade. All the features that add colour to an Orange parade were present, including prancing, high spirited horses, Highland pipe bands, artistically costumed ladies' units with some juvenile groups. Stirling Citizens' Band in white caps and scarlet tunics headed the spectacular walk along with Grand Marshal George McCullough of Foxboro Lodge. Brilliant in color was the fine display by the Trenton contingent, led by Highland pipers, was the L.O.L. 206. Then came the girls of Coronation Juvenile group, in scarlet and gold capes and pillbox hats, with the L.O.B.A. 604 making a colorful appearance as each member stepped forth carrying golden colored parasols.

Enthusiastic spectators lined the complete route of parade and gave each lodge of outstanding appearance a well deserved hand. Out across the bridge and west to the Tweed Highway the march proceeded and then back over the same route to the starting point. Characteristic drum and fife bands played at various places in the park throughout the afternoon as a fine program of speeches and sporting events was carried forward without interruption.

Many Lodges Parade

Marshalled by Bro. George McCullough on a spirited white horse and headed by the Stirling Citizens' Band, under the leadership of Maurice Bell, the colorful parade included the following lodges:— L.O.L. 242, Shannonville 240, Frankford; Frankford L.O.B.A.; L.O.L. 838, Moneymore; Woodville Lodge, No. 2443, of Prince Edward County; Prince Edward County L.O.B.A., 350; Belleville L.O.B.A. and L.O.L. No. 274; Wellington Lodge; Holloway Lodge, 251; Ebenezer Lodge, 974; Leinster Ontario Mohawk Lodge, 99; Allisonville Lodge, No. 175, Prince Edward County; Tyendinaga Lodge, No. 295; Trenton L.O.L., 206; Coronation Juvenile Lodge, 168, Trenton; Trenton L.O.B.A. No. 604; Foxboro L.O.L. No. 3; Cannifton Lodge, 2320; Point Anne L.O.L. 2599, and Sidney Lodge, No. 2386.

Other members of the order were present in large numbers from all parts of the two counties, Hastings and Prince Edward, and color was added to the procession by the appearance of mounted marshals on prancing horses, Kiltie bands and fife and drum units. A large crowd thoroughly enjoyed this part of the program.

The huge tent in which hundreds were fed was secured through J. Marchent, Peterboro, and was the same tent in which Their Majesties the King and Queen, dined when on their visit to Ottawa.

Following the procession, a program of speeches by some of the most prominent Orangemen of the district was carried on under the direction of County Master Miller Carl. The first speaker was Rev. Cooke who welcomed all those present on behalf of the local municipality. Bro. Murney Reynolds, Grand Master of the G.B.L. for Ontario East, was the next speaker and congratulated the local organization on the erection of their fine new hall and urged all citizens to display greater appreciation of the peace and freedom we of Canada enjoy.

Many Speakers

Dr. Welsh, speaking briefly, mentioned the gray days through which the British Empire was now passing and stated that never before had the need been so great for a definite display of loyalty to the flag. "There should be a general strengthening of Orangeism because of present day chaos and lodges should be strengthened by new members rather than fading into amalgamations. Britain, the founder of all constitutional government was the last rampart of defence of things righteous. She will stand firm and we shall win through," he declared.

A patriotic demonstration at this point in the program brought hearty response. Donald Scott of the R.C.A.F. was called to the platform and, as he held high a great Union Jack, all rose to sing God Save the King. Another surprise feature on the program was the introduction of Donald McGowan, Canadian Kid Kar Derby Champion. Don was given a great hand by the large crowd as he appeared in the uniform of the Stirling Band of which he is a member.

British Empire Thrives on Crisis

The main speaker of the afternoon was W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P., who delivered a fine address to the visiting Orangemen. He traced the history of Orangeism back to the year 1688, two years previous to the famous battle of the Boyne. He mentioned a hero of British history, the Duke of Wellington, as a true example of Orangemen of the past. "The British Empire seemed always to thrive on crisis. Today the entire world was in the midst of a crisis and the British Empire was standing alone in assuming responsibilities for the smaller nations of Europe. True British tradition and honour can never die," declared the speaker. British history is mottled with difficulties that have been met. William Pitt, a great statesman of the past had said: "I see nothing but ruin and decay on every hand." Lord Gray also looked upon the future of Britain as nearly hopeless in his day.

Lord Shaftsbury once stated: "Nothing saves the British Empire from shipwreck." But in spite of these predictions she stands firm. The speaker likened the British Empire in this vast struggle to the Biblical character, Gideon, who sought to raise an army in defence of his city. The Lord spake unto him stating that his numbers were too great and forty thousand left the ranks. After a further test only three hundred faithful men were left to withstand the onslaught of the enemy. "But by faith in God they were victorious. I feel," declared the speaker, "that God still wants a share in the glory of the victory and has taken from us our Allies to bring us to our knee in a display of real faith and with such faith and by the guidance of God we shall be victorious in the defence of righteousness," concluded Mr. Tummon.

Make Personal Sacrifices

Mr. G. A. Reid of Belleville addressed the gathering and urged the children and young people present to make personal sacrifice as their share in the war effort. "The government needs money and you can help by buying war stamps," he declared. Your dad might help you get more if you start buying them, and you will "be helping yourself in the days that are to follow the war." The speaker also urged the young people to welcome the war guests now coming to Canada in a way fitting their loyalty to England. They are our cousins, lets welcome them as such."

Rev. C. E. Beazer, Grand Chaplain of the order stated that the keynote of today's celebration is a great call for real patriotism on the part of every Canadian. He also predicted revolt in the lands of nazis and fascism because their system is based upon evil. "The British Empire on the other hand is steadfast in her defence of right and justice, and right shall prevail," declared the speaker. "Germany in her educational system has so sown the seeds of hate for everything British in the hearts of the German children that we must counteract by sowing the seeds of real patriotism and with God's help we shall conquer." Other speakers on the afternoon's program included County Master Brother Dempsey and Mr. W. C. Mikel.

Considered to be the two oldest members present were Brothers Jesse Lee, aged 96, of Coldbrook Lodge, an Orangeman of 75 years standing, and Bro. Brant of Mohawk Lodge No. 99 aged 82. The later, a member of the order for 65 years, had walked the entire route on parade and was loudly acclaimed as he was presented to the crowd.

An exhibition baseball game rounded out the fine program that was so thoroughly enjoyed by nearly five thousand people.

One of the three other soldiers, occupants of the car, was also treated for a slightly injured knee and face abrasions. A young boy who was a passenger in the Harris car, received slight cuts and a shaking up. Constable Clare Hayes of Tweed, and Constable W. Lavender of Marmora, investigated. There will be no charges laid.

McNAIR JUNIORS BREAK STREAK BY DEFEATING B. P'S.

Win Places Team One Game Away from Losing Team and Chance to Get Out of Cellar

Trenton, July 13—(Special)—The McNair Juniors broke their losing streak last night, when they defeated the Benedict Proctor Softballers 20 to 12. The win places the Juniors within one game of the Bendicts and give them their first chance of moving out of the cellar position.

Starting in the first inning the Juniors took the lead by scoring three runs on a walk and three singles, while the B. & P.'s were only able to collect two runs. Each team score two in the second and were blanked in the third.

The score was tied in the fourth with the B. & P.'s scoring five runs and the Juniors scoring four. The Benedicts moved into the lead for the first time in the fifth gaining an edge of one run but it was short lived as the Juniors came back scoring three in the seventh, three in the eighth and four in the ninth while the Benedicts were only able to score once in the seventh.

Free, on the mound for the Benedicts turned in the best performance, allowing 16 hits, and one walk while striking out four. Rosenplot, hurling for the Juniors, walked six and allowed 13 hits, striking but one.

White and Orser with three singles apiece were the most potent batters for the Juniors, while practically every one on the team collected at least one single. Wallis with three singles was the best batter for the Benedicts.

The lineups:

Juniors—Belear, Coe, Ingles, Anderson, White, Orser, Davis, Shensel and Rosenplot P.

Benedicts —Bernard, Wannamaker, Beale, Cooke, Benham, Read, Wallis, Parks, Free P.

All young ladies of Trenton are urged to render their services to the great cause which is so great a necessity during this war and are requested to attend the meeting of the Red Cross Society, to be held Monday night in the basement of the King Street United Church.

Huckleberries Prominent

Huckleberries made their first appearance on the Trenton Market this morning and were sold at 25 cents per berry box and 15 cents for a smaller box. Although there was a considerable quantity of these berries on the market they were quickly taken up.

Strawberries were not as plentiful as last week and were sold for ten cents a box straight. Gooseberries also brought the same price.

Large quantities of flowers were evident on the market and were sold for ten and fifteen cents a bunch.

Eggs remained the same as last week selling at 25 cents a dozen and 24 cents for mediums. Some vendors were asking 27 cents a dozen for Grade "A" selects. Chickens ranged in price from 80 cents to $1.10.

Large bunches of carrots, beets, radishes and lettuce were sold at five cents a bunch. Large new cabbages were also sold for five cents.

Police Blotter

Provincial Police today found a 1938 model Dodge sedan abandoned on what is commonly known as the institute lane, in the vicinity of the Ontario School for the Deaf. The vehicle, which was equipped with Ontario licence plates, number 96-W-85, was taken into the custody of the police for safe keeping.

Picton police reported the theft of a number of carpenter's tools last night. Valuable saws, hammers and other carpenter utinsels were among the loot taken.

Provincial Police reported the quietest Twelfth of July experienced in many years in this district. "Everything went off in a placid and serent manner at all of the walks in the county," Inspector Gardner stated today.

Only three transients sought the haven of the cell block for shelter at the police station last night.

Bob Feller Hurls One-Hitter In Defeating A's 1-0 to Keep Indians on Top of Loop

Used Burning Fast Ball and No Hit Registered Until Eighth Frame

STRIKES OUT 13

Only Three Games Played in Majors but in All Contests Hurlers Had Edge

By BILL WHITE
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

There just doesn't seem to be any substitute for speed.

Take the three games played in the major leagues yesterday and last night. In each one, a pitcher with a burning, blistering fast ball emerged the hero.

Bobby Feller, whose fast fall in a night game is harder to see than a black cat in a coal mine, came through with his fourteenth triumph of the season—a splendidly pitched one-hitter that blanked the Athletics, 1-0.

The Phils, Hugh Mulcahy, who, like Feller is a righthander, was slightly less sensational but almost as effective in scattering seven hits to beat the Pirates 6-3.

And the Cubs, Vern Olsen, a portsider with a nice touch of lightning in his Sunday delivery, had the Boston Bees hanging on the ropes as he mixed his high, hard one with his "sinker ball". They touched him for only five safeties in absorbing a 2-0 shellacking.

Feller's Performance the Best.

Of the three, Feller's performance was by far the finest. He lost his chance for his second no-hitter of the season when Dick (the villain) Siebert punched out a clean single in the eighth inning. Bobby, in keeping the Indians on top of the American League, walked only two batters while striking out thirteen.

Johnny Babich, Feller's foe, held Cleveland to six hits with a creditable performance. Ben Chapman and Lou Boudreau socked successive doubles in the third for the run that spelled victory.

The triumph increased the Indians' lead to one full game over the idle Detroit Tigers.

In the Phillie-Pirate game Art Mahan, did yeoman service in the winning cause with a single to right with the bases packed in the fifth inning.

Olsen had quite a day in winning his fifth big league game. He issued seven bases on balls to keep the Bees in the game, but tightened in the pinches and left twelve runners stranded on the bases.

All other games in both leagues were rained out.

New York, July 13. (CP)— Week's wash: Pittsburgh is in line for an N.B.A. lightweight title match between Sammy Angott and Paul Junior . . . . Buck Newsom licked a Washington sports writer for his 13th victory of the season. There isn't a more popular figure in Texas league than Dizzy Dean, just the same coaches, managers and players almost to a man doubt if he'll ever pitch under the big top again.

P.P.A., New York Post: "If the Postmaster-General purchases New York Yankees, and the first man up the first day of the Farley ownership, gets his base on balls, it will take no genius of a baseball writer to say 'Crosetti was franked,' or to say that a hick pitcher has a nice 'rural free delivery'."

Blister Prevents Feller From Chalking up Second No-Hit Game

Philadelphia, July 13—(AP)—A blister kept Cleveland's Bobby Feller from chalking up his second no-hit, no-run game of the season, says Rollie Hemsley, Feller's battery mate.

The 21-year-old Iowa farm boy turned in a 1-0, one-hit performance against the Athletics last night.

For seven innings the pride of Van Meter, Ia., mowed down the A's without a hit, only one man reaching first by getting a walk. Then Dick Siebert, first man up for the A's in the eighth, singled over second base.

"Siebert's a first-ball hitter," Hemsley declared. "If it wasn't for that blister we'd have curved him on the first pitch. But the blister gave Bob trouble when he tried to throw a hook so we gave Siebert a fast one and he hit it."

The blister developed on the fourth finger of Feller's right hand and resulted, Hemsley explained, from the force with which the hurler gripped the ball.

On opening day in Chicago April 16 Feller twirled a no-hitter against the White Sox, striking out eight and giving up five bases on balls.

MONTREAL TEAM WIN 8 IN ROW IN INT. LEAGUE

Royals Belt Over Buffalo Bisons With the Aid of Staller's Hitting

LEAFS DEFEATED

Rochester Registered Slight Gain by Defeating Toronto 8-2

By The Associated Press

The way Montreal Royals, International League farm club of the Brooklyn Dodgers, are going these days is enough to make some fans wonder if Brooklyn didn't send the wrong players back to the minors.

It already has been noted that the Royals are in the midst of a spurt that has carried them from the second division into third place within a week. They've won eight straight games. Meanwhile their parent Dodgers haven't been doing so well in the National League. George Stalle, who wasn't considered ready for the big time, was the big noise last night as the Royals belted over the Buffalo Bisons, 10-7 and knocked young Hal White off the hill for the first time since the youngster was advanced to the role of starting pitcher. Staller batted in five runs with a homer, triple and two singles.

Meanwhile the Jersey City Giants tumbled to fifth behind Baltimore when they dropped a 6-5 decision to the Orioles. It was their ninth loss in 10 games.

Rochester's Red Wings registered a slight gain in the first-place struggle when they trounced Toronto Leafs 8-2 while Newark's second-place Bears were splitting a doubleheader with Syracuse. Charley Brumbeloe and John Berly combined to hold Toronto to five hits while the Wings, paced by Ray Mueller's homer and triple, banged out 13.

Veteran Ted Kleinhans outpitched Tommy Reis to give Syracuse a 2-1 victory over Newark after the bears had taken the first game 5-4. Kleinhans gave five hits to four off Reis, but the only bear scoring was a 400-foot homer by Henry Majeski.

TENNIS

By Jack Mitchell
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, July 13.—(CP)—This is the year Canadians come back into their own in the Dominion Tennis Championships. And today is the day new champions are to be declared to break the almost complete domination of titles by United States players in recent years.

All but one of the Dominion's seven major crowns were won by Americans in the tourney at Windsor, Ontario, last season. This year only one United States netman is still in the running in the tourney finals today.

Remaining of the small contingent that crossed the war-time border to enter the meet is Walter D. River of El Paso, ex., who will play Montreal's R. N. Watt Jr., for the junior men's singles crown. Canadians will oppose Canadians in each of the other divisions—men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles and mixed doubles.

Favored in the singles division are Don McDiarmid of Ottawa, who meets Montreal's Lewis Duff for the title won last year by Morey Lewis of Texarkana, Ark., and Eleanor Young of Vancouver, who plays Jean Milne of the same city for the women's crown held by Elizabeth Blackman of Detroit.

Paired in the doubles, Duff and McDiarmid are slight underdogs in their match against Ross Wilson of Toronto and Phil Pearson of Montreal.

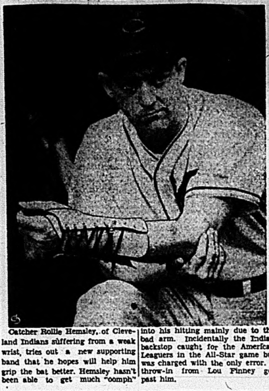
Miss Young, who teamed with Vancouver's Bill Pedlar last year to give Canadians their only title with a mixed doubles triumph, is paired with Roger Durivage this year and is favored to repeat in the division over the duo of Phil Pearson-Miss Milne. Teamed with Miss Milne, she also is favored for a women's double victory over Mrs. Rene Bolte-Francoise Lacasse of Montreal.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Rainbow! These may be seen in any season: what is required is a low sun to one's back and a shower of rain in front. If a person standing erect observes his shadow cast by the sun, then his shadow will point to the vertical line through the centre of the rainbow. The sun shines upon the whole curtain of rain, bu only the light from a rather narrow circular band is reflected back to the observers eyes. The red rays come from drops of the outer part of the circular band, and the blue from the inner drops. As the line from the sun through the observer's eyes will, if extended, go through the centre of the bow, it follows that the lower the sun, the more of the bow is visible.

ROLLICKING ROLLIE TIES UP HIS WRIST



Catcher Rollie Hemsley, of Cleveland Indians suffering from a weak wrist, tries out a new supporting band that he hopes will help him grip the bat better. Hemsley hasn't been able to get much "oomph" into his hitting mainly due to the bad arm. Incidentally the Indian backstop caught for the American Leaguers in the All-Star game but was charged with the only error. A throw-in from Lou Finney got past him.

SHANNONVILLE DEFEATS LATTA IN HASTINGS LOOP

Score is 15-5 and Puts Team on Practically Even Terms With Cannifton and Latta

CANNIFTON WINS

Defeats Foxboro 7-4 and Some Excitement Caused When Two Players Are Waved Out of Game

Three teams are bunched closely at the top of the South Hastings League today as the result of games played yesterday at Plainfield in conjunction with the Twelfth of July celebration and last night at Cannifton. Shannonville hopped on the league leading Latta nine yesterday to pound out an easy 15-5 victory and are now practically on even terms with Cannifton and Latta at the top of the heap. Cannifton shoved Foxboro a trifle further into the cellar when they scored a 7-4 triumph to win their fourth straight game and jump from the cellar position right into a tie for the leadership.

Foxboro hopped to an early lead at Cannifton last evening as the visitors blasted out a four run lead in the first inning by virtue of the sheer power of their bats and a little loose defensive play by the Cannifton nine. Thereafter, however, May who was hurling for the homesters pitched shutout ball to hold the Foxboro lads off the score sheet while his team mates went on in later innings to pull the game out of the fire. All told, the Foxboro lads collected five safeties off the deliveries of May who was tossing them up for the homesters, while Peacock, pitching for the visitors was nicked for seven bingles.

The folly of players arguing with the umpire over a judgment decision was very forcibly demonstrated in the fourth inning when two Cannifton players were waved out of the game by Umpire Jack Guay for objecting rather forcibly to a decision at the plate when a Cannifton player was called out. The Cannifton nine had loaded the bases and when Curley attempted to score on a passed ball which Cannifton fans said went into the crowd, Umpire Guay called him out as Peacock tagged him at the plate and the argument was on. The outcome of it all was that Empson and Curley were waved from the game.

Foxboro — Spencer, Peacock, V. Guay, Walt, N. Guay, Faulkner, Tummon, Jamieson, Priest.

Cannifton—Collins, L. Jarrell, E. Jarrell, Bleeckman, Sharpe, Empson, Gannon, Curley and May.

Foxboro	400 000—4	4
Cannifton	100 213—7	7

JOHNNIE BAWDEN HURLS 5-HITTER TO WIN GAME 4-0

Shell Oilers Cinch First Place in Defeating Cementmen at Coleman Flats

PITCHERS BATTLE

All Runs Scored by the Winners Were Result of Home-Run Clouts

Shell Oilers cinched first place in the Belleville Softball League last evening when behind the five-hit hurling of Johnnie Bawden, they made their hits count to score a 4-0 shutout over the Point Anne "Cementmen" at the Coleman Flats.

Home runs won the ball game for the Oilers with all four of their runs coming as the result of circuit clouts. After Ronsky had singled in the first inning, Sero lofted one over the head of the centre fielder, which went for the circuit, while in the seventh Amo dumped one in centre that got past the centre fielder with Ronsky getting a four-bagger in the same manner in the eighth.

With the exception of the first inning, when the Oilers collected three of their six hits, it was a pitchers battle all the way through with Luffman for the "Ox Pointers," and Bawden, for the winners being always one up on the batters. Luffman pitched every bit as good ball as his opponent but Bawden was afforded support which bordered on the sensational at times as his teammates came to his rescue to pull off what appeared to be almost impossible plays. Even at that the Oilers were lucky to shut the Point Anne lads out as lightning drives through the infield went right into their mitts.

Losers Held to Five Hits

Bawden, in pitching, a shutout, held the losers to five hits, one a triple by Gaulin, fanned five and walked two batters. Luffman on the other hand was nicked for six bingles, three of them homers, struck out seven and failed to issue a single base on balls.

Amo and Ronsky were strongest offensively, with Amo collecting a double and a homer as his effort, while Ronsky smashed out a single and a homer. Green and Gaulin were the only two Point Anne players to get more than one hit with Green getting a brace of singles and Gaulin a single and a triple. Bennett, in right for the losers, played well defensively, taking balls which appeared labelled for hits, while Gaulin played a bang-up game on first in the absence of their regular first sacker.

CORBINS DEFEAT 5 & 10 LASSIES

Seven-Inning Tilt Won by 37-13 Moves Team Into Second Place

Scoring almost at will the Corbin "Lockmakers" moved into second place in the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League as the result of an abbreviated seven innings 37 to 13 win over the "Five and Ten" lassies at the Collegiate grounds last evening. The game was terminated with the "lockmakers" mounting the score in the eighth, but darkness halted the proceedings.

Barney Smith's charges, smarting under a heavy reverse on Tuesday, unleashed a barrage of extra base hits to win without much oppositin, as they scored eight runs in the initial frame and scored in every subsequent inning, notching eleven in the fifth. Doc Doherty's tail-enders rallied to score four in the fourth and five in the seventh.

Betty Marsh with three home runs, a double and single, led the Corbin swatsmiths. Sylvia Reddick and Marg Little also hit for the circuit, while Eve Hill had seven hits in eight trips to bat of the winners. Ruth McClelland, Phyl Irwin and Dot Hales hit home runs for the losers. Every member of the Corbin nine clouted at least two safe blows as they pounded out 45 hits.

Five-and-Ten—Alderman c, Irwin p, McClelland ss, Weymark cf, Cretney rf, Barragar 1b, Hodges and Rollins 2b, Hales 1b, Randall 3b.

Corbins—Blake lf, Marsh 2b, Archer ss, Reddick 1b, Chambers cf, Little c, Anderson p, Hughes rf, Hill 3b.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

According to reports emanating from the gold fields of Northern Ontario, the Belleville contingent of baseball players are covering themselves with diamond glory. We have seen several exceedingly favourable newspaper reports reports regarding the baseball efforts of Ralph McCabe, Lefty Weeks, Harry Morgan and others, but the latest one concerns "Socksie" Gray and Cliff "Nugger" Bennett and was seen in a recent issue of the Sudbury Daily Star. "Socksie" has been moved into the infield by Manager "Pinkie" Clarke, the same "Pinkie" who played for the old Bell Telephone team against our Nationals here over a decade ago. Gray seems to be a fixture at second base for the Frood Mine team near Sudbury, while Bennett is back chasing flies in left field.

In a recent sports column comment in the Sudbury Daily Star the writer had this to say regarding the work of "Nugger" Bennett: "Bennett is only a young member of the Frood team, but he is making a great start of this season's campaign. Right now he is the year's most improved player as he is giving a polished performance of "shagging" in the outer gardens. His hitting was more potent last night, as he rifled two single base blows to the outfield. Providing Bennett continues to improve out there, the young Frood player will be a unanimous choice as the season's best among the young crop." Equally as glowing words were given by the same writer regarding the work of Gray. Belleville baseball players now starring in the wide open spaces of Northern Ontario all commenced their baseball careers in the junior ranks of ball in this city. Actually it is too bad that Belleville as a city is not more sport-minded and possess a better civic pride along the lines of recreational activities.

As for Bennett there is much to be said to his credit. Any boy who is sufficiently interested in playing baseball to hitch-hike from here to Kingston to practice with the Ponies, as Bennett did three times a week in the spring of 1938, is bound to succeed in his favoured and chosen sport. Bennett did hitch-hike to Kingston that spring and was rewarded for his effort by catching a berth with the Ponies. Now he is starring with Frood and he attained his lofty baseball prominence by downright hard work and pluck. And while on the subject of baseball we might add that Dr. Harold Welsh and Dr. Jack Empson will meet over the week-end to organize the Cannifton Club of the S.H.L., and seek an affilation in the intermediate "B" series of the O.B.A. Frankly we feel the Cannifton crowd has stole a march on the other clubs in the district, as the Quinte area is baseball hungry right now and the "Sluggers" will no doubt cash in on the picture.

Do you remember when Cleveland Indians stole a march on major-league clubs when they signed 17-year-old Bob Feller, Iowa high school pitcher, four years ago today. The youngster blazed a brilliant trail, tying Dizzy Dean's single game, strike-out record by fanning 17 Philadelphia batters in a game during his first season. He's still with the Indians.

Last week we received a request from the Belleville boys now enlisted in the 34th Battery for sports equipment, more especially softball bats, gloves, balls, etc. In an effort to facilitate the recreational periods of the local lads in khaki a benefit softball game will be played at Coleman Flats on Tuesday evening with the entire proceeds to go towards the purchase of softball equipment for the Belleville contingent with the 34th Battery. Harold Bawden's Shell "Oilers" are playing the strong Air Force boys in an exhibition softball game for the cause and "Bawdy" hopes to augment his team with several from the Juniors and Corbys. The "Flyers" have one of the strongest softball teams in this part of the province and the fans will be well rewarded for their attendance. As the game is being staged gratis and all proceeds will be given to the purchase of sports equipment for the Belleville boys in the 34th Battery the sports-loving public of the community is urged to do their bit when the coffee pot is passed around Tuesday.

While Johnnie Bawden was up to his old tricks of proving rather stingy with base hits, as he allowed Point Anne five scattered bingles, his "Oiler" team mates were smashing out circuit blows to beat the "cementmen" 4-0 last night. Nick Sero homered in the first to score Ronsky ahead of him, while Amo and Ronsky hit four baggers as the game progressed. "Ding" Luffman only gave up six hits in one of the best hurling duels of the season. In winning the "Oilers" cinched first place in the City League standing. All told it was as tidy a softball tussle as has been seen at the Flats this season and these two teams will supply plenty of competition for Corbys in the play-offs.

It was just a case of no competition for the Corbin "lockmakers" as they walloped the "Five and Ten" lassies 37-13 last night and such exhibitions are no asset to the pastime.

SPORT SPICE—See where Spider Armstrong, Toronto's gift to the featherweight boxing business, will get a shot at the world's title in his class on July 29th, which happens to be our birthday, so we hope both Armstrong and this corner can celebrate in the victory.......With Secretary Harry Knott at the helm, the Uptown Juniors beat Picton 6-5 in the Prince Edward County seat last night....Just to add comedy to the picture, 65-year-old Jim Jeffries says he'd like a crack at Jack Dempsey's attempted comeback, which is just about as logical as Dempsey thinking of climbing into the ring with "Devasting Joe" Louis, although we always did respect the Jack Dempsey of Toledo days...Looks bad for Skipper Leo Durocher when he has to start switching his line-up so early in the pennant drive. We hear several local softball boys have signed with the Argyll for home guard purposes, which ultimately may change the local softball picture. Here's off for a bass fishing week end.

"What is going to be the result of taking control of everything that goes over the radio—that is to say, using that one agency, an agency that sits down side by side with the government every day, and indeed, draws large sums of money from it?

"What is going to be the result? It just means that nothing will go over the radio which is not exactly colored to suit the administration.

"I am led to these remarks by the statement about the struggle to get accurate information to the people.

"Whenever you hear a statement like that, watch out.

"The struggle is just the opposite. Everything that goes over the radio in that way will be controlled and supervised and edited by the government.

"It is true that we have today a measure of censorship with strict regard to war news but there is a lot more censorship exercised than that, and when you control everything that is said over the radio and following that, edit the press, the liberties left are not very much worth preserving."

IN MEMORIAM

KECK — In memory of Ida Marriela Keck, who passed away on July 13, 1935, in her 16th. year.

When shades of night are falling,
And I am all alone,
There always comes a longing
If you could just come home.
So suddenly you were taken,
The blow was so hard to bear,
But still I know you're sleeping
In God's own loving care.

—Always remembered by Mother and Brother.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris~

INSTALMENT 6 ....

"Oh, Paul—"Joyce said faintly. She had always thought it would make a person feel quite old and responsible to be engaged. Oddly enough the first effect on her was to make her only a little girl again. Her mother's youngster, her father's giggling companion at circuses and movies only a few years ago—engaged!

"We'll get a lot of presents," he said youthfully. "We'll have a swell little place somewhere."

Joyce was thoughtful.

"A year from Christmas," she said with a sigh. "And this is March."

"But I'll be out here next summer!" I'm going to work harder than I ever worked in my life before. I told him so! You see, Joy," Paul went on earnestly, "I think it's up to us both to make good. I mean my father kind of relies on me to go into the firm, and they all depend on you out at the house. Lissy's all shot to pieces over what's-his-name, Dodo's half asleep all the time, Ben's no good at all! You're the greatest comfort your father and mother have, because you're just naturally wonderful, see? You just naturally are so darned—"Tears came into his eyes. "So darned good," he finished, grinning ashamedly.

Joyce's color swept up.

"Oh, no, I'm not!" she said a little thickly.

"Well, you are. You're the only one that stands by the old man," Paul went on in a rush of enthusiasm. "You and I both have got to first buckle down to—well, to what we've got to do! We're young, and we've always had it easy, and now we've got to show them that we've got something!"

"I'm not good, Paul," Joyce said very low.

"You!" he said and laughed.

"No, I'm not. I don't know," Joyce said thoughtfully.

"I don't know that I ever thought about being—good, really. Meeting you, Paul, having this happen, has made me—sort of wonder about it. It's made me want to be kind to every one—different.

"I think we're all being—rather mean to Dad," she recommenced in a silence. "It isn't his fault." Tears welled in her eyes.

"Don't you worry; you're the angel of that family!", Paul reassured her, laughing joyously and squeezing the hand that lay in his. "And that's what counts, you know," he added with tremendous gravity. "I mean, here we've found each other, you and I, and we're going to have everything our way, and it's up to us to—to show 'em! I've always been an awful bum"—

"Oh, Paul, you have not!"

"I say I have. I've had to have coaching pretty nearly every term, and twice I've flunked. But by George, I'm going to do it all differently now, Joyce! You watch me! Now listen," the boy went on in a suddenly businesslike voice. "We've got to plan. Monday—this is Monday, isn't it? My father wants me to go to Portland with him on Thursday; I've got an aunt there. But you'll hardly be fixed down at Merriwell anyway by then. The place is in pretty bad shape, isn't it?"

"We think so. We've none of us seen it; even Dad hasn't seen it. There's a caretaker on the place now but he won't stay. Mother think we'll only be there this summer, sort of camping, and that then something is sure to turn up. Ben's driving the girls and me down, and Dad's driving mother in the big car. The man who has bought the car lives in Hollister, and he's coming over for it sometime next week. The trunks go tonight.

She was speaking seriously, lifelessly.

"You may be crazy about it!" Paul said to her hearteningly.

"I don't exactly see us crazy about it," Joyce answered hesitantly. "We haven't any friends there; we'll be six miles from the village, even if it wasn't a very uninteresting village. And we'll be frightfully short of money. I suppose we can eat, but until something breaks we can't do much more. Mother says we used to spend every month more than we'll have every year now, and of course that—"Joyce's round eyes met his honestly, "can't go on," she ended.

"It doesn't have to go on. Ross'll probably come back for Lissy, you and I'll be married—why, shucks, a year and a half is no time at all!"

"I'm going to try to be terribly good," Joyce told him, her whole soul fired with new resolution. "I won't mind how hard it is, as long as I know I'm going to get out of it soon. It isn't going to matter to me whether there are many nice people there or not and it won't matter much to Dodo, because she really hates dancing and going around. Oh, we'll get through it, and Ben'll get a job, and everything'll straighten out. But it's only so queer—to have all the old silver pieces gone and the rugs and everything we've ever had!"

"Never mind" he said encouragingly. "It's only for a little while and you've got to meet things like that in life, you know. We'll get the best of 'em yet!"

"You're good, Paul," she said almost involuntarily. It was the boy's turn to flush and laugh uneasily.

"Sure I am," he said. "Come on, let's go. I said I'd have you back by six and I'm taking my stepmother to dinner at eight."

When Joyce got home her mother, flushed and inexpert, was in the last throes of serving dinner in the kitchen. Dodo hindering her as she went to and fro. The silver was gone now and they had to use kitchen cutlery.

"The eggs are done," Mrs. Ballard said in discouragement, "and those potatoes are hard as rocks! Take a towel, Joyce and pinch one and see if it's soft at all!"

Oven heat rushed into Joyce's face; she felt but a languid interest in dinner; her soul was singing in the clouds. Tea and music and violets and Paul; life was a dreamy sea of bliss and hope and love. the least of the magic! It made life a thrilling game to have a man love you and believe in you, and since hard fortune was inevitable it would be lightened by that simple rule of being good.

"How are the boots, Dad?" she asked him, meeting him as he came into the kitchen with an unwonted kiss.

"The—the boots, eh?" he repeated, bewildered. But she saw how his face brightened. "Well, they seem all right, Joyce," he said gratefully as they all sat down to overdone fried eggs and underdone baked potatoes. "Last night here, eh, Mommy?"

"It would seem so. "Mrs. Ballard agreed, closing her lips with the air of a person who never will voluntarily open them again.

"It you wouldn't be so cheerful about it, Dad!" Dodo said in a sort of wail. We'll always loved this place so, and it's our home, after all."

"Oh well, home is where the family is," he said buttering a second roll. "Any coffee there, Mommy? Yes, yes, yes," William Ballard went on musingly, stirring his cup. "I guess it'll be some time before I hear Kitty and Mike again; big radio sold with everything else, eh? We accumulate things in life and then lose 'em!"

Mrs. Ballard, stirring at the head of the kitchen table, was not sympathetic. She made quick nervous gestures with her hand, pushing in a hairpin, leaning over to set the salt in a better position.

"This is simply going native," she murmured. Joyce noticed that she was not eating.

"No dinner, Mother?"

"When you have to cook a dinner you don't want to eat it," Sarah Ballard said with a readiness that showed that she was waiting for the question.

"The transition is probably the worst of all this," Joyce said unexpectedly. "Once we really get settled at La Perdita we may love it! Lots of people move down to that part of the country for summer, and it's March now. Probably by autumn something will have changed; maybe Cousin Laura will die?—"

"You'd think it would occur to the old girl she can't win!" Ben said and Joyce laughed so heartily that he presently gave her a gratified glance.

"How old is she, Dad?" Joyce was resolutely keeping alive the languishing conversation.

"Let me see—" Her father was almost pathetically eager to get into a family talk; he had been excluded from everything but necessary queries of late. "She's my father's mother's cousin. My father would be—Cousin Laura's about eighty-two."

"She's extraordinary bright, Will," Mrs. Ballard said, taken unawares. She had not meant to add the name, nor turn to him as she did. She had not shown him so much friendliness for a week. Before she could withdraw it, Joyce and Ben were carrying on the conversation briskly.

"She's not bright enough to see her obvious duty, and do it," Joyce said. And as Ben laughed appreciatively she sent him a grin. It was unexpectedly exciting, this affair of being the household angel.

Presently she was busily, if incapably, washing dishes. The Ballard girls knew little of kitchen work; they burned their fingertips; streaked their arms with soot, dipped glasses in lukewarm greasy suds and wiped them hopelessly upon wet greasy towels.

"We'll have breakfast whenever we get downstairs tomorrow," Mrs. Ballard planned, "and we'll finish up our suitcase and get started. Dad said the paper tonight says occasional showers tomorrow; if it rains it'll be simply terrible! Well, we can't help it, we'll just have to take what comes."

When the family met in the kitchen for a demoralized last breakfast at nine o'clock the next morning, Joyce gathered that she was the only person in the household who had slept well. Perhaps her father had had a good night's rest; he had breakfast alone at eight and gone downtown; all the others said they had not slept at all.

Mrs. Ballard made coffee; Joyce busied herself with toast. The day was dark and at intervals rain showers fell steadily. "Sweet weather for driving!" Ben said.

They were all silent awhile, lost in their own thoughts, busy with breakfast. Presently it was time to go upstairs. Breakfast was over. They had really had their last meal at "Ninety-nine."

'KIWANIS KIDS' STILL ON TOP

Defeat Columbus Squad in 'No Kick' Loop at Queen Mary School Grounds

The champion "Kiwanis Kids" continued in their winning ways by taking the Columbus lads into camp to the tune of 14 to 11 in a scheduled Service Club softball game played at Queen Mary School grounds last evening.

Paced by Tebworth and the Follwell brothers, the league champion Kiwanis scored four runs in the second frame and scored runs in every subsequent frame. The Columbus nine failed to score with any degree of consistency until the fifth, when they scored five and added three in a ninth inning rally.

Jimmie Follwell, well known Canadian rugby football star, hurled for the "champs", while Joe McQuade tossed em up for the Columbus lads. Jack Boyle was the big bat wielder for the losers.

The line-ups—Kiwanis—Duffield, Tebworth, Ross, Baldwin, J. Follwell, Herb Fox, Greatrix, Ted Follwell and Frank Follwell.

Columbus—Lee, Diminie, J. McQuaide, Sheridan, Boyle, Murphy, B. McGuaide, Yome and Moher.

Score by innings:
Columbus —0 0 1 2 0 5 0 0 3—11 runs
Kiwanis —0 4 1 2 2 1 2 2 x—14 runs
Umpires: McQuade and Hammett.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and I said, G, ma, holey smokes, pop, I bet I'll never be disobedient again, not even for a second. O boy beleeve me I learned my lesson last night, I learned it in a dream. Holey smokes it was one of the fiercest dreams I ever had, I said.

Now isn't that intristing? ma said. His little subconscious conscience must of been working in his sleep just as truly as if he had been in full possession of all his faculties in real life. I've seen that happen in books and in plays but never under my own eyes before. Imagine, Willyum, being cured of disobedience in his sleep, isn't that wonderful, Willyum? she said, and pop said, If it's permanent it's miraculous. What was this stupendous dream, Benny? he said.

Well, I dreamed that everywhere I went somebody told me my mother was looking for me, and I thought good night I had to go another errand, I said. So I kept hiding in all kinds of places like in ash barrils and up trees, but people always kept finding me by poking sticks and things, even people I never saw before, and they all told me my mother was looking for me, so I had to go and find some place elts to hide, such as underneeth a newspaper stand or behind 2 fat ladies, and I didn't get home till it was dark and the moon was out, and here ma hadn't wanted me to go an errand at all, and all she wanted was to take me to the movies and she finally took Puds Simkins instead. Believe me that's the last time I'm going to be disobedient, I said.

Yee gods my hart is breaking, pop said, and ma said, O drink your milk for land sakes.

Wich I did.

'Bluebird' Author Is War Refugee At Hoboken, N.J.

Hoboken, N.J., July 13.—(AP)—Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian playwright who wrote the celebrated "Bluebird", arrived from Lisbon, Portugal, on the Greek liner Nea Hellas, Friday, a war refugee.

The 78-year-old writer wore a gray wig held down by a hairnet and clutched a French edition of "Gone With the Wind". He said that all he had left in the world was the little baggage with him.

He plans to stay with a friend in New York until the war is over and re-establish himself with a new play about the Roman Catholic church which he wrote in Portugal.

With him was his attractive blonde wife, 30 years his junior, whom he married 20 years ago.

She was carrying a cage with two bluebirds, and confided to the reporters that she had also brought along, unknown to her husband, two dogs. He doesn't like dogs.

Maeterlinck said that all his money had been in Belgian banks now in German hands, and that his books and papers were lost in Paris. He added that he was a noted enemy of the Germans, liable to immediate execution, because of his play "The Burgomaster of Stilemonde", which dealt with the German invasion of Belgium in the first Great War.

GOING PLACES means an all-purpose coat. A charming model is a loose casual coat of soft woolen in turquoise blue. Pleated fullness from the square yoke in back, which is outlined by tucking. Revers roll into tuxedo front. Big saddle pockets.

FIRST PRIZE for prints must go to an exquisite silk crepe with a print of lacy black butterflies on a shocking pink ground. The dress is on princess lines and has two black lace butterflies placed at one shoulder.

William Holden, featured with Bonita Granville in the season's No. 1 laugh and love hit, "Those Were the Days," one of two features at the Belle.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, July 13—(AP)— The stock market had one eye cocked on Chicago and the other on Europe today, and the net result was general speculative astigmatism.

The proceedings were among the slowest since 1918, transfers approximating 100,000 shares.

Packard shares got up a fraction on word the company's directors had finally approved a "general arrangement" for the production of 3,000 airplane engines for the United States and 6,000 for Britain.

Edging forward occasionally were Chrysler, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Boeing, United Aircraft, Homestake Mining, Standard Oil of N.J., U. S. Gypsum and Southern Railway.

Hesitant were U.S. Steel, Du Pont, Texas Corp., Anaconda, Kennecott, Johns-Manville, Woolworth and Eastman Kodak.

Canadian Pacific and Dome showed fractional gains as the other issues in the Canadian section were inactive. In the bond market Canada 4s were unchanged.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, July 13—(CP)—The Toronto stock market closed the week today with a moderately cheerful note. Prices were a little tighter all around and turnover of better than 50.000 shares for the two hour session was slightly larger than on the previous Saturday.

Prices were stronger on light volume in the golds. Bralorne firmed 15 cents to 7.83 for broken lots, Kerr-Addison gained 6 cents to 1.81 and prices were up a few cents for Hollinger, Little Long Lac, Pickle Crow, Moneta, Broulan and Chesterville, Wright-Hargreaves and Teck Hughes were off 5 cents.

In the senior base metal list Nickel and Smelters were down slightly while Noranda and Hudson Bay firmed fractions and Sherritt recorded a gain of a cent or two. Silvers were out of the picture.

Walkers Common at 32 1-4 was up 1 1-8. Ford A firmed 3-8 to 14 1-2.

Steels were practically unchanged and losses of about 1-4 point were chalked up for Loblaw A and Laura Secord.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, July 13 (CP)—Dressed weight was up 10 cents at London and prices were unchanged at Hull and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressed weight—London $11 plus transportation; Hull $11; Stratford $11 plus transportation.

Chatham later reported prices unchanged there at $11 dressed weight and $8 liveweight.

Toronto—Montreal Produce Markets

Toronto, July 13—Produce lines held steady yesterday in quiet trading on the local market. Butter was firmed in undertone, and the movement of grade A large eggs showed improvement over Thursday.

Offerings of Ontario butter were light. Demand was sufficient to keep them moving steadily. First-grade creamery solids were steady at 21½ cents. Trading was fair, and holders did not press for sales.

Eggs were quietly steady at a price range of 25½ cents to 26 cents for grade A large. Receipts were ample for the week's requirements. The strength evidenced at last week's close continued until the middle of this week, but with consumption apparently affected by the sharp advance in prices and the change to warmer weather, supplies of grade A eggs, especially A large, became somewhat in excess of the demand by mid-week. Export business consisted mostly of a clean-up on previous commitments.

The local poultry market has shown no improvement in general or near-by demand, with the tourist and vacation impetus still lacking, and the normal resort volume apparently quite low. Offerings of fowl have been considerably heavier.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, July 13—Produce market prices here yesterday as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture follow:

Butter—First grade creamery prints, jobbing prices, 23-23¼c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 22½-23c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized, current receipt price, 22c; Quebec No. 2, 21c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized, wholesale jobbing price, 22¾c; Quebec No. 2, 21½c. Receipts: 1662 boxes.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 27c; A-medium, 25c; B, 20c-21c; C 15c. Receipts: 3137 cases.

TRIPLE FUNERAL WILL BE HELD

Three Members of One Family Drowned Near Burwash to be Buried Together

Sudbury Ont., July 13.—(CP)—Three members of one family, a brother and two sisters, will be laid to rest at a triple funeral service in Park Lawn Cemetery, Sudbury, Monday. The three, victims in a tragic drowning accident on the Wahnapitae river, 20 miles south of Burwash are Lloyd Elizabeth, Owen and Margaret Owen. They drowned as their canoe presumably capsized while attempting to launch it at the foot of the Bar Rapids on the Wahnapitae River.

The body of Margaret was recovered Friday, ending a three-day search that was precipitated by members of the Burwash Industrial Farm Community when the battered canoe and outboard motor was found Tuesday night, washed up on shore. The body of Betty was found on Thursday and that of her 25-year-old brother the same evening. All came to the surface in the white water below the rapids, within a few hundred yards of where the beached boat was discovered.

Questionnaire Shows Increase in Production

The trend of the replies made by the farmers of Peterboro County to the questionnaire sent out by the department recently would indicate that there is not going to be an increase in hog production. The lack of demand for young pigs and for breeding stock is the same answer in another way.

Each time that the future of the hog market is uncertain the sales of breeding stock fall off and as a result many good animals that would make a valuable contribution to the improvement of the bacon industry are sold for market purposes. At the present it is reported that many young sows and boars representing the third and fourth generations of qualified stock are being sold for slaughter purposes for want of a better market.

This stock is reasonably priced and the breeders have their stock listed with the Provincial Live Stock Branch and any farmer interested in buying should call on the agriculture representative in his county or any member of the grading staff. A young bred sow represents a small investment today that may lay the formation for many generations of thrifty pigs of the right type.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of July 12, 1940, are as follows:

FULL COMPLEMENT

Hon. J. K. Gardiner became Minister of National War Services, with broad responsibilities over national registration, co-ordinating voluntary civilian activities, public information machinery and helping to enforce the Mobilization Act.

Hon. Angus L. MacDonald, former Premier of Nova Scotia, became Minister of National Defence for Naval Affairs. Air Minister C. G. Power was also sworn in as Associate Minister of National Defence.

Meighen Critical.

The ministry's drive to push through the act creating the National War Services Department involving the all-important national registration, was eased in the Commons by the comparatively co-operative attitude of opposition groups.

In the senate the measure snagged on Senator Arthur Meighen's demand that the administration reveal some detail of its plans for selecting men for the fighting forces after the six weeks preliminary training period has been completed.

The people want to know what was intended, it was said, and a measure of such tremendous importance to the nation should be clearly understood before being passed.

After three hours of cross-firing the senate finally approved the bill without amendment or dissenting voice.

History was made in that process, however, when Hon. J. G. Gardiner took a seat in the senate beside government leader Dandurand to explain the bill. Never before had a member of the commons occupied such a seat. In reply to a direct question from Senator John Haig (Con., Man.) Mr. Gardiner rose to speak at one point but the traditions of the upper chamber were upheld as order was called.

In both commons and senate, the practical working of the projected national registration was explained in detail, Mr. Gardiner outlining to the commons the way in which the nation's young men would be classified and called up for military training.

Over 16 Must Register

Everyone more than 16 years old must register in the national registration probably beginning August 19 and continuing for three or four days.

From the records so acquired, the registrations of all men to 21 to 45 years will be classified by court judges. They will be classified according to eligibility for immediate or postponed military training—but not necessarily for military service.

Single men will be considered immediately eligible. Married men and all men in essential occupations will be placed in the postponed list.

As the defence department is prepared to put men through the six-weeks' general training course, it will call for men. The registration authorities, having classified available men in age groups, will then call up sufficient year-classes to provide the required number.

Mr. Gardiner emphasized in the Commons that improper pressure to have a man's name placed on the postponed list would be fruitless under the system of having classifications made by superior court and district judges. There would be no exemptions except a few "limited by law," he said.

Classified as Single

He added that men who marry on and after Monday, July 15, will be classified as single.

The new Minister of War Services was praised from all sides for his vigor, aggressiveness and organizing ability by opposition spokesmen in the Commons, although Conservatives qualified their endorsation with the hope he would forsake his partisanship in his new, vital post.

E. G. Hansell (N.D., MacLeod) suggested that the newspapers give to the Minister of War Services a certain amount of advertising space.

This voluntary act by the papers would be a lead to the people, from which they would get the idea that things and services were being donated.

Canada must consider its own needs first regarding use of her man power, J. F. Pouliot (Lib., Temiscouata) submitted.

"I believe the Englishmen are good enough soldiers to defend their own country," he said. "We need men here, we need good men; we need men more than we need prisoners of war.

Considered As Ally.

"In these matters Canada should be considered first. England should be considered also, but as an ally whose interest we will be ready to look after once we have seen to the defence of our own country."

"If we defend England, we defend Canada," said R. W. Gladstone (Lib., Wellington South).

In the senate, Conservative Leader Meighen was especially critical of the proposals in the bill to coordinate public information facilities under the new ministry. He had never seen such a systematic effort to "see that the public didn't get the facts," he said, likening the prospects to something under Germany's Dr. Goebbels.

"I'd like to see more war activity and less propaganda," he said.

Members Praised

In reply Government Leader Raoul Dandurand praised members of the cabinet.

"Was any credit given the Prime Minister?" Senator Dandurand asked.

"No," he replied to his own question. "He was said to be the ideal Prime Minister in time of peace but not in war."

The Government was charged with activity on paper but not in field. Senator Dandurand wanted to say to the Conservative leader that "We are in daily contact with the War Office and chiefs of staff and are doing all that Canada could be asked to do."

Senator Meighen, the Government leader said, was a party man. The Prime Minister had picked Mr. Gardiner because he knew the former Saskatchewan Premier would carry on. Why should the leader of the Oppositon "throw stones" at Mr. Gardiner as a party man?

Senator Dandurand recalled a Conservative Government had been in power from 1914 to May 1917, but the Liberals had not assailed it and charged it was not a National Government.

"Did you ever hear that now aging beau brummell of the Gazette, John Bassett, ever clamoring for National Government then?

"Did we say all was crooked, all was bad with the Government? We even voted to extend their term another year."

Senator Dandurand said the Senate had just heard "sorrowful demonstration" of party politics.

Insists On Rights.

The last half-hour of the senate session was taken up with argument over technical errors in the way a routine bill providing salary for the new minister of national war services had been presented. Senator L. McMeans (Con., Manitoba), insisted in his rights and third reading of the bill had to be left over. As a result, the senate sits today at 11 a.m.

With the senate activities completed, Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff as deputy for the governor-general gave royal assent to five bills which had passed both Houses.

These were the Department of War Services Act, the act for relief of unemployment and agricultural distress, an act respecting the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company, an act amending the Agricultural Products Co-operative Marketing Act and an act amending the National Defence Act. The last act created the separate ministry for naval affairs and provided for an associate defence minister.

11 NAZI RAIDERS

The Air Ministry announced early today that 11 of the Nazi raiders had been blasted out of the skies in the last 24 hours, bringing the week's "bag" to 72 and the total shot down since the first daily widespread raids on England June 18 to 109. Two Royal Air Force planes were reported missing in the last phase of the war in the air.

At Least Ten Killed

At least ten persons were killed in Scotland during extensive raids yesterday, but no announcement was made concerning the casualties resulting from last night's attacks. The Air Ministry said that damage in southern England and Wales was slight and casualties apparently were few.

British authorities, summing up the results of daily German air raids during the past week, said that Nazi attempts to blockade Britain by air attacks on ports and shipping had so far failed.

Damage inflicted on shipping was described as small, while the Germans were estimated to have lost more than $4,000,000 worth of aircraft in the last seven days.

The Royal Air Force, meanwhile, continued its assaults on German munitions work, airdromes and other objectives. The Air Ministry announced last night the loss of three planes in these raids.

Call Next Class July 20

Under the new mobilization program one class of men is being registered each week. The next class will be called July 20 and another July 27.

A large number of the men being registered are immediately exempted from military service because they are employed in "reserved" occupations listed by the government as essential to the nation's war effort.

The reserved list includes men in more than 1,000 trades, including accountants, miners, steamroller drivers, watch adjusters, radio engineers, dock laborers and the like.

Most of the men being called up are expected to state their preference for service in the navy or the Royal Air Force. They probably will be disappointed, however, since these branches have long waiting lists, and the majority will likely be drafted to what the army itself calls the "P.B.I."—the "Poor Bloody Infantry."

Scheme Postponed

The Ministry of Information announced officially last night that the scheduled removal of British children to places of safety in the Dominions and the United States had been "postponed."

In explanation, the announcement said that "owing to the great demands now made upon the Admiralty there are not sufficient naval vessels available for convoy duty."

The ministry recalled the fate of the Arandora Star, a British prison ship, which was torpedoed by the Germans with the loss of more than 1,000 lives while taking German and Italian prisoners to Canada, and added:

"The government is unable to take the responsibility of sending shiploads of children away from the country without convoy."

LAVAL DESIGNATED

Although Petain had planned to set up his headquarters in German-occupied Versailles, a communique last night said the government would not be moved to the Paris region unless he "obtains all necessary guarantees assuring its complete independence."

Hostility Develops.

(A delayed dispatch from Paris, dated July 10, said hostility had developed there in press and political quarters to the reform of the constitution under Petain, who was termed "dictator of France" by the newspaper La France Au Travail.

("Persons responsible for the past seem hardly qualified to take care of our future," the popular newspaper Paris Soir declared.)

Heading the cabinet list with Laval are General Maxime Weygand, former allied generalissimo, as minister of national defence, and Adrien Marquet as minister of the interior, the posts they held in Petain's cabinet of the now dead republic. These three are expected to be Petain's principal advisers.

The other ministers:

Foreign affairs, Paul Baudoin, retained; finance, Yves Boutillier, retained; justice, Raphael Alibert, formerly undersecretary of state; youth and family, Jean Ybarnegaray; agriculture, Pierre Caziot; communications, Deputy Francois Pietri; colonies, Senator Henry Lemery; public instruction, Senator Emile Mireaux.

Laval's Career.

Laval, swarthy, perennial wearer of white ties, has swung from one side to the other in French politics since his election to the Chamber of Deputies in 1914.

The son of a Chateldon butcher, he entered politics as a Socialist, but in later years became an extreme rightist. He rose to the premiership in 1931, his government lasting a year.

In 1935 he again became premier and negotiated a rapprochement with Italy after many years of strained relations. Before Italy moved against Ethiopia, Laval advocated giving Premier Mussolini what he wanted. Laval opposed adoption of economic sanctions voted against Italy by the League of Nations during the Ethiopian war.

U. S. OF EUROPE SEEN BY LUDWIG

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 13 (AP)—Emil Ludwig, here to live and write history, predicts that out of the European chaos will emerge one great nation, the United States of Europe.

"The trend in Europe is unmistakable," said the refugee from Nazi Germany in an interview.

"There will be states united under one flag—a flag of their own making. Switzerland for years and years has had three races, three languages and three customs in one solidified nation. Why not the rest of Europe?

"Wilhelmina, Haakon and Christian are symbols of a dying age. And if King George of England forsakes his capital and moves to Canada, it means the breaking up of the Empire.

"Hitler will develop his own failures, and a revolution will throttle his progress and provide his successors."

GROUP PLANS TO NOMINATE WILLKIE ALSO AS DEMOCRAT

Chicago, July 13—(AP)—Headquarters were opened in a loop hotel today for an organization dedicated to nominating Wendell L. Willkie for President of the United States at the Democratic National Convention next week.

Explaining the purpose of those who would have the Republican Standard Bearer lead the Democratic party as well, Guy Warren of Corpus Christi, Texas, chairman of the organization said:

"The Nominate Willkie Democrats organization was formed to provide a medium for the people to express their desire for national unity and it is our profound belief that the delegates from all States will heed the wishes of the vast majority of the people of the party and obey their mandate for a unified nation."

Labor Minster Introduces Unemployment Insurance Bill

Act Will be Administered by Commission Appointed by Government

CONTRIBUTE TO FUND

Ottawa, July 13—(CP) —Labor Minister McLarty today gave notice of the introduction of the unemployment insurance bill in the House of Commons.

The resolution preceding introduction of the bill says:

"It is expedient to introduce a bill to enact a scheme of national unemployment insurance to be administered by a commission appointed by the Governor in Council, and to create an unemployment insurance fund from contributions from specific persons and from moneys provided by parliament, for the payment of insurance benefits, to be administered by the commission assisted by an advisory committee.

With provision also for the organization and maintenance of an employment service administered by the commission with the advice and assistance of a national employment committee.

Also with power to the Governor in Council to establish committees and boards subsidiary to the commission and enter into agreements with the governments of other countries for reciprocal arrangements relating to unemployment insurance.

With provision for the remuneration of the commissioners and the appointment and remuneration of such officers, clerks and employees as may be required for the due carrying out of the provisions of the act and for the costs of administration.

Follows Along 1935 Act

The resolution indicates the bill will follow to some extent along the lines of the Employment and Social Insurance Act passed in 1935 and held unconstitutional by the courts. As in that scheme the insurance fund will be raised partly by contributions from the government and partly by levies on certain persons, presumably employers and employees.

It will be administered by a commission as was proposed in the 1935 Act. The resolution makes no mention, however, of the broader subject of social insurance including old age and sickness benefits. The 1935 act authorized the commission created under it to study and work out a scheme for extending its operations into those fields.

The constitutional difficulties which brought about the failure of the 1935 act were overcome recently by the passage of an amendment to the British North America Act through the British parliament.

This amendment, requested by both Houses of the Canadian parliament vests jurisdiction over unemployment insurance in the parliament of Canada whereas the courts had held that under the act as it was prior to the amendment jurisdiction rested with the Provincial legislatures.

PARTY POLITICS TOO EVIDENT SAYS A. D. McRAE

Senate Sits on Saturday to Consider Bills Ready for Passing

QUITE CRITICAL

Ottawa, July 13 (CP)—"Party politics has been too much in evidence in this House this session," Senator A. D. McRae (Con. British Columbia) told the Senate today as it opened one of its rare Saturday sessions this morning.

On motion for third reading of the bill to provide $10,000 salary for the minister of the newly-established War Services Department, Mr. McRae begged leave of the Senate to make some remarks saying it was his last appearance this session.

Senator McRae said the charge of party favoritism was bound to arise no matter how careful the government was in organizing the war effort. Cabinet ministers had to make new appointments, set up new branches. Naturally they sought men whom they knew were capable, in whom they had confidence. These were men with whom they had associated, often party friends.

He said he had hoped to be able to contribute something to the prosecution of the war but the Senators received no information on which to make a contribution.

"I am going home very disappointed," said Senator McRae.

Business was rushed too much. The Senate had no time to consider important bills.

Need Only Quorum, Says Senator.

"So far as I am concerned I don't feel I have even earned my board here."

Senator McRae said he was going home to look after his business, convinced the senate needed only a quorum for the balance of the session. Members living in and near Ottawa could provide the quorum to pass what legislation remained.

Senator Dandurand said he never lost an opportunity to impress on other cabinet ministers the rights of the senate to sufficient time for consideration of important bills.

Senator McRae making reference to unemployment insurance doubted the wisdom of taking what he estimated would be $50,000,000 out of business for that purpose at the present time. He thought everyone was in favor of unemployment insurance it was a matter of the time and the amount.

Senator C. E. Tanner (Con., Nova Scotia) said he had no objection to the senate sitting on Saturday. He asked whether the bill under consideration was so important it had to be passed last night.

If it were not passed before Monday or Tuesday would the minister be without "a dollar in his pocket".

ROTHSCHILD BRINGS $1,000,000 IN GEMS

Bearing $1,000,000 worth of jewelry, Baron Edward Rothschild, head of the French branch of the famous banking family, and his wife, Baroness Germaine, are pictured going through customs at LaGuardia Field, New York, when they arrived from Europe via transatlantic clipper. With the 70-year-old banker, wealthiest refugee to arrive on American soil, and his wife, was their daughter Bethsabee. Baron Rothschild, uncle of Baron Louis Rothschild, who was arrested by the Nazis when Hitler rose to power in Germany, recalled that his last visit to this country was made in 1890. "I am an old man, but I am glad to be on American soil again," he said.

BALBO GIVEN A HERO'S FUNERAL

The flag-draped casket containing the remains of Marshal Italo Balbo, Italy's great air hero, is saluted by a guard of honor at the last rites for the bearded flier killed under mysterious circumstances. The Italian official account is that Balbo was shot down by a British plane in an air fight over North Africa. But the R.A.F. denies that their planes had anything to do with the Balbo death. Anyway, Balbo received a hero's funeral in Italy.

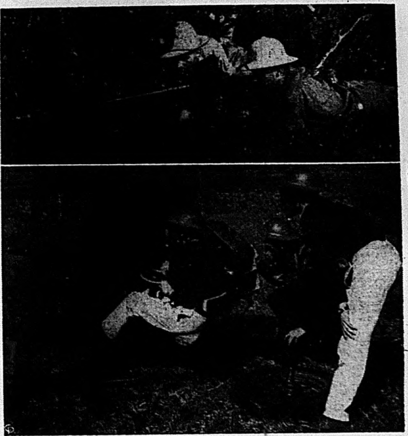
CRACK-UP ENDED FLIGHT TO CANADA

Pictured after their escapade ended in a field are Donald Blood, 14, LEFT, and Bernard Byrnes, 15, RIGHT, both of Massapequa, Long Island, who stole a small passenger plane from the airport at Nassau, L.I., and started out for Canada "to join the Royal Canadian Air Force." Neither of the lads had flown before, and the venture ended when they attempted to take off from a field where they had alighted to purchase additional fuel.

DESERT - TRAINED ARMY READY FOR IL DUCE IN NEAR EAST

Ready to meet and smash any Italian drive against Egypt or British possessions and protectorates in the Near East and Africa, is a tough and well-trained army composed to a large extent of New Zealand and Australian troops. They have been joined by French and Polish officers and men of the French Near East forces who refused to accept Germany's armistice terms. Activities of the British forces as they keep their desert strategy polished are illustrated. At TOP LEFT a Bren gun crew of New Zealanders is pictured in action sweeping the skies above the desert from a sand-bagged gun-pit. At RIGHT turbaned troops from British India race across the sands in a Bren gun carrier, one of the most useful of mechanized weapons over desert terrain. BELOW a field regiment of the Anzac artillery prepares gun positions and camp sites in the open desert.

CANADIAN RECRUITS GET SOME ANTI-TANK TRAINING



Anti-tank training is taking up the attention of these units of the Canadian army going through steady drills for service where and when the country needs them. At TOP soldiers of the Fort Garry Horse, a Winnipeg regiment, crouch behind their Boyes anti-tank rifle under a protective screen of trees and foliage. BELOW recruits of the 20th Battery, Lethbridge, R.C.A., are operating a two-pounder, anti-tank gun.

Capital Closeups

By ROSS MUNRO

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 13 (CP).—Vast powers given Hon. J. G. Gardiner as Minister of National War Services clearly show the far-reaching importance of the new phases of the war effort on the home front.

The military and industrial aspects of the war program are being handled by others but the new department covers a wide range of activity touching citizens hitherto outside the sphere of the fighting forces. On Parliament Hill it has been dubbed the department for the man-on-the-street and the average-man department.

There is a [illegible] chance Mr. Gardiner's successor as agriculture minister will be selected from among the present cabinet. He would thus know the inside story of most of the agricultural problems.

CAPITAL CHAFF—Air Minister Power has developed a tremendous pride in his Royal Canadian Air Force in the short time he has been chief of the department. . . . It is nothing stiffly formal either. . . . But a sincere admiration for the men in blue working with him on their hazardous jobs.

Major Alan Cockeram (Con., York South) won't be long in the Commons now. . . . He's going on service with his regiment, the fighting Toronto Irish, next week.

Cabinet changes have even affected J. P. Pouliot (Lib., Temiscouata) . . . The stormy French-Canadian member has been moved from his seat more than half way down the chamber to another near the front of the House—right under Speaker Glen's eye. . . . The change was necessary because of the re-arrangement of cabinet seats.

CORRIDOR CUFFNOTES — Hon. Colin Gibson was the dark horse of the cabinet shuffle . . in the Commons he has only been heard briefly.

Women have been coming into the House galleries these nights with ordinary handkerchiefs—sometimes men's—draped over their heads. . . . The reason: Rules of the House forbid women entering the chamber with head uncovered. . . . It doesn't apply to the press gallery for some vague reason . . . and the one woman member, Mrs. Evelyn Tufts of Halifax, exercises her journalistic prerogative on occasions.

Around town — Key man in the R.C.M.P. investigation of Communistic subversive elements is the famed Sergeant John Leopold. . . . He holds forth now at justice department headquarters. . . . He leads the anti-Red offensive with knowledge gained as an undercover member of the party for years. . . . He was the principal witness at the trial of Tim Buck and seven other Communists in Toronto in 1931 revealing that as "Comrade E. C. Esselwain" he was member of the Regina branch of the Canadian Labor Defence League for some months.

Air Battle in Mediterranean Indicated as Still in Progress as British Fleet Endeavors to Track Down and Put Out of Action Italy's Navy

By GUY RHOADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Britons braced themselves today for two years of defensive warfare to culminate in an offensive they hope will beat Germany and Italy and end the conflict.

With the vast resources of the great empire behind him, Prime Minister Churchill was able to predict in his radio address last night a change in the present defensive fight in 1942.

That is two winters away and it may be that the strain of living under blockade during those winters will weaken the axis powers to such an extent that they will be unable to carry on.

Mr. Churchill told his audience the nation's food reserves were at the highest peak they have ever reached. Ordinarily Britain does not carry any great reserves of food, but the government began accumulating them after the narrow escape from war at Munich in 1938 showed how uncertain life in Europe was going to be.

Large Reserves Set Up.

Large stores of cereals and whale oil—guarantees that bread and margarine would be available—were established. As time goes on and shipping space becomes more precious, as it probably will, the people's diets will have to be simplified, but there is no reason to believe anyone will suffer want.

Mr. Churchill recalled that the Royal Navy still commands the oceans "with over 1,000 armed ships under the white ensign patrolling the seas". As long as these ships maintain their superiority—and it is hardly conceivable that they could lose it—Britain need not fear for supplies.

Loud claims of spectacular air victories came from Rome, but British silence about the fight in the Mediterranean was taken to indicate it was still in progress as the British fleet seeks to track down and destroy the Italian navy.

Destruction of the Italian fleet would facilitate Britain's task enormously, removing a source of worry to shipping and making extremely difficult for Italy to maintain contact with its forces in Africa.

EXPECTED BACK THURSDAY

Toronto, July 15 —(CP)— Premier Mitchell Hepburn is not expected at Queens Park until Wednesday or Thursday of this week, according to a report received from his St. Thomas farm today.

Recuperating from an illness that required attention at a Battle Creek, Mich., sanitarium, the premier is reported to be in fairly good condition and expects to get back on the job then.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

"St. Swithin's day, if thou dost rain for forty days it will remain".

This is a fair sample of many sayings which virtually forecast the weather on accidental happenings. In this case the proverb says that if it rains on July 15th., it will continue for forty days. In England where this superstitious saying arose, the question was studied, they ued a period of 20 years record at Greenwich, and found that the greatest number of rainy days had taken place when the 15th was dry. However, if another 20 years had been studied a result agreeing with the proverb might have been found.

Wind-Borne Forest Fire Reported Under Control

Missoula, Mont., July 15 (AP).—Begrimed firefighters battled desperately today a new wind-borne forest blaze that swept out of Canada into northern Idaho, but elsewhere in four northwestern states major fires in mountain timberlands were reported under control.

While from 8,000 to 10,000 men sought to quench a myriad lightning-set blaze that sprang up along a 200-mile front stretching through three states, a stiff wind bore the new fire threat swiftly through a region leading into the Kaniksu Forest, in northern Idaho.

Foresters abandoned plans to release any of the 1,700 men at work in Kaniksu area.

Citizens Rally Buy War Stamps At Three Theatres

One Buys Three Hundred Dollars Worth from Theatres, Another Buys Fifteen Dollars Worth

Bellevillians are already rallying to the call of the empire in the effort of the motion picture industry of Canada to help "wih the war". Theatre owners report a splendid response already and a sellout of seats in all theatres is concerned.

One prominent Belleville man is purchasing one hundred dollars' worth of stamps from each of the three theatres in Belleville. One restaurant owner purchased $50.00 in stamps the other day. Varying amounts well over the prescribed 50 cents for two stamps which is the minimum to be exchanged for a free admission ticket, are finding their way to the box offices of the theatres.

Three crinkly new five dollar bills will change hands tonight at a local theatre box-office. In exchange, the owner of the bills will receive sixty War Savings Stamps. He will enter the theatre and enjoy the entertainment offered by the management.

But that is not the point. The gentlemen in question, who prefer to remain anonymous, are but doing their duty. "It is the least I can do" is probably their thought, and they are doing it with a free will.

It is not a question of being able to afford it. The subjects of this article are but a few of thousands of Canadians who will attend Canadian theatres tonight, and their acts are worthy of emulation.

Three hundred dollars is a lot of money, especially to a lot of people. But that fifty cents which buys Canadians two War Savings Stamps and which becomes their personal property, means as much to the empire's effort as do the large number of big contributions which will find their way into the coffers of the country's war chest.

Fifteen dollars, or fifty cents, will all help towards the culmination of the mighty task which confronts the Dominion and the Empire at the present time. Those in the high places, the exalted, and the humble and meek, can do much towards the winning of the war by their large or small contributions tonight.

Tales of Death Under Nazi Heel Recounted by Polish Refugees

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, July 15—(CP)— Tales of death under the Nazi heel in war-ravaged Poland came from the lips of Polish refugees who arrived here during the weekend with hundreds of travellers who have found a haven on Canadian shores.

The Poles, women and children, numbered only 36 in the flood of more than 1,000 persons who reached here from an eastern Canadian disembarkation point. But their stories, steeped in tragedy and told with saddened eyes, were dramatic.

The 36 were the first of 2,000 Poles expected to be settled in Canadian Polish homes under a refugee scheme being operated by their Consul General here, Dr. Tedeusz Brzecinski.

With them aboard the five lengthy trains which pulled into the city Saturday and Sunday were hundreds of repatriated Canadians and English haven-seekers, and a few score of French and Dutch refugees. Many continued on to friends and relatives in Ontario, Western Canada and the United States.

Toronto welcomed during the weekend almost 300 English children sent to Canada by their parents for the duration of the war. Most of the children were under 12 years of age.

"We had a very good crossing," 12-year-old Edward Bulman of Hereford said. "Almost no excitement—I understand our convoy sank a submarine with depth charges the second day out, but it was very quiet after that.")

FRENCH RECALL DAY IN YEAR 1789 BASTILLE TAKEN

Solemn Church Services Replace Usually Jubilant Celebration

RECONSTRUCTION BEGUN

Marshal Petain Moves to Complete Set Up of Totalitarian Regime

Vichy, July 15 —(AP)— France plunged anew into the task of reconstruction today after observing in tears the 151st anniversary of the freedom her people tasted when they stormed the Bastille fortress-prison, symbol of tyranny and oppression.

For Marshal Henri Petain, aged Chief of State of the new authoritarian government, however, there was little time for sorrowing.

Petain attended one of the solemn church services which yesterday replaced France's usually jubilant Bastille Day celebrations, placed a wreath on a monument to the nation's war dead and stood for a moment with bowed head while a tearful crowd watched in silence.

DOUBLE FATALITY, THREE DROWNINGS IN WEEKEND TOLL

Twelve Persons Die Violently in Ontario With Six Highway Deaths

3 CHILDREN KILLED

By The Canadian Press

At least 12 persons died violently in Ontario during the weekend. There were six highway deaths, including one double fatality, and three drownings. One man was shot and killed and another was gored to death by a bull. A train struck and killed a brakeman.

A head-on collision between the two automobiles on the highway near Port Colborne Saturday took two lives. Reg Herbert of Humberstone, Ont., driver of one of the cars, died shortly after the accident and Charles Prasek's injuries resulted in his death yesterday. Prasek, a native of Cleveland, O., who was driving the second car, suffered a fractured breast bone, crushed chest and a fractured arm. Herbert's neck was broken and his skull fractured.

Rumanian Government Requisitions 9,000 Oil Tank Cars

Bucharest, July 15—(AP)— The Russian government requisitioned today all the country's 9,000 tank cars, including many owned or leased by Britain and United States interests. The companies now must apply to the governor for cars, telling where they are shipping them.

Rumanian guards, at the same time, took British-chartered French ships up the Danube River to prevent any possible secret departures.

BOUGHT QUEEN'S GIFT

London, July 15 —(CP)— The United States ambassador, Joseph P. Kennedy, bought Queen Elizabeth's gift, a silver and gold tea service, for £300 (about $1,200) at a Red Cross benefit sale today.

Tonight's the Night! Pack the Movie Theatres In Aid of War Stamps Sale

Tonight's the night.

Every theatre in the city and district should be packed to the doors.

The entertainment will be absolutely free. All that is needed to secure admission is the purchase of two War Savings Stamps. The cost is negligible, a mere fifty cents and the stamps remain the property of the purchaser. Through the purchase of these stamps patrons will not only enjoy high class entertainment but aid materially in the country's war effort.

The Motion Picture Industry of Canada has made magnificent gesture in offering entertainment and the theatres of the country free gratis. It, like practically every other industry of the country, realizes the stark necessity of contributing to Canada's war chest at a time when the British Commonwealth of Nations stands with its back to the wall, the lone representative of civilization and freedom.

On The Home Front

The "boys over there" are doing their bit. We, on the Home Front, must and will stand behind them one hundred per cent. Dollars are to count in this war as they do in every war. And Canada, will, as in the past, rally once again to the support of the Empire and her gallant fighting forces, by digging down, and digging deeply so that the Hun menace can be swept from the earth for all time.

Now is the opportunity of Belleville and district to show their patriotism. Other cities have reported "sellouts" in their theatres. There is not the slightest shadow of a doubt, that Belleville will do likewise.

Do it now. Secure those two or more 25 cent War Savings Stamps as soon as possible, to avoid box-office last minute rushes. There will be galla entertainment, stage shows, and the cream of screen entertainment at the Capitol, Belle and McCarthy Theatres tonight. The shows start at eight p.m. and the admission is free. Present your two or more War Stamps and you will receive a ticket of admission. The War Stamps are your property and do not have to be surrendered at the theatre box offices.

Everybody's Going to Theatres

It is everyone's opportunity to contribute to Canada's war effort in a way that is easy. Father, mother, the family and Uncle Tom and Aunt Minnie will be there.

It should and will be a great Belleville family reunion. Make it such by attending the Belleville theatres tonight.

The movie interests gain nothing whatever from their splendid gesture. Patrons will get fine entertainment. Canada's war chest will, it is expected be swelled by one million dollars, and residents of the Dominion will have that satisfaction of knowing that once again they have answered the country's call. The response should be immense.

Secure those War Savings Stamps now, and attend your favorite local theatre tonight.

SOLDIER FACES MURDER CHARGE AT NIAGARA FALLS

Pte. W. E. Moulton Alleged to Have Shot Pte. Andrew Phillips at Perth Regiment Camp

TWO EYE-WITNESSES

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 15 —(CP)—Pte. William Moulton, 32, of Stratford, was charged with murder in connection with the slaying of Pte. Arthur Phillips, 28, of Carlingford, Ont., when he appeared before Magistrate J. B. Hopkins today. He was remanded a week.

Phillips was shot through the abdomen with a .303 calibre bullet at the Perth Regiment camp at Queen Victoria Park here yesterday.

Moulton appeared in court without counsel and under escort of Provost Sergeant William C. Ferguson of the Perth Regiment. He made no comment when the charge was read to him, but stood at attention. He was wearing the uniform of the regiment.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 15—(CP)—Pte. William E. Moulton, 32 Stratford, Ont., today faced a charge of murder following the death of Pte. Andrew Phillips, 28, of Carlingford, Ont., yesterday. Phillips was shot through the abdomen with a .303 calibre bullet.

The shooting occurred at the Perth Regiment camp at Queen Victoria Park here. No motive was assigned by Provincial Police.

Three of Phillips' friends donated blood, but the transfusions and an emergency operation failed to rally the victim and he died without regaining consciousness. He was to have been married later this summer to Miss Eileen M. Willows of Carlingford.

She arrived here during the weekend with her nine-year-old daughter and will remain in Ottawa till the end of the war.

DOUGLASHUFFMAN DROWNS IN BAY AT REDNERSVILLE

Four - Year - Old Playing With Sister Hides in Car Which Rolls Into Bay Off Dock

NO INQUEST ORDERED

Rednersville, July 15 (Special)—While playing at hide-and-seek with his little sister, Douglas Huffman, of Belleville, lost his life when he was plunged into the Bay of Quinte in an automobile that sank to the bottom taking its child-victim with it before the eyes of his mother and other relatives. Efforts of the Belleville Fire Department to revive the child by the inhalator proved futile.

He was the son of Pte. John Huffman, now serving with the C.A.S.F. overseas, and of Mrs. Isobel Huffman, 39 Cannifton Road, Belleville.

Mrs. Huffman, accompanied by her two children and a sister, Mrs. McCullough, Belleville, was taken to Rednersville by a relative, Herbert Mitchell, 286 Coleman St., in the latter's automobile. The elderly folk were engaged in fishing off the Rednersville dock, while the children were playing about. The motor car was parked some twenty feet from the edge of the dock and left in gear.

J. DOUCETTE, 30, HELD FOR MURDER

Police Allege Young Man Killed His Uncle and Seriously Injured His Wife After Quarrel

Charlottetown, July 15—(CP)—Jeramaih Doucette, 30, was held by city police Sunday on charges of murder and attempted murder after his uncle was found dead in an alleyway early yesterday and his wife was taken to hospital with serious wounds, believed by police to have been inflicted with a sharp instrument.

Police said Isidore Doucette, 50, the uncle, died from what appeared to be a knife wound near the heart. Coroner Dr. I. K Yeo has ordered an inquest for tonight.

Soon after police answered an alarm raised by neighbors, Isidore Doucette's body was found and Mrs Doucette was discovered in a state of collapse, suffering from arm and back wounds, in a house adjoining the alleyway.

Police said Mrs. Doucette told them her husband and his uncle came home together about 20 minutes before police were called. She said the uncle interfered when her husband began to abuse her, police reported.

British Authorities Announce They Will Insist on Right to Operate in Areas

London, July 15 (CP).—Authoritative circles said today that Great Britain has informed Japan that she might close the only route by which war supplies reach the Chinese Central Government for three months if Japan would use that time to seek a peace.

These circles said the United States, which has been sending supplies, has been kept informed of the offer to close the route—the Burma road—and thus far has made no objections. "Detailed comment" on the Anglo-Japanese negotiations have been sent to Britain by Washington, it is said.

These authoritative circles said that, although some critics might say Britain had let China down, the biggest assistance Britain could render China would be to beat Germany. Then Britain would be free to wield a stronger hand in the Far East, they said.

The situation was described authoritatively thus:—

1. German conquest of the Low Countries and defeat of the French army vastly impressed Japan and precipitated extreme pressure against Britain in the Far East.

2. Japan expressed unofficially a desire to finish the Chinese war quickly and said one thing prevent-

Once Best Army Stenographer Becomes President Of Cuba

Havana, July 15 (AP).—Fulgenio Batista, who once gained a narrow fame as the best stenographer in the Cuban army, appeared today to have won election as president of his country.

In voting yesterday, marked by scattered violence in which four persons were killed, Batista was credited unofficially with gaining a 3-2 or better, margin of victory over former president Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin.

The president-elect is scheduled to take office next Oct. 1 for a four-year term. He cannot succeed himself.

Cubans acknowledged that actually the 39-year-old peasant-born Batista could have taken over the presidency at any time since he led Cuba's classic "revolt of the six sergeants" Sept. 4, 1933.

Instead, he chose for more than five years to remain the head of Cuba's armed forces.

Only last December, Batista resigned from the army and dropped his title of colonel to become a candidate for the presidency—to find out how he stood with Cuba's 2,000,000 voters.

Batista was supported by seven political parties and Dr. Grau by three. Dr. Grau, a 58-year-old aristocrat and intellectual, had remained a candidate only at the personal request of Batista, who deemed him the best the opposition could offer.

Besides the death of four persons in election disorders, more than a score were wounded. Some voting booths were burned, some telephone wires cut and a bridge or two destroyed.

Official election returns will not be available for a day or two.

German Plane Losses in Attacks Over Britain Five to One of British, Churchill Declares in Broadcast

London, July 15—(CP)—Britain, "a great nation with a will power" the equal of Germany's, is ready for a long war and waiting for the day, even if it should not come until 1942, when she can take the offensive herself.

So Prime Minister Churchill informed the world last night in a "fight talk" picturing Britain as armed more powerfully on land, at sea and in the air than at any time in her history.

Mr. Churchill spoke of the strength of the British army, "1,500,000 men under arms," of the home guard, "more than 1,000,000" volunteers ready to destroy "parachutists, airborne invaders and any traitors that may be found in our midst," of the Royal Air Force and fighter command, which have "shot down more than five to one" of German planes attacking convoys and Britain herself, and finally of the Royal Navy, ready to protect any part of the empire "with over 1,000 armed ships under the white ensign patrolling the seas."

World's Tallest Man, Aged 22, 8 Ft. 9 1-2 Inches Tall, Dies

Suffered Foot Infection Fortnight Ago During Professional Appearance at Festival

NORMAL AT BIRTH

Manistee, Mich., July 15 (AP).—Robert Wadlow, the 22-year-old Alton, Ill., "giant" who was 8 feet 9½ inches tall and was believed the world' stallest man, died here early today from complications following a foot infection.

Wadlow, who was making a professional appearance as the "world's tallest man" at the National Forest Festival here, suffered an infection in his left ankle less than a fortnight ago.

The giant's condition grew steadily worse, and physicians gave him a blood transfusion yesterday and performed a minor operation on his foot last night. His temperature all of yesterday was reported as "never lower than 106".

Of Normal Size At Birth.

Under the management of his father, Harold F. Wadlow, Sr., the young man was sponsored on his appearance here by a shoe company.

A child of normal size at birth, Wadlow weightd 491 pounds while making his last public appearance. Medical men said his great height resulted from over-activity of the pituitary gland.

Wadlow suffered his injury July 4. A brace worn on his ankle chafed, and infection set in.

Father, mother, two sisters and two brothers all were of normal stature. Robert weighed 8½ pounds at birth, Feb. 22, 1918. By the time Robert reached young manhood the elder Wadlow's shoulders came only to his son's hips.

Wadlow was happiest when travelling.

His huge size was little handicap in his tours, which had extended over most sections of the country.

"I like to see everything," the youth once said.

Born Feb. 22, 1918, on a farm near Alton, Wadlow weighed nine pounds at birth. While he weighed 30 pounds when six months old, his unusual growth was not observed until he was a year old. At 18 months he weighed 62 pounds.

Wadlow spent his boyhood in Alton, Ill. Although he never participated in athletics in school he played basketball frequently at the Alton Y.M.C.A. Swimming, however, was his favorite sport.

He had reached the height of 8 feet 4 inches when he graduated from Alton High School in January, 1936. A good student, he was given a scholarship at Shurtleff College, Alton, and attended one year. He first was interested in a law career.

Clothes Always a Problem.

Clothes always were one of the youthful giant's biggest problems. All were made to order, even his pocket handkerchiefs and neckties. Nine yards of material were required to make an ordinary suit for him. His shoes, size 39, cost $86 a pair.

SKILLED TRADESMEN URGENTLY NEEDED

Urgent need for skilled tradesmen is reported by officials of the Employment Office here. Patternmakers, sheet-metal workers, masons, belt-sanders and many other phases of skilled labor need men immediately, it is reported. The call for these men has come from all parts of Ontario, as well as local industrial plants.

HEIFER HANGS SELF WHEN TIED TO FENCE

Shades of an old-time cattle round-up, such as are related between the covers of a dime novel magazine, with cowboys, bronchos and lariats involved, were enacted on the farm of Douglas Thompson, Foxboro, on Saturday when all the thrills of the real thing were experienced including the loss of one of the rounded-up cattle when operations went slightly off schedule.

Mr. Thompson had placed his yearling heifers in a pasture on his farm and had left them unattended until recently when it was found necessary to move them because of the lack of water. On Saturday, Mr. Thompson and his hired man "forked" their ponies with the intention of driving the yearling heifers to the barn for water but the cattle had become wild during their stay in the field and it was necessary to rope them before they could be rounded up.

Leaving the first heifer tied to the fence near barn, the men went after the balance of the herd, but upon arriving back at the building with the rest of the cattle it was found that the first yearling had jumped over the rails and had hung itself as it became tangled in the rope with which it had been tied.

FISHING GOOD AT WEST LAKE

The big fellows are biting in West Lake according to anglers returning from vacations and week end fishing trips. Two large pike weighing 12 and 14 pounds respectively were hauled from the lake last week, while two pickerel that tipped the scales at 7 1-4 and 8 1-4 pounds also fell to the lures of the Izaak Waltons.

One ardent fisherman, who wanted to be sure of his catch when a 7 1-2 pound pickerel swallowed the plug, took no chances. Hooking the big fellow a hundred feet or so off shore, he played the fish for a few minutes, then hopped out of the boat and towed the pickerel ashore.

Good catches of bass, some of them averaging nearly three pounds in weight were also reported taken from this body of water.

Gordon Highlander Working Way Home To Get in Scrap

It is a far cry from the azure skies of Alberta to the Hun-ridden blue of Scotland's heavens. But that fact will not deter fifty-nine-year-old William Kellas, a son of Aberdeen, veteran of the last Great War, and a member of the Gordon Highlanders of the famous 51st British Division, from attempting at least to reach his native shores and offer his services once again to the Empire.

The light of battle, dimmed by a quarter century of peace, blazed once again in the veteran's eyes on Sunday as he talked with newspapermen. He was en route to Montreal, via the broad highways, and had hitch-hiked his way from the western province. Today he once again "hit the road" with uplifted thumb, in an effort to reach the eastern city.

Greying hair dropped over a wrinkled forehead. But his eyes gleamed with a long forgotten fire, as he spoke of relatives killed and injured by Hun bombs. "They won't take me in the army in Canada, although I have offered my services in any capacity" he said, "so I am going to Montreal where I hope to join the crew of a cattle boat and get across to Scotland. They'll take me there, I am sure."

Kellas served with the Gordons in France for upwards of three years before he lost the drum of his left ear when a high explosive shell crashed into a dugout, where he and comrades were stationed. He wa sa member of Kitchener's famwas a member of Kitchener's famreached the scene of hostilities late in 1915. He took part in all the memorable battles that his regiment and division became justly famous for, and emerged unscathed until wounded at Mount St. Eloi.

He is unmarried and is a stonecutter by trade.

ELIZA JANE BLAKELY WILSON

In the passing of Mrs. Jane Wilson, whose death occurred at the home of her son in Trenton, Monday, July 8th, the front of Sidney has lost a most devoted Christian citizen and a loyal true friend.

Although suffering from a lingering illness, Mrs. Wilson, despite the sun and clouds of eighty-two years, was bright and happy and received the countless friends who came to see her with a welcome smile and a word of good cheer. In the year 1879 she was married to Francis West Wilson who pre-deceased her nine years ago. The first five years of their married life was spent in Hungerford township and in 1890 moved to Sidney township where they resided until the death of her husband.

Mrs. Wilson gave liberally of her gifts and talents in the service of her fellowmen, and it can be truly said of this quaint old fashioned mother that she strove at all times to faithfully carry out the duty of interpreting God to her children.

By her daily walk and conversation, her unselfish contribution to all activities pertaining to the church and Christian organizations, the powerful influences for good that radiated from her personal contacts,—set her apart as an extraordinary messenger of good will, "Well done, good and faithful servant", will be echoed from countless hearts in the completion of a life that was so fully consecrated in the cause of humanity.

Left to mourn her, are two sons and three daughters: Lewis of Trenton; J. Fred, Reeve of Sidney, Front of Sidney; Florence (Mrs. Arthur Bowler) Trenton; Olevia, Kingston General Hospital; Alice, Trenton. A son Edward, employed by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railways, was killed in a railway accident in 1917.

Trenton and District

Company Commanders Named For H. & P. E. County Regiment

Well Known Regiment Will Continue to Uphold Traditions of Famous Counties

TO TRAIN LOCALLY

Trenton, July 15.—(Special)—At home as well as overseas the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiments will continue to uphold the traditions of the famous regiment of the Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward. Word was recently received from Military District Headquarters at Kingston that the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has again been honoured by a call for further service.

The H. & P. E. Regiment was the only County Regiment in Ontario to be called for the First Division. A singular honour, that the boys have already justified overseas in both England and France. The H. & P.E. was one of the first Canadian units to come in contact with the Germans in France and has been mentioned in war dispatches on numerous occasions.

Under the new organization of Home Defense, the H. & P.E.R. had again been honored by the order that the regiment is to form a Second Battalion with headquarters at Madoc, under the command of Lt.-Col. B. C. Donnan. This second battalion will be on the non-permanent basis. This means that it will be organized much the same as the mother battalion was in the Militia, with the headquarters staff and company commanders on permanent. Other ranks will be enlisted for a period of thirty days training.

Training Locally

Part of the training will be done at camp but the greater part will be done locally, during parades held in the evenings so that the military dutes will not inerfere with the various occupations of the civilians.

The new organization will afford thousands of Canadians an opportunity to serve their country. Men who have been turned down by the Canadian Active Service Forces, for one reason or another and many others who are willing and ready to train for the Defence of Canada but who have not been in a position to drop their civil jobs. This spirit of willingness and determination is strong throughout the country, as has already been demonstrated. One company of the new battalion, which opened its lists last Monday night was literally swamped with recruits demanding admittance. The recruiting has to be discontinued until the Medical Officer could catch up with the necessary examinations. Recruits will be accepted for service in categories lower than those demanded by the C.A.S.F. All between the ages of 18 to 45 who are in medical catergories "A", "B", "C", will be accepted.

Capt. White as Adjutant

The battalion will be known as a decentralized unit the same as the mother regiment was before the war. The regimental headquarters, under Lt. Col. Donnan will be situated at Madoc, along with the Orderly Room under the charge of Captain George S. White, M.P. Five companies will be situated throughout the two counties. "A" Company will be stationed at Bancroft under the command of Major Harry Leroy Babcock, formerly a Lieutenant-Colonel of the Frontenac Regiment; "B" company will be at Madoc, with Captain Newell Broad M.C., M.M.; "C" Company will be at Picton, under Captain W. N. Grothler; "D" Company is to be stationed at Wellington, under Captain W. Davern, and Headquarters Company will be stationed at Trenton under the command of Major Angus Mowat The Officers Commanding and all the above mentioned officers saw active service in the Great War and all volunteered to go in any capacity with the First Battalion of the regiment last fall.

Recruiting will be in full swing this week for this battalion throughout the two counties. Enthusiasm has already been evinced and there can be no doubt, that the unit will live up to the honorable and successful record of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The honor of the new battalion rests on every man and woman in the sister counties.

First Rush Started

The first rush of the boating season in the Trenton harbor, started here over the weekend with a large number of boats and yachts passing up the Trent Canal System. Four large cruising yachts anchored in the harbor this morning and were inspected by a large number of boat enthusiasts.

The "Lady Baltimore," large yacht, owned by Leo Proctor of Trenton, anchored at the dock yesterday and was admired by a large number of townsmen. Three American boats were also anchored in the harbor this morning. They were the "Normandie II," Buffalo; "Lusca II," Buffalo and "Eva," Erie, Pennsylvania. The last three yachts were large luxurious lake boats.

Three Softball Games

Three softball games this week will create a great deal of interest among the sport fans. The Canadian Doughnuts fight it out with the McNair Juniors tonight in an important struggle for position. The Doughnuts need a win to move into second place and the McNairs need a win to close the gap between them and the third place team. On Wednesday night the R.C.A.F. softballers and the Canadian Doughnuts will play a benefit game to raise funds for the Red Cross Society, while on Thursday night the airforce boys will meet the Simpson's girls team from Toronto in an exhibition game in order to raise funds for the Women's auxiliary, attached to the R.C.A.F.

No Accidents Reported

Police report one of the quietest week-ends in many months over the week-end. In spite of the heavy traffic that passed through the town, not a single accident was reported. New parking lanes and traffic lines have been painted on the streets in non-glare yellow paint to aid with the traffic. The police are keeping close check on all violations of the parking by-law and a number were charged on Saturday.

Recruiting for the Second Battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment opened in the armouries this morning and was so heavy extra help had to be called in to assist in taking the history of the new recruits. Major Angus Mowat in charge of Headquarters Company, arrived here on his yacht from Picton on Saturday afternoon and immediately took over the armouries for the recruiting station.

TALES OF DEATH

Walks From Reich to Belgium.

From the wife of General Sosnkowski, second commander-in-chief of the Polish army in Britain, came the most striking of the refugee stories. Travel-worn and weary, she took out time in a small station waiting room at Montreal to tell of her escape from German-held Poland in March—by walking through the Reich to Belgium.

Madame Sosnkowski, telling of events last September said her husband, who had been fighting the Germans, was sent to meet the Russians, driving into the Polish rear. Then the general disappeared and Mde. Sosnkowski sent her four young children to the comparative safety of nearby Rumania. She herself remained in Warsaw to nurse the wounded Polish soldiers.

"It was hell, day in and day out," she said. "Hour after hour our hospital was bombed and machine-gunned. We were without food, without water, without heat. Operations were performed in the beds, on tables, and on the floors. In one day three wings of our hospital were bombed and burned."

Twice Arrested.

Twice after the fall of Warsaw she was arrested by the Gestapo, who sought information concerning the whereabouts of her husband. Each time she was released because of her value as a nurse.

Later, said Mde. Sosnkowski, the Germans began to shift the Polish populations to other centres. "We were herded like cattle into freight cars, sent on our way without food or water or heat in the midst of winter. On one such excursion I myself took from one car the bodies of seven young children who had frozen to death in bitter cold."

Police Blotter

An epidemic of automobile tire stealing was reported in Belleville Saturday night, two local motorists reported the theft of automobile tires In both incidents the tires were stolen from off parked cars.

Jack Goyer, 57 Front Street, parked his motor car at the south end of Front Street, a few blocks from his home. During his absence, however, sneak thieves removed the spare tire, tube and entire wheel.

Within a stone's throw of the first theft, Isaac Stephenson, Belleville parked his motor car on the market square. Upon his return shortly before midnight it was discovered that a spare tire and tube had been stolen from the rear of his car in an identical manner as employed in the first theft.

Mischievous children are believed responsible for the destruction of apple and fruit trees on the premises of R. H. Ketcheson, 31 Everett Street over the week end. Today Mr. Ketcheson reported to police that not only had his apple trees being stripped, but his garden trampled by the miscreants. Police are investigating.

HAILE SELASSIE STILL EMPEROR

Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia is still emperor of the land snatched by the Italians in one of those grabs for power and colonies which have been all too frequent. Italy twice offended, with Ethiopia and with Albania, in the latter instance starting the war on the one day of the year least expected, Good Friday. That event showed up the ruthlessness and callousness of the dictatorship in Italy.

But the Ethiopian conquest was one of the crimes against civilization which could not be forgiven. Fascism is envious and grasping and it was very clear even at that time that Hitler and Mussolini had a plan betwween them. The Ethiopian affair lowered the clouds on Europe as well as on Africa for it looked at times as if the fascists' aggression on the land of Emperor Haile Selassie might cause the spread of the flames to the rest of Europe. France and Italy were at daggers drawn at that time and Britain and Italy were on none too friendly relations.

The attack on that country, wholly unwarranted because the Ethiopians had not offended and because they were only armed as primitive men might be armed, not as dictators arm their soldiers, cast a gloom upon the world which has not yet lifted for it indicated in a general way what was to come. Steadily the free nations saw the two dictators drawing together. Even the outrage on Italy's ally, Poland, could not restrain what has been called the jackal instinct in the fascicts to hunt along with the Hun in order to gain some loot. When and even before Italy invaded Ethiopia, she was on the path that the fascists had picked for her to pursue.

Today that path is not too rosy. Italy has taken a desperate plunge to grab something from France and finds herself obliged to fight with Britain. Britain will fight the fascists to the blow that will put Italy out of action, for Italy is vulnerable in a marked degree and only the aggression of the fascist group would pick such a fate as waits in store for that country as a belligerent.

The Lion of Judah, the King of Ethiopia, has a defender. Britain's soldiers are co-operating with the tribesmen of that country in beginning the process of loosing the Italian grip from that country so as to restore Ethiopia to its distinction as a free land. Fascists' boastfulness over their empire, stolen from the Ethiopians,, is something not to be proud of. To it a little later Italy added Albania in another insult to the principle of liberty.

To this pass had Mussolini and his fascists brought his country.

Retribution she will pay for what she has done in these two campaigns and for what she is trying to do in the present struggle.

FOURTH REPUBLIC OF FRANCE WILL ARISE

Sunday was Bastille Day in France and the anniversary which Frenchmen have for generations observed as the birthday of liberty was marked in sorrow. Just how the French people have been taking the calamity which has come upon them through the debacle in the 'Battle of France' is not told directly as the Hun censors everything and regulates everything, but the thought and the spirit of the people of France can be imagined. One thing is certain, not all the strength of Hitler's tanks and the battering ram with which he attacked the French can quell and invade the inner sanctuary of the heart of the French people.

Never in the 151 years since the Bastille fell, that event which marked the uprooting of tyranny, has France been so shackled. so tyrannized over as she is now since Hitler came. The story of the French Revolution is recalled as one thinks of the Bastille, where men were kept for years without being brought to trial or being allowed communication with the outside world. The French Revolution has indeed been associated in history and story with atrocities and the world can tremble and shiver today as it thinks of what nazism has done in France, in Belgium, in The Netherlands, in Norway, in Denmark, in Poland, and in Czecho-Slovakia. Never was so widespread a curse fallen upon the world as has fallen upon these nations in the years 1939 and 1940 because of German nazism and aggression.

When one thinks of the myriads of men, women and children, who are wanderers in desolate lands through the coming of the Hun, who is armed to the teeth against all mankind, the unknown tens and hundreds of thousands who are suffering and who have died through Germany's aggression, one must be thankful that the fire of liberty still burns in Britain, where it remains the light that will herald the dawn of a nazi-less and fascist-less world where order and decency prevail, not a world of the jungle where nazi and fascist grab and terrify.

The words of the government set up at Vichy which has gone totalitarian, sound hollow as they use the words "French" and "France." Britain does not recognize this government.

The French people will have long memories. They will remember their faithful ally Britain, they will see in her the hope of ultimate restoration of their liberty.

It is with bitterness that they know that the Third Republic has gone and that the motto of the French, "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity," has gone. But it will be restored.

The Germans have warned the French nation that the conversion of her rulers to totalitarianism will not save France from harsh settlement. Yet while the nation lies prostrate before the Hun, with the government making a semblance of liberty, the people at heart will not be crushed and they will create a Fourth Republic, through the determination of Britain to fight Hitler until Hitler and Hitlerism fall and Germany sees the error of her ways and is punished for maltreating the nations of the earth as slaves to do the bidding of the Huns.

It is with a deep sense of sorrow the people of the free nations of the world who do not know the blight and smear which the aggressor leaves feel with France and pray for her revival. They sorrow in her people's sorrow at the event which has come to pass. Britain, valiant ally as she has been, will go on fighting as if France was at her side and the spirit and material resources of Britain with the freedom-loving spirit of the French will go on side by side to the victory.

MILITARY BANDS, MARTIAL MUSIC

The bands and the music which were so popular and which cheered the hearts of the people in the last great conflict are to be revived, says word from England.

Martial music stirs the soul of individual and nation. Today with nations at war in a titanic struggle there has been less stressing of the value of the bands and the band music in maintaining the morale of the troops and the people.

Now it begins to look as if military bands are to be revived and lend their inspiration to the war effort of the Motherland and the Empire.

Such anthems as British patriotic songs or the music of "Land of Hope and Glory" and countless numbers of regimental marches cannot fail to inspire all classes from soldiers to the worker on war effort and to the citizen who produces the essentials including food and munitions and those who keep the wheels of the nation moving.

Aerial Torpedoes

(The New York Times)

We first heard of aerial torpedoes during the last World War. Their strongest advocate was Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske of our Navy. Nobody paid much attention to him, probably for the reason that capital ships were not then adequately protected by armored decks. The experiments which both the British and American Navies made in trying unsuccessfully to destroy obsolete battleships by bombs dropped from airplanes must have stimulated professional thinking. In the present conflict not a single battleship has been sunk by bombs. Evidently the British were quick to learn the lesson.

Whether it is launched from a submarine, destroyer or airplane, a torpedo is always a little self-propelled vessel carrying a heavy cargo of high explosive. Its course is controlled by a gyroscope, a sort of spinning top which resists forces that tend to divert it from its plane of rotation. Once the gyroscope is set the torpedo keeps unswervingly on its course. No matter what the angle may be at which it strikes the water the torpedo is guided unfailingly by its gyroscope. Torpedoes are far more complicated and expensive devices than bombs, but if battleships are ever to be sunk from the air it must be by their means. Belated praise is due Rear Admiral Fiske for having seen farther into the future than did any of his contemporaries.

Parking for Tourists

Just now there is special need to hold out every possible inducement for tourists to visit us. There is one thing, above all others, that will attract these visitors and bring them back. That is courteous and considerate treatment.

In this connection, Mr. Douglas R. Oliver, Director of Publicity for the Province of Ontario, threw out a valuable suggestion in his address at Leamington this week. There should not, he said, be too strict an enforcement of parking regulations against tourist cars.

That is a point on which there can be little argument. But, the idea might go further. Why should not each city and town set aside, in its downtown shopping district, certain parking spaces reserved exclusively for tourists' cars? These could take the form of well-marked spaces on the streets, or conveniently placed parking lots open free of charge to visiting motorists.

It is a matter which the various organizations interested in the tourist traffic might well take up with local police officials. Such a move would please our visitors and word of it noised abroad would bring much favorable publicity to the community. —Windsor Daily Star.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

An Open Letter to Senator Pittman

New York, July 15 — My dear Senator Pittman.:

There are a hundred thousand children waiting on the besieged little island of Great Britain to be evacuated to the United States, here to stay for the duration of the war. There are many times the necessary number of homes ready to receive these children, here in America. But the moving of a hundred thousand children from a dangerous place to a safe place seems to be beyond the competency of the "world's greatest democracy." Is it really?

The British say that they have ships to send them in but that they cannot afford convoys. They dare not send them without convoys because Great Britain's ships are likely to be sunk otherwise by enemy submarines. They cannot use the convoys because they are needed to protect other ships, ships carrying food for the forty-odd millions of people on the islands and carrying raw materials for their factories and munitions with which to defend themselves. It is reasonable that they cannot afford to convoy children. The convoys are needed to protect all other inhabitants of the islands from starvation and defeat.

Humanitarian Gesture

But these children, Senator, could be brought here without any convoys at all, provided they were carried in our ships, which are neutral. They can be brought, provided we would send ships for them — ships which would carry no contraband cargoes and would simply transport the children from Great Britain to these shores.

Our ships, at present, are not allowed to go into war zones. That provision is in the Neutrality Act. But this provision of the Neutrality Act was passed in order to prevent our ships from being sunk by German submarines, thus involving us in difficulties with the German Government.

The transportation of a hundred thousand children would not involve us in difficulties with the German Government. It would be a purely humanitarian gesture. If the United States made it perfectly clear to the German Government that our ships were entering the war zones for this purpose and this purpose alone; if the ships carrying the children flew the Red Cross flag as well as our own; if the dates of their departure from each point were thoroughly publicized, it is unthinkable that the German Government or any other Government would attack those ships.

All United on Point

Mr. Senator, the people of this country are anxious to do something, to do something fine, big and generous, that will register for ourselves and the world that the idea of respect for humanity, which seems almost dead on this earth, is still alive in America.

Respect for humanity is what this country is all about, Mr. Senator, as you very well know. If the time ever comes when we ourselves begin to doubt whether we really feel much respect for humanity, for the simple right of human beings to live, a worse disaster will have overcome us than any we can yet foresee. This desire to save at least a few of Europe's beleaguered children is very American. That is why the response to the suggestion has been so spontaneous, so enthusiastic. Among our peoplee there are many reactions to this war and varying policies regarding it, but this is one thing on which we can all unite: we do not want any children to perish that we can save.

Must Use Resources

Mr. Senator, in a time when it is terribly difficult for any Government, and terribly difficult for our Government, to know exactly what is the right thing to do, this thing is here at hand, and its solution is not difficult; it is completely simple. There is no problem of feeding these children. The Government will not have to do it; ordinary individuals will do it. Enough food is wasted in this country every day to feed all the children of Great Britain. Also, our Government is considering buying up the surpluses of South America. What are we going to do with them? Why not use them to feed children, and help them to live, to make, let us hope, a better world than your generation and mine have managed to achieve?

Mr. Senator, if people have resources and do not use them for mankind sooner or later they will lose them. There is an immediate connection between the general interest of the world at large and the immediate interests of the specific nation; the interest of the specific nation and that of the last individual living in it. People say, "Perhaps these children will never be able to return." Then, Senator, we shall have added and encouraged the first rational immigration policy that this country has had for years. We shall have brought to this land children, children who already speak our language, who are young enough to go to our public schools and learn American principles, children who can be absorbed into our life in their own generation, and new citizens who will have been brought here out of the instincts of love.

Not So Difficult

Mr. Senator, in caring for these children, we may also learn something about caring for the children of Americans who are already here. People act only when an emergency confronts them, and they act most quickly and naturally when it is an emergency for which they can see the solution. There is an emergency, and we can see a solution. This solution, however, will set organization and effort in motion which will hardly stop when the emergency is over. Homes and farms schools and empty mansions will find that they can open or extend their walls a bit. Once extended, they will stay extended. You know that every generous impulse put into use becomes accustomed to being used.

In the little town of Middlebury, Vt., I overheard just a snatch of conversation the other day. A man was crossing a lawn, after a meeting in which we had talked about this problem. And I overheard him to say: "I've always wanted to finish that attic room, and now with these refugee children" —

That's all I overheard, but if that small-town citizen is willing to finish up his attic room for a child, won't you, Senator, let him take that child? Won't you push for arrangements whereby we can send for that child? And won't you do it immediately?

Take care of the transportation, Mr. Senator, and we will take care of the rest. It's not so difficult. Our ships have carried the materials for munitions to Japan. Let them do something now that represents American goodwill.

A Garden Of Weeds

(From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

Has it ever occurred to amateur toilers with spade and hoe that they are trying to raise the wrong things in vegetables and flowers; that instead of rooting out weeds under the Summer sun, gardeners should cultivate weeds for their beauty, their usefulness around the home, their commercial value? We have been reading Just Weeds, by Dr. E. R. Spencer of McKendree College, and though this botanist does not go that far, he leaves the garden gate ajar for just such a conclusion.

First of all, what flowers can match the names of the weeds Lady-at-the-gate, snow-on-the-mountain, flower-of-an-hour, nimble Will, Bouncing Bet, lady's nightcap, blue vervain, chicory, milfoil, Queen Anne's lace — poets must have done most of the naming. Others have names less artistic, but names which should distinguish any garden when identified with neat rows of growing green— peasant's cloak, devil's grip, shoofly, dog's tooth, waxball, fleabane, pickpocket, red shanks, inkberry, bird seed, sheep sorrel, old witch and poor Joe.

But the names are the least of it. Tall red top, fragrant and oriental in the evening air, squirrel tail, swaying and bowing, masses of blue spiderwort, are graceful in garden or vase. Shepherd's purse, pokeweed and many another make pot-herb greens. Yellow nut sedge, or ground almond, has a delicious tuber, as Italians know. Spicy horse mint relieves colic; yellow dock yields a good dentifrice, and dandelion roots are so valuable that the United States imports 100,000 pounds annually for tonics and liver medicines.

Now that home handicrafts have come back, a patch of yellow foxtail is just the thing for domestic rope-making, while a few rows of broom sedge will keep the housewife in new brooms. Crab grass, horse weed and cocklebur are the best of fertilizers, and lamb's quarter is tops as an indicator of good soil.

This is a time which belongs to the innovators and the bold. Who'll set a new fashion with a novel, attractive, financially rewarding garden of lovely weeds, kept scrupulously clean of stray zinnias and eggplant that don't want to grow anyway?

EXIT CONFETTI

(Manchester Guardian)

Many clergy and others will rejoice when, at the end of this month, the ban on confetti falls, and they will hope that it will not be only for the duration of the war.

It might not be easy to discover who first imported into England and associated with marriage the throwing of confetti, which was part of the carnival license in Italy and elsewhere, but the habit has reached great proportions in spite of numerous protests. It is not likely that any of the substitutes will remain either. It would be positively criminal to throw rice at a wedding nowadays, and presumably the artificial "rose leaves" which are sometimes substituted for confetti will disappear also.

There will remain only the conventional slipper, which can hardly be regarded as waste, since it is generally picked up again. But churchyards and pavements will be saved from unpleasant litter and brides and bridegrooms will be spared discomfort.

SILENCES REMEMBER

When the gulls are screaming,
  When the sea runs high,
I am spent with hearing,
  Now a lonesome cry.
Now the breakers throbbing
  Miles along the beach—
Sounds are loud, denying
  What the heart would reach.

When the gulls are silent,
  When the bay is still,
I am never lonely
I am never lonely
  When so much alone;
Silences remember
  What is most my own.

More Martial Music

(Montreal Gazette)

Britain has restored military bands to her regiments, after having dropped them in what was apparently an economy measure, because critics united in deploring the "funeral air" of columns marching with no other music than a sergeant-major's raucous "Left . . . . Left." In Canada the bands have never been discontinued, but military and federal authorities here might well take the hint and pay more attention to this aspect of the war effort.

Mr. Douglas Gooderham Ross, Toronto M.P., put the case succinctly in the House of Commons recently. "Bands playing martial airs have an inspiring effect on the spirits of the people, and if we had a few bands going around the country and giving us a little martial music it would do us a great deal of good," he said, and he suggested appropriation of "a little money" for distribution among militia units for this purpose.

Anyone who witnessed the enthusiasm at Montreal's garrison parade last week will agree with Mr. Ross on the "inspiring effect" of such music, and he is quite right in declaring the popular spirit would be fired by more such displays. They need not be full turnouts; regular route marches of a unit in training can be turned into the best possible recruiting propaganda by the addition of a rousing military band.

Mr. Ross went so far as to suggest some of the tunes he wished to hear—"Scots Wha Hae" headed the list, of course, but he also included "Hearts of Oak" and such well-remembered choruses of 1914-18 as "Keep the Home Fires Burning." "Pack up your Troubles", and the immortal "Tipperary." Dozens more could be added.

CAUTION

The removal of signposts and route indications is itself a hindrance to the movements of unwelcome visitors to our countryside, but it appears that in certain districts additional hindrances have been introduced.

A Lancashire man motoring last week-end in the Yorkshire dales had reason, in the absence of signposts, to revise his opinion that he knew the roads as well as the back of his hand. At one crossroads he was completely baffled, so he stopped his car to wait for a passer-by who could direct him.

At length a n elderly native came up, and the Lancashire man asked him which of the roads led to Oldham. The native stopped, contemplated him steadily for a few seconds, and then continued on his way, remarking, "If they'd wanted thee to know t'way to Owdham they wouldna 'ave takken t'signpost down!"—Manchester Guardian.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

How Noise is Being Reduced

There was a time when noise was considered only a nuisance but with the coming of the automobile and motor trucks with their horns and brakes, noise abatement societies have sprung up in various communities, not with the idea of lessening noise as a nuisance but as a menace to health.

First it was the jar or shock to the nervous system that was pointed out by health authorities. Shock affects all the body processes; the temperature drops, the blood pressure is lowered, the heart pumps with less strength, and digestion is disturbed. Noise causes muscles and nerves to become tensed so that they do a great amount of unnecessary work, causing fatigue to come on early.

A later result of noise has been its effect upon hearing, many losing enough of their hearing acuteness to require hearing aids.

Some months ago I spoke of the effect of the noise of airplanes on both pilots and passengers, having in mind my only flight which was from London to Paris a few years ago at midday on a 24 passenger plane. The noise spoiled my trip and I could "hear" the noise two days thereafter. Recently I flew in a 21 passenger plane a distance of 200 miles and was pleased to find that the noise is very greatly reduced and I felt no "noise" after landing. There was no difficulty in carrying on a conversation with other passengers. This is certainly worth much to those who wish to save time and see the world from the air and have no after effects.

There is no question but that our railways are making the same effort to get rid of the incidental noises not only in pullman but in coach travel also. I have spoken before of the great boon air conditioning has been to office workers where closed windows greatly cut down the noise of the street.

While in Italy some years ago I learned that the law required the autoist to blow his horn as he approached every street. Fortunately this law was repealed later.

Getting rid of noise is up to each of us individually. By driving carefully using our horn less, keeping brakes in good condition, keeping auto or home radio turned down and in other ways we can greatly increase the comfort and working ability of ourselves and others.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Fighter escorts of German bombing aircraft raiding Great Britain have not made the bombers invulnerable to British defences. Heavy German bomber losses have been suffered in the raids of the past week.

Until the German armies occupied Holland, Belgium and northern France the enemy was unable to provide fighter escorts for bombers for the reason that the distance from German territory to the British Isles was beyond the flying range of the small, fast fighting craft, although well within range of heavy bombers.

Now, however, the fighters can take off from fields in the occupied territories and accompany bombers to England and back without exhausting their fuel.

This was one of the principal changes made possible in German air tactics by the conquest of the large slice of territory close to Great Britain.

The Royal Air Force, even when bases in France made it possible, did not use fighters to escort bombers on raids into Germany to any great degree. Now it would be impossible to use them on the distance raids if it were desired, although they might be employed in raids on points in nearby French and Belgian territory.

Generally speaking, however, the air command probably believes fighters can be more usefully employed on home defence than as escorts.

Full Text of Address By Winston Churchill

London, July 15—(AP via Radio)—The text of the broadcast address by Prime Minister Churchill follows:

During the last fortnight the British Navy, in addition to blockading what is left of the German fleet and chasing the Italian fleet, has had imposed upon it the sad duty of putting effectually out of action for the duration of the war the capital ships of the French Navy. These, under the armistice terms signed in the railway coach at Compiegne, would have been placed within the power of Nazi Germany.

The transference of these ships to Hitler would have endangered the security both of Great Britain and the United States. We therefore had no choice but to act as we did and to act forthwith.

Our painful task is now completed. Although the unfinished battleship Jean Bart still rests in a Moroccan harbor, and there are a number of French warships at Toulon and in various French ports all over the world, they are not in a condition or of a character to derange our preponderance of naval power.

As long, therefore, as they make no attempt to return to ports controlled by Germany or Italy, we shall not molest them in any way. That melancholy phase in our relations with France has, so far as we are concerned, come to an end.

Let us think, rather, of the future.

Today is the 14th of July, the national festival of France. A year ago in Paris, I watched the stately parade down the Champs d'Elysees of the French Army and the French Empire. Who could foresee what the course of a year would bring?

Who can foresee what the course of other years will bring? Faith is given to us as a help and comfort when we stand in awe before the unfurling scroll of human destiny. And I proclaim my faith that some of us will live to see a 14th of July when a liberated France will once again stand forward as a champion of the freedom and the rights of man.

When that day dawns, and dawn it will, the soul of France will turn with comprehension and with kindness to those French men and French women, wherever they may be, who in the darkest hour did not despair of the Republic.

In the meantime, we shall not waste our breath, or encumber our thoughts, with reproaches. When you have a friend and comrade at whose side you have faced tremendous struggles, and your friend is smitten down by a stunning blow, it may be necessary to make sure that the weapon that has fallen from his hands shall not be added to the resources of your common enemy.

But you need not bear malice because of your friend's cries of delirium and gestures of agony. You must not add to his pain. You must work for his recovery. The association of interest between Britain and France remains. The cause remains.

Duty inescapable remains.

So long as our pathway to victory is not impeded, we are ready to discharge such offices of goodwill toward the French Government as may be possible, and to foster the trade and help the administration of those parts of the great French Empire which are now cut off from captive France, but which maintain their freedom.

Subject to the iron demands of the war which we are waging against Hitler and all his works, we shall try to conduct ourselves so that every true French heart will beat and glow at the way we carry on the struggle and that not only France, but all the oppressed countries in Europe, may feel that each British victory is a step toward the liberation of the continent from the foulest thralldom into which it has ever been cast.

All goes to show that the war will be long and hard. No one can tell where it will spread. One thing is certain: The peoples of Europe will not be ruled for long by the Nazi Gestapo. Nor will the world yield itself to Hitler's gospel of hatred, appetite and domination.

And now it has come to us. We must stand alone in the breach and face the worst that the tyrant's might and enmity can do. Bearing ourselves humbly before God, but conscious that we serve an unfolding purpose, we are ready to defend our native land against the invasion by which it is threatened.

We are fighting by ourselves — alone. But we are not fighting for ourselves—alone. Here in this strong city of refuge, which enshrines the title deeds of human progress—and is of big consequence to human civilization—here, girt about by the seas and oceans where our navy reigns, shielded from above by the prowess and devotion of our airmen, we await undismayed the impending assault.

Perhaps it will come tonight. Perhaps it will come next week. Perhaps it will never come. We must show ourselves equally capable of meeting a sudden, violent shock or, what is perhaps a harder task, of a prolonged vigil.

Will Ask No Mercy

But be the ordeal sharp or long, or both, we shall seek no terms, we shall tolerate no parleys. We may show mercy—we shall ask none.

I can easily understand how sympathetic onlookers across the Atlantic, or anxious friends in the yet unravaged countries of Europe who cannot measure our resources or our resolves, may have feared for our survival when they saw so many States and kingdoms torn to pieces in a few weeks, or even days, by the monstrous force of the Nazi war machine.

But Hitler has not yet been withstood by a great nation with a will power the equal of his own. Many of these countries have been poisoned by intrigue before they were struck down by violence. They have been rotted from within before they were smitten from without. How else can you explain what has happened to France? To the French Army? To the French people? To the leaders of the French people?

But here in our island we are in good health, and in good heart. We have seen how Hitler prepared, in scientific detail, the plans for destroying the neighboring countries of Germany. He had his plans for Poland and his plans for Norway. He had his plans for Denmark. He has his plans all worked out for the doom of the peaceful, trustful Dutch. And of course for the Belgians. We have seen how the French were undermined and overthrown. We may, therefore, be sure that there is a plan, perhaps built up over years, for destroying Great Britain: which after all has the honor to be his main and foremost enemy.

All I can say is that any plan for invading Britain which Hitler made two months ago must have had to be entirely recast in order to meet our new position.

Two months ago, nay one month ago, our first and main effort was to keep our best army in France. All our regular troops, all our output of munitions, and a very large part of our air force, had to be sent to France and maintained in action there.

But now we have it all at home. Never before, in the last war or in this, have we had in this island an army comparable in quality, in equipment or numbers to that which stands here on guard tonight.

We have a million and a half men in the British Army under arms tonight. And every week of June and July has seen their organization, their defensive and their striking power advance by leaps and bounds. No praise is too high for the officers and men, aye, and the civilians, who have made this immense transformation in so short a time.

Woe to Traitors

Behind these soldiers of the regular army, as a means of destruction for parachutists, airborne invaders, or any traitors that may be found in our midst, and I do not believe there are many—woe betide them, they will get short shrift—behind the regular army we have more than 1,000,000 of the local defense volunteers or as they are much better called, the home guard.

These officers and men, a large proportion of whom have been through the last war, have the strongest desire to attack and get to close quarters with the enemy, wherever he may appear. Should the invader come to Britain there will be no placid lying down by the people, no submission before him, as we have seen alas, in other countries.

We shall defend every village, every town and every city. The vast mass of London itself, fought street by street, could easily devour an entire hostile army, and we would rather see London laid in ruins and ashes than that it should be tamely and abjectly enslaved.

I am bound to state these facts, because it is necessary to inform our people of our intentions, and thus to reassure them.

This has been a great week for the Royal Air Force and for the fighter command. They have shot down more than 5 to 1 of the German air craft which have tried to molest our convoys in the channel, or have ventured to cross the British coastline.

These are, of course, only the preliminary encounters to the great air battles which lie ahead.

But I know of no reason why we should be discontented with the results so far achieved, although, of course, we hope to improve upon them as the fighting becomes more widespread and comes more inland.

Around all lies the power of the Royal Navy, with over 1,000 armed ships under the white ensign, patrolling the seas; the navy, which is capable of transferring its force very readily to the protection of any part of the British Empire which may be threatened, which is capable also of keeping open our communications with the New World, from whom, as the struggle deepens, increase in aid will come.

Is it not remarkable that after ten months of unlimited U-boat and air attack upon our commerce that our food reserves are higher than they have ever been, and that we have a substantially larger tonnage under our own flag, apart from great numbers of foreign ships in our control, than we had at the beginning of the war?

Why do I dwell on all this?

Not surely to induce any slackening of effort, vigilance. On the contrary these must be redoubled, and we must prepare not only for the summer, but for the winter.

Not only for 1941, but for 1942, when the war will—I trust—take a different form from the defensive in which it has hitherto been bound.

Will Lift Curse of Hitler

I dwell on these elements in our strength, on these resources, which we have mobilized and controlled. I dwell on it because it is right to show that the good cause can command the means of survival; and while we toil through the dark valley, we can see the sunlight on the uplands beyond.

I stand at the head of a Government representing all parties in the State; all creeds, all classes, every recognizable section of opinion. We are ranged beneath the crown of our ancient monarchy. We are supported by a free Parliament and a free press.

But there is one bond which unites us all and sustains us in the public regard: Namely, as is increasingly becoming known, that we are prepared to proceed to all extremities, to endure them and to enforce them. That is our bond of union in His Majesty's Government tonight.

Thus only in times like these can nations preserve their freedom. And thus only can they uphold the cause entrusted to their care. But all depends now upon the whole life-strength of the British race in every part of the world and of all our associated people and of all our well-wishers in every land, doing their utmost night and day, giving all, daring all, enduring all to the utmost, to the end.

This is no war of chieftains or of princes, dynasties or national ambitions. It is a war of peoples and of causes.

There are vast numbers, not only in this island, but in every land, who will render us faithful service in this war, but whose names will never be known, whose deeds will never be recorded.

This is a war of the unknown warrior. But let all strive without failing in faith or in duty and the dark curse of Hitler will be lifted from our age.

McNaughton Named Corps Commander

Takes Charge of British Army Corps Which Includes Canadian First Division

Ottawa, July 15—(CP)— Lieut.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton who last December led the 1st Division, Canadian Active Service Force, overseas, is now in command of a new British Army Corps which includes Canadian troops in the United Kingdom and which ultimately will become an all-Canadian organization.

General McNaughton's promotion to corps commander with the promotion in rank from Major-General to Lieutenant-General was announced last night in a statement from Defence Minister Ralston.

Unofficially it was said that Canadian troops arriving in Great Britain from time to time would be added to the corps under General McNaughton and as they arrived non-Canadian troops would be withdrawn from the corps.

Thus, in the end, Canada's scientist general, now in his early 50s and a former chief of Canada's General Staff, will command an all-Canadian corps.

The Defence Department statement said:

"With the consent and approval of the government of Canada, Maj-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, General Officer commanding the 1st Canadian Division, has been chosen to command a new corps which the War Office has set up.

Rank of Lieut.-General

"Included in this corps will be certain British formations and also the 1st Canadian Division and its ancillary units.

General McNaughton will have the rank of Lieutenant-General.

General McNaughton's successor as Commander of the 1st Division has yet to be named but it was said the new corps was set up to meet a special contingency. Composition of the British formations, all crack troops, cannot be disclosed.

For some time prior to the announcement heads of the formations making up the new corps worked in close co-operation, coordinating their efforts.

The result was that when the announcement was made of the consolidation, close-knit team-play already was in effect in the corps.

Key staff posts will be held by Canadian officers in the new corps so that when non-Canadian troops are withdrawn the turnover may be made with ease. A certain number of corps appointments will be shared by officers of the attached British formations.

People came from Aylmer, Oshawa, Madoc, Prince Edward, Belleville and Brockville. Everybody was feeling fine and ready for two good meals. There were ball games, races, swimming and other sports. Those who did not take part in the sports were enjoying good old fashioned visits. A meeting was called and it was decided to have the reunion next year at the same place on July 16th. The same officers were re-elected. A collection was taken up, expenses paid and a donation was made to the Red Cross. The crowd broke up all wishing to be present with many others next year.

Cannifton Red Cross Auxiliary Meets

The members of the Cannifton Red Cross Auxiliary met on Wednesday for the purpose of making pyjamas etc. There was a good attendance, and very satisfactory progress was made during the course of the day.

Apart from donations of sewing and knitting, the following articles have recently been contributed by the Cannifton district—5 blankets, Red Cross Auxiliary; 1 blanket. Miss Cowain's room, Cannifton Day school; 1 blanket and a bundle of clothing for refugees—Mrs. C. Mills.

On Thursday evening at the Cannifton Town Hall, a very interesting address illustrated with lantern slides of England was given by the Rev. C. P. Heaven.

The programme also included guitar solos by Miss Elmy, and community singing. The proceeds of this entertainment were given to the Red Cross.

Rock-A-Bye Rules

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

THE BABY should sleep in his own bed alone, also in his own room, if possible. The ordinary laundry basket, properly padded, makes an ideal crib for the first few months. Where there is only one bedroom in the home, he can be moved when the parents retire, into a living room or dining room. The crib with high sides over which the infant of a year or two cannot climb, and which he cannot jiggle loose, is desirable later, up to the end of eighteen months or two years. Be sure the bars are very close together so the child cannot get its head through.

After two years, a very low cot into which the child can climb alone is best. The springs should be firm; stout canvas is better than springs; one without springs, even with boards, would be better than one whose springs easily sag. No one needs to be rich to have a fairly wholesome separate bed for baby.

The mattress should be firm and smooth. Have a rubber sheet which completely covers the mattress, and over it a quilted cotton pad to protect the child from the rubber sheet. Then over this a cotton sheet which tucks in well around the mattress. Remember that the rubber sheet may quickly deteriorate and allow the mattress to grow wet.

Not Too Warm

Also have small pads about 18 inches square, with small rubber sheets to match to save frequent change of large sheets and pads.

The wool blanket should be light and warm and large enough to tuck in under the mattress. A downy cotton comforter, very light and fluffy will be better than heavy blankets. Most babies are covered too warm at night.

To keep the child from being wholly uncovered and to prevent thumb-sucking, a sleeping bag made of soft downy material, to enclose all the child but his head, with lots of room for wide, free movements of his hands and legs, is very desirable.

For the infant it is well to fasten covers with a large safety pin to the foot of the bed as well as to the sides near the foot. This to keep the child from pulling the covers over his head and face if struggling angrily alone.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Do you advise spanking for a temper tantrum?

A. Usually not. But if you can be on hand at the first or very early expression of violent rage in your child who, let us say, is stiffening, holding his breath, or stamping his feet, several quick, sharp smacks will work like magic. One such treatment served as a permanent cure of one of our children—the first and last real temper tantrum he ever had.

Q. Suppose your child in his early teens were to tell you he did not believe in the religious things you taught him.

A. I should try to keep perfectly calm and companionable, letting him say to me what he liked about his beliefs. I wouldn't preach to him or argue with him. I would try harder to win his esteem the next several months and to make my religion or philosophy of life so attractive by the way I lived in the home that he might be attracted to it and choose it as his own. But if I failed I still would try harder to earn his esteem.

WEDDINGS

STEWART—HULL

A very pretty wedding was solemnized Saturday, July 13, at 184 Bleecker Avenue, Belleville, when James Theodore Stewart, and Ada Augusta Hull, both of Point Anne, were united in marriage by Rev. E. Farnsworth. They were attended by William James Hopkin, Foxboro and Miss Annie Hagerman of Belleville.

LOVE—JARVIS

The marriage took place at Bridge Street United Church parsonage on Saturday, July 13, of Donald Fleming Love and Madeline Annette Jarvis, both of Madoc, Rev. Dr. James Semple officiating. The attendants were Miss Jean Eileen Holmes and Mr. Cecil Holland, Madoc. Mr. and Mrs. Love will reside in Madoc.

CARRUTHHERS—SPRAGUE

A quiet wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, on Saturday evening, when Jean Marion, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Sprague, became the bride of Harold Lennox, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carruthers.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. D. Harrison.

The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her father. She wore her travelling costume of navy blue silk suit and large navy felt hat with white accessories and corsage of roses.

Following a reception for close friends and relatives, the young couple left for a motor trip through Western Ontario.

ANDERSON—AUSTIN

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Austin, Wooler, was the scene of a pretty summer wedding on July 3, when their eldest daughter, Edith Mary, became the bride of Ormond J. Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Anderson, Trenton. Rev. W. T. R. Delve officiated beneath an arch of orange blossoms and roses. The wedding music was played by Mrs. K. S. Austin.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a period gown of white silk net over taffeta, with a short fitted jacket and full bouffant skirt. She wore her mother's white silk net veil and her grandmother's orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of roses and bouvardia. Miss Roma Austin, sister of the bride, attended her as maid of honor wearing forget-me-not blue embroidered net over taffeta, princess style. Miss Ruth Oliphant of Belleville was bridesmaid, wearing blossom pink embroidered net over taffeta. They both wore gold lockets, gifts of the bride. Their head dresses were blue and pink cornflowers and they wore matching gloves and carried nosegays of roses and cornflowers.

Gerald Anderson, the groom's brother, was his best man and Karl Austin was usher. A reception was held immediately following the ceremony, the bride's mother wearing an afternoon frock of navy lace with a corsage of roses, the groom's mother wearing pastel sheer with white accessories and corsage of roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson left amid a shower of old shoes, confetti, etc., for a trip to Ottawa and points east. She changed to a navy blue ensemble with navy and white accessories and rose corsage. They will reside in Trenton on their return.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Afraid She Was Too Rude

Dear Miss Fairfax

Not long ago I became acquainted with a young man, who was introduced to me at a friend's home. He made an unusual impression on me, and seemed to be attracted to me also, and we had a very pleasant evening together. He asked for a date a week later. However, it so happened that I had another engagement, but I'm afraid I was rather abrupt in my manner to him, and may have hurt his pride because I did not hear from him again.

I chanced to meet him again at the same home, but I don't know what was the matter with me. I seemed to go out of my way to insult him. Then I offered my apology, but when he asked if he would see me again, I was abrupt and didn't even say goodnight.

I don't know what's the matter with me. I know my chances with this young man are gone. But still I feel as if I'd like to make amends for an injustice which he far from deserved.

Sorry

Your case seems to support the theory that love and hate are not far distant. You were rude, insulting and unjust to the young man because you probably resented the immediate and unusual impression he made on you. Psychoanalysts would quote you for this little outburst on your part. Be especially gracious to him next time you meet.

Perhaps he may know something of psychoanalysis and have already diagnosed your little vicious attack as a compliment to him.

Family Persuaded Her to Marry Wrong Man

Dear Miss Fairfax

Three years ago I met a young man who attended college near my home. I obtained a position there, too, and before long we knew that we loved each other and planned to marry when he finished his studies. I knew his partnts and they seemed to like me.

A year and a half after that I quit my job and came home to be married in a few months. During this time at home I met a verp nice boy, a friend of our family. He fell in love with me and wouldn't listen when I said I was engaged to someone else, and even threatened to do somthing terrible if I would not marry him. So with the co-operation of friends, relatives and my parents, who didn't like the first young man because he belonged to another church, I married the second young man.

I've been married a year now and have tried very hard to make a go of things. I told my husband I did not love him the day I married him, but he treats me very kind. He hasn't much of a job and I don't think he will ever have much.

I see the first young man once in a while, whom I still love and who said he would marry me the minute I'd get a divorce. He does not go with a girl, has a grand job and plenty of money. I know I'd be happy with him. Please tell me what to do.

Miserable

It would be just another case of locking the stable door after the horse had departed if I told you it's the height of folly for any girl to be persuaded by her family to marry a man she doesn't love. But now that you have done this thing, why don't you give it more of a chance than one year?

As you know, the first year of marriage is said to be the most difficult. And then, doesn't the young college man's better job and greater amount of spending money make him seem more desirable than the less successful husband, who is kind to you?

At all events, you made your choice, and if you're a good sport you'll stick it out.

GOOD MANNERS

"GIVE US GRACE TO LISTEN WELL".

When you are telling what you think is one of your best stories, do you feel restive if you find your listener absorbed in her own thoughts with a far-away look in her eyes and answering you vaguely, as one who had heard little of what you are saying. Does her distraught manner rebuff you, even pique you? Or when someone, who should know better, interrupts your remarks by calling attention to Mary Field's new dress?

Then take a leaf from that woman's book and resolve that that unmannerliness will never be one of your misdemeanors.

When someone is talking to you, pay that person the compliment of your entire attention. Even when the effort is something of a strain, your sense of being polite will be, or at least should be, pleasing to you. Then, too, with a little tact, you may soon be able to turn the talk into another channel, which is another reward for your polite cooperation.

Conversation, remember, is like any other expression of good manners: it is "the art of making those people easy with whom we converse. Whoever makes the fewest people uneasy is the best bred in the company."

Formal Invitation or Not?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married the latter part of August. It's not to be a large wedding or a large reception. But I do intend to wear a white dress and a finger-tip veil There will be two attendants and two ushers.

This is what I am doubtful about. At first I planned to have invitations and small reception cards engraved. The reception is to be a small one at my home. After thinking it over, however, I decided that maybe a formal invitation shouldn't be sent for such a small home reception. Do you think my decision is right or wrong? Would a note of invitation be better form? I am inviting about fifty people to the reception.

W.O.

If your wedding were definitely to be on the formal side, then the engraved invitations would be correct. However, even though your attire is on the side of formality, your other plans seem to be on the side of informality, especially the reception at your home.

If you are making formal plans for the church part of your wedding, you might send engraved invitations for the ceremony, and then invite the reception guests by notes written either by your mother, the hostess of the occasion, or by you.

Stork Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give a stork shower for a close friend of mine, but I don't know what to do to entertain my guests. Could you help me out with some suggestions? Should we play games?

C.B.

Usually there is no special entertainment planned for a stork shower. The party generally doesn't last long, and the time is delightfully taken up with conversation, with the opening of the shower gifts and enthusiastic chat about these, and the refreshments. Occasionally bridge or another game popular with the particular group of guests is played.

Courtesy Tip

Don't let down on your table manners at home, just because there is no one except the family to see how you eat. Family meals should be as pleasing and delightful as company meals.

Fill or Slim for 'Figure' Trim

By HELEN FOLLETT

LADY FASHION is a good trainer. She snaps the whip and the sisters go dancing round the beauty ring. She has ordained that the pretty ones have normal figures, with trim waist lines and hips that are not hippy, if you know what we mean. In order to qualify, even the lazy ones are doing their exercises.

Skinny slims must fill out, femmes who are built like cream puffs must shuffle off excess upholstery. Emaciation, when not caused by ill health, is the result of wrong eating habits, too many pickles, too much lettuce, not enough good chow containing all the varied elements. A quart of milk a day, rich with cream, will bring good reports from the bath room scales.

Slow Traffic

Overweight is a menace to health, interferes with exercise, delegates the weighty one to the slow traffic lane. It is overcome by cutting down on fats, sweets and starches Simple as can be.

Talk about the smaller waistline has led women to look after their corseting, to choose correct foundation garments. It has also inspired them to hold in their tummy muscles, a habit that strengthens fibres, and reduces measurements.

"Overweight is a menace to health".

Now that ears are out in the world to be observed by every eye don't let your's be poor little orphans. When you put on your make up, don't pass them by. How many times have you seen the gardenia complexion hand in hand with newly scrubbed ears that shine like a mirror? That's a beauty slip; that's what it is.

Use the powder pad lightly, not only on the forward portions but on the backs. See that the powder goes into the little shell-like grooves. Touch the lobes lightly with the rouge pad, then give them another coat of powder. Powder back of your ears, especially if you are wearing a chignon—curls tied or anchored at the nape line.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Parenthood

I think there is an increasing number of parents who work too hard at the job of parenthood. I can't say that this is surprising either for you can hardly pick up a magazine today that doesn't carry an article on parent problems. A large number of these articles are likely to scare a father or mother into overdoing their jobs.

One magazine writer will tell you how to guard your child against developing an inferiority complex. The next magazine you read will carry an article in which another writer declares that an inferiority complex is a perfectly normal and natural thing in children and that no person amounts to much unless he has one. One writer will advise you to ship your child off to a nursery school as soon as he can toddle, and another will write that nursery school makes them too smart when he enters ordinary school, and tends to make him a misfit.

Through it all, I really feel sorry for the parents, especially the ones who take their job so seriously as to attempt to read all articles they can find on child training and try to accept the advice in them. They must be as confused as persons who try to figure out all that is happening in Europe by studying all the news reports we get here.

I am glad to see that recently there is a swing back to the idea of simplicity in raising children. In my medical practise I am always on guard against over treatment of my patients. Time and time again, I have to catch myself when I'm on the point of giving a patient too much treatment. I think it's still a good idea to keep your medical treatment restricted to what you are sure is necessary and let nature have a chance. I think the same thing applies more or less to parenthood.

There has been a general trend towards teaching a child a great many special arts and crafts. Well, a little of this is all right, but it can be overdone. If ever there was a big temptation to encouraging special talents, it was—and is, in the case of the Dionne Quintuplets.

Ever since they were a few weeks old we have been besieged with letters advising us to teach them every possible subject. Very often the writer is an expert in the subject he is talking about and he will volunteer to come up and help in the training.

A teacher wants to come to Callander to teach the children singing. He has some new wrinkle he wants them to learn because of the benefits in lung development, poise and popularity they will enjoy. Dancing teachers volunteer to come from Boston, New York, Cleveland, San Francisco and other places. Last winter teachers of the art of figure skating were eager to come up and start to work on the children.

Well, a little of these things is fine. Any child is the better for having had some of this special teaching. But there still is nothing like proper play time in developing your child. And since the day is only twenty-four hours long, if you teach a half a dozen things to the child, the play period is curtailed. When too much of a child's normal play time is taken up in this way, it doesn't matter how much talent the child has, it suffers just the same.

Picton

Picton, July 15—A number of members of the local lodge attended the Orange walk in Plainfield on Friday.

Still another "sign" believed by some to forecast Great Britain's ultimate success in the war, has been found in Prince Edward. A rhubarb leaf grown in the garden of Mrs. Chas. McGibbon in Picton, is on display in the window of a local hardware store. A large maple leaf has been plainly etched by nature on the rhubarb leaf. This maple leaf etching is much larger than any real maple leaf could possibly be.

Mrs. C. H. Leavens received a telephone call on Friday from her husband, Capt. (Dr.) C. H. Leavens from Halifax, where the captain has disembarked on his return from England. Returning with Capt. Leavens were Lieut. Winston Hicks and Lieut. Wallbridge.

DECORATION SERVICE HELD

Campbellford, Ont., July 15—(CP)—Decoration day services were held here Sunday under the auspices of the local branch of the Canadian Legion. Veterans from the surrounding district attended the ceremonies which included the laying of a wreath at the foot of the cenotaph.

The parade to the cenotaph was headed by the band of the Midland Regiment. Special prayers were offered by Mr. Gault, Rev. G. N. Maxwell and Rev. M. Price.

Summery Coolers

By ALICE DENHOFF

Summer time is open season for refreshments in most households. During the winter, meals may be served at set times, but with summer it is all very different. The cooling drink, the bite to eat are in demand all day by the family, and if there is a garden or a cool porch or terrace, there are bound to be guests. Ingenuity, charm and imagination can do their bit into transforming the prosaic cooling drink and snack into a delightful little repast. Summer entertaling, however simple, can be fun.

Iced coffee is a summer standby. Prepare coffee as usual and chill it quickly. Before serving, add to each quart 6 tablespoons finely powdered sugar and 3 teaspoons vanilla, all stirred well to dissolve sugar. Pour into glass about quarter filled with cracked ice. Omit vanilla, and crush fresh mint leaves with the sugar, add to coffee and stir well for another coffee drink.

For Non-Dieters

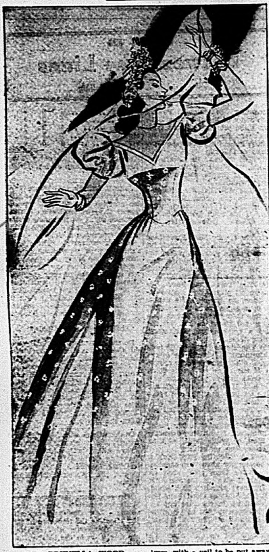
For those who don't have to diet, a scoop of vanilla ice in each tall glass of iced coffee adds flavor. A drink made with two tablespoons of whipped cream placed in bottom of a glass and topped with a scoop of chocolate ice cream, the glass filled with freshly made coffee which has been chilled quickly, is a pleasant variation.

The successful summer hostess usually has a supply of carbonated beverages on hand to serve as is, or to use an an ingredient for some concoction. She fills ice-cube trays with a fruit-flavored soft drink, and these she uses for color and flavor for tall glasses of iced tea, tastefully garnished with a sprig of mint. Ice cream sodas with a professional touch can be made by mixing a couple of spoons of ice cream with a half-glass of favorite carbonated beverage. A drink made with a cup of grape juice plus four cups of ginger ale, well blended and chilled, is refreshing. So is raspberry sherbet with lime-flavored carbonated beverage poured over it.

Give Food a Lift

Just as potables may be glorified, food can be given a lift.. A canape or a cookie or a piece of cake have kept company with a cold drink for years, but how about dressing them up a little? A pudding made with eighteen graham crackers folded into a cup and a half of applesauce makes a snack to serve six. Pour mixture into pudding dish and chill in refrigerator 2 or 3 hours. Serve with whipped cream.

Dreams Come True



By PRUNELLA WOOD

IF THIS MONTH means Mendelssohn to you, now's the time to look into your wedding gown. Expect to find lots of white this summer . . . the vogue for pastel bridal gowns seems to have calmed down. Traditional satin may be your choice, especially if there's a bit of precious lace in the family. If not, there's starched chiffon, marquisette, net, mousseline, dotted Swiss and embroidered organdy to consider.

The last-named material is that used for the gown sketched today, the only contrast being a plain organdy yoke. Simple yet ethereal for the ceremony, this dress with its three-yard train is also practical. Snip the train and you have an evening dress instead of an heirloom, with a veil to be put away for sentiment's sake.

Dainty fluting outlines the V of the bodice of the gown in front and continues in a curve across the back. Buttons down the back are self-covered and extend to natural fitted waistline. A taffeta slip accompanies the dress, not too expensive for the promises you'll make on the days of days.

The bride in organdy might have her bridesmaids in flowered organdie of different colors. If she selects pique, her attendants could wear the same material, but each girls frock of a different style. The bride who breaks from the traditional and takes her vows in baby blue tulle can't do better than put her maids in the same shade in dresses of taffeta, organdy or crepe.

"I Spy"

SHADES OF SARAH Bernhardt! The elderflower and cucumber cream ordered 30 jars at a writing by that actress in her heydey is drawing window shoppers on Lexington Avenue. The druggists, who still sell it, show a well-preserved theatre program to prove their claim. Lillian Russell was also a devotee.

The handsome brass-studded belt my secretary wears is causing quite a bow-wow. It's nothing more than two five-and-ten dog collars joined buckle to buckle at each hip. The collars come in 8 and 10-inch lengths in bamboo, sapphire, green, yellow and white leather—all good sports colors.

Thoughts on a bus on a very rainy day . . . . The girls in all black outfits look neatest but should add a fresh flower boutonniere for cheer . . . The bright cashmere scarfs schoolgirls tie under their chins shed water better than the black umbrella mother used to thrust in my own childish, unwilling hands . . . .Why can't I remember how chic a snood looks—without a hat—in a downpour? . . . .

Who's going to come out with galoshes for wedgies? . . . Men think women do foolish things—but try to get a man to wear his rubbers. He'd rather get pneumonia, and admits it.

Inexpensive hard rubber pegs or folded cardboard shoved between window casings often prevents rattling.

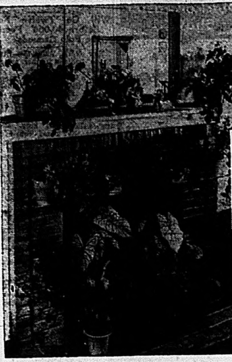
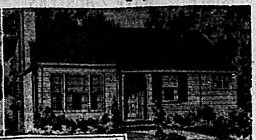
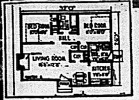
It is not absolutely necessary, but it is highly advisable to close any space between tops of upper kitchen cabinets and the ceiling. It eliminates dust traps. You can close space with plaster or wall board. The latter is often referred to as "furring."

Summer Hearth Like This Spells Home







Even Florida found out this past Winter that home is truly where the hearth is. Here is a not too ambitious house which appears to have lovely closet space, a retired dining space out of sight of the main living room where it is spotted—and an open fireplace, to boot. Also, the plan has passed up the too usual opportunity of placing the bathroom where it will be inevitably in full sight when you come in the front door. All in all a pretty fine compact little house.

If you have a fireplace in your present home, or if you build a house from the plan we offer you today, you'll be interested in the Summer treatment for a hearth we photograph for you here. It is a simple trick, good in any part of the land, using items to be found in any town or city.

Three shelves of polished plate glass across the front of the fireplace and a few potted plants do the trick. The shelves are easily attached to the bricks so that they can be removed in the winter time. In the summer the gleaming glass gives an effect of coolness. If you have a garden of your own, you probably can pot your own plants. If not, plants at this season are inexpensive and your fireplace conservatory will be a joy throughout the warm seasons.

Heed an Expert On Photogenic Glamor Rules

A PERFECTLY clean face with a fine dusting of rachel-hued powder is all the best photographer wants from you when you sit for a glamor girl portrait. All the complicated plots with foundation gums, greasy highlights and mysterious eye shadow are so many bad words to an expert with the lens. If he thinks you need them to reproduce pretty—he'll provide them for you. Otherwise, nix.

Hal Phyfe, a past master at transferring pretty faces to paper via the camera, gives us the tip. Maybe you'll never sit to Mr. Phyfe yourself, but what he has to tell about sitting for your local Phyfe is sound advice. Every time you begin the pictured saga of this debutante or that, pursuing it through the rotogravures, the slick paper magazines, from debut to altar, you are like as not enjoying Mr. Phyfe's art. His specialty is debbies; his gift is catching for the public the quality called glamor which a debbie much advertise, or be without a public.

Photographic Magic

The reassuring nugget of hope which Mr. Phyfe reveals to you is that glamor, in photographs at least, is almost entirely photographic magic. The glamor a girl sees reflected in the eyes of her beaux and best friends is seldom camera food in the natural state. More often a pretty girl's essential personality is her vivacity, her complexion, her charming ways—none of them an asset which can be told to "hold that pose!" long enough to register in film. The photographer, then, must be an artist with makeup, knowing just how many grains of powder, how many dabs or paint, his pretty girl can afford as accent. To many will get between her personality and his film. A good photograph is more than the reproduction of a familiar face; if it doesn't look as if it might speak to you in a moment, it will at any rate assure you that it is thinking fond thoughts about you. It is the well-known Mona Lisa quality—called glamor today—that you and your best beau yearn for in your photograph. And as in the portrait of Mona Lisa, the quality will be missing in the portrait unless its catcher puts it in.

Rules Are Simple

You can help him. Here are the simple rules which Mr. Phyfe lines up for the girl about to sit for her glamor photograph:

A clean face, with a dusting of fine rachel powder.

No foundation cream of grease beneath the powder.

A light lipstick—red photographs black—but an indelible one. Shape the lips in their usual lines, rub in the lip rouge, press the lips against a facial tissue to remove every speck of excessive rouge.

Very little mascara, and what you use concentrated on the tips of the lashes to accent their lengths.

Artifical eyelashes are fine if they are the kind which are applied at the end of each natural lash, and not the fringe strip type which drag the eyelids down out of shape.

Natural eyebrows—of course yours are habitually disciplined to a clean, well groomed line, camera sitting or not—unless you are a very pale blonde, when a teeny bit of mascara may be used. The lens, however, will catch considerable accent from even blonde eyebrows.

No greasy highlights. Let the photographer add them if he wishes, about the eyelids.

A little dry eye shadow discreetly applied.

Choose a natural, simple and familiar hairdo, certainly one which will not date you. Your dress should be a pastel shade with a neckline which does not chop your head from your body, and it better not be of printifabric. The effect may detract from your face, confuse the issue. Too print designs tend to date you, as do hats and strange hairdos.

A ribbon rosette fronts the gabardine and calf model, top. with squared toe, pretty with your black sheers or prints.

Second from top, a low wedge in black suede with red calf sole and piping of stretchable red-covered goring. Gay at either Fair, it may be matched to your hat or simply a hair bow.

The turban evening slipper, third from top, combines, a richly embroidered fabric with calf, outlines the shape of the foot and goes with any number of gowns.

Fourth from top, a high-backed pump or black antelope with goring to hold it on. The heel is scuffless.

Bottom, an advance Fall model with the new shipshape heel comes in black suede trimmed with faille piping. This is perfect for dinner and very late afternoon.

Household Hints

To make a chocolate drink, take two squares bitter chocolate, one quart milk, four tablespoons sugar, one-fourth teaspoon cinnamon, dash of salt. Shave chocolate and add to milk in the top of a double boiler. Beat with a rotary beater till smooth. Add sugar, salt and cinnamon and beat till frothy. Pour slowly over the beaten white of an egg and serve at once with whipped cream.

Bake red apples in the ordinary manner remove from oven, fill centres with mixture of chopped almonds, chopped dates and whole raisins. Place apples back in oven for a few moments, then serve warm for dessert.

For a substantial snack do devilled eggs this way:

Cut six hard-boiled eggs in lengthwise halves. Remove and mash yolks. Drain oil from can of smoked sardines and add sardines to egg yolks, with 2 teaspoons prepared mustard, salt and vinegar to taste. Stuff egg whites with this mixture.

Use Light Scent On Warm Night

WHEN SUMMER COMES, the perfumes that allured us in cold weather cease to entice. Comes the day when perfume that seemed right for furs, velvets, and lame is out for warm weather clothes. Then is the time for perfumed waters and colognes.

Blossoms that grow in old fashioned gardens spell Summer for us. Night scented stock, wistaria acacias, come in bottles of Summer refreshment.

Get Generous

A new scent is redolent of lime and mint, the sort of thing that even a strong he-man would approve of—and snitch. Colognes contribute much to the summer perfume parade, and this light scent has come far from the old-fashioned eau de cologne bottle that was considered tops by the belles of yesteryear, and which with lavender water stood for all that was lovely in the feminine world.

Today there are colognes of every possible flower and spice type, many with atomizers or in syphon-type bottles. Colognes and toilet waters can be used with a generous hand, splash and spray them to keep cool and lovely,

Not all of the perfumes that are popular in winter disappear for summer altogether. Many perfume houses bring out lighter editions of their wares, really toilet waters tinged with a heavier scent. These cannot be used with such abandon as the garden spicy fragrances. Carnation and violet are year-round favorites, and geranium is another old favorite that always seems new.

Cool Illusion

The use of one fragrance from bath to dressing table helps create an illusion of cool comfort not only for the wearer but for all who come within a nose-length of her. Choosing wisely a battery of summer perfumes and colognes is not an extravagance, nor is it entirely a come-hither gesture. It plays an actual as well as a psychological role in the task of combating the heat and lassitude of summer, and offers a bouquet of beauty to those of us who must tread city sidewalks instead of wandering in a garden drenched with the perfume of roses or sweetened by mignonette and stock.

Many women who don't care at all for perfume during most of the year, splurge when it comes to summer perfumes. They choose a light floral odor and use it for personal grooming and for the linen closet. Violet, lilac, apple blossom, verbena, light jasmines and orange blossom are favorites.

Thin Man Gets Clue

HE'LL FATTEN IF HE EATS, SAYS DOCTOR

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

Every time I publish a list of diets for overweight, which I do about once a year, I get a long list of complaints, the burden of which is "You're talking about the overweights. Why don't you do something for us underweights, those of us who are thin and can't seem to fatten up?"

There are really almost as many of them as there are of the overweights, although they are not so conspicuous, so I am going to publish some advice and a list of diets for underweights during the next few weeks.

One thing the underweight patient does not seem to realize is that it takes just as much work and self-denial to gain weight as it does to lose it. The overweight patient knows that it is going to be hard on him and is prepared to make some sacrifices, but the underweight patient seems to think that he can take some vitamin tablets or some other mysterious kind of magic and he will begin to gain weight automatically. This is not true. He has to work for his advantages.

As in the case of the overweight patient, there are two distinct kinds of underweights. In the smaller group are those who have some organic or physiological cause for their underweight. These may be hidden or difficult of assessment. Of course the conspicuous one is tuberculosis. Cases of diabetes may go unrecognized for a long time and be a cause of underweight. Conditions of the ducaless glands, such as Simmond's Disease, and adrenal insufficiency, may cause abnormal thinness; also certain nervous conditions, or asthenia.

In most instances, however, underweight is due to the fact that the individual does not eat enough, just as overweight is largely due to too much eating. It is really very simple. I have several doctor friends who are interested in nutrition and several of them are quite thin. With one accord they say that their leanness is no mystery; that they simply do not like to eat and they look on me, and people like me, with fine appetites, with a kind of envy. They estimate that they instinctively eat about one-third as much as another person of the same age and height.

Three days a week, for a time, we will publish in this column a daily menu of a diet planned to increase weight. They contain at least 3500 calories per diem. They are balanced as to minerals, vitamins, and roughage.,

Breakfast: Cantaloupe; wheatena with cream; bread and butter; glass milk, 1-2 cream.

Mid-morning: Chocolate malted milk.

Lunch: Steak sandwich; fresh broccoli; baked tomatoes with cheese; Italian bread with sweet butter; black coffee.

Mid-afternoon: Glass of eggnog.

Dinner: Antipasto; roast beef; Italian spaghetti; assorted fresh fruits; coffee with cream and sugar; cheese and crackers.

Evening: Cream custard.

Approximate value—3,700 calories.

Looking Ahead

By ALICE ALDEN

SUMMER, the season of pretty clothes, shouldn't be considered lightly. Have everything new if you prefer—lots of girls insist anything carried over lacks freshness—but plan as well for warm weather as for cool. There's bound to be a number of garden, parties and weddings among your invitations when a tailored shirtwaist frock or linen suit would be an utter loss. Have an inexpensive but feminine print or a simple chiffon dress at hand. Either will look charming as today's picture proves with a little flower hat and flattering gloves. The ones shown are in the pin money class white with heavy cotton lace decor. Silk net and shadow lace makes gloves equally intriguing on the hand.

Fred Fitzsimmons Chalks up 200th Hurling Win of Career By Defeating Pittsburgh 2-0

Annals of Game Show 45 Hurlers Who Have Won 200 Games in Baseball Career

ROUGH ON LEADERS

Indians Lose One, Detroit Two and Boston Lost Jimmy Foxx With Wrenched Knee

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

Freddy Fitzsimmons, old and fat but still doing tricks with his knuckleball, lined up behind the great pitchers of baseball today with the 200th victory of his 16-year major league career.

The annals of the game show only 45 hurlers, fellows like Cy Young, Walter Johnson, Grover Alexander, Christy Mathewson and similar all-time heroes, who have won 200 or more contests. Only four besides Fitzsimmons are now active in the big show—Lefty Grove, Red Ruffing, Ted Lyons and Carl Hubbell.

Pitz made a fighting entrance into this select group by pitching Brooklyn to a four-hit 2-0 shutout over Pittsburgh Pirates after the Dodgers had dropped the first game of a doubleheader 6-2.

Truett (Rap) Sewell set the Dodgers back on their heels in the first game with five-hit flinging plus a personal home run with a man on base. But "Father" saved the day with his eighth victory of the year against one defeat.

Ruffing Keeps Company

Ruffing kept Pitz company in the "200" by shutting out Chicago White Sox 4-0 on four hits. New York Yankees got 11 hits off Lefty Thornton Lee and eight of them went to three players, Red Rolfe, Buster Mills and Babe Dahlgren. This was Rufus the Red's 222nd victory and eighth of the season.

It was a rough day for the leaders in the American League. Cleveland Indians lost one game, Detroit Tigers two and Boston Red Sox lost Jimmy Foxx.

Double X was bumped by John Berardino of St. Louis Browns in the first inning of the first game and even though the Red Sockers went on to sweep the doubleheader 5-4 and 7-3 they could ill afford the wrenched knee that Foxx received. He will be out of the lineup for several days.

Doubles Home Winning Run

The first game went 11 innings before Doc Cramer doubled home the winning run. Grove had sought to make this his 292nd victory, but was removed for a pinchhitter and Emerson Dickman got the credit. Dominic Dimaggio starred in the seven-inning nightcap, abbreviated by Boston's curfew law. He hit his first major league homer and fielded spectacularly.

Cleveland was a 6-5 11-inning victim of Washington Senators, who scored two runs after two were out to tie the score in the ninth and then punched across the deciding run after two were out in the 11th. Buddy Lewis singled with the bases loaded for this tally.

Detroit wasn't able to take advantage of the chance to regain the lead. The combination of Sam Chapman's two home runs and rookie Porter Vaughan's effective southpaw pitching won the first game for Philadelphia Athletics 8-2 and Chapman hit another homer in the second game to pave the way for a 5-2 decision. Shortstop Dick Bartell, keyman of the Tigers, hurt his back and had to withdraw from the lineup.

Reds Continue Rampage

The Reds continued to rage in the National League, plastering a pair of defeats on the Phillies 3-2 and 7-1. Bill McKenchnie used his "secondary" pitchers, Jim Turner and Lloyd (Whitey) Moore. Turner was touched for 10 hits in the first game, three more than Kirby Higbe of the Phils gave, but had the help of first-inning home runs by Lonnie Frey and Ernie Lombardi. In the nightcap Moore allowed only four hits.

St. Louis Cardinals swept their double session with Boston Bees 8-7 and 3-1. Johnny Mize's 23rd home run and a round-tripper by Country Slaughter stood out in the first victory while Fiddler Bill McGee's eight-hit hurling decided the second game.

Bill Nicholson hit a homer in the 13th inning to give Chicago Cubs a 6-5 decision over New York Giants in the day's longest struggle, but Bill Lohrman of the Giants came right back with seven-hit shutout pitching to take the afterpiece 2-0. Mel Ott's homer accounted for one of New York's runs.

R.C.Y.C. TORONTO, DEFENDS TROPHY

Currie Cup Competed for by Three Clubs Sailed Over Montreal Course

Montreal, July 15.—(CP)—Sailors from the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto successfully defended the Currie Cup, defeating entries from the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club of Montreal and the Kingston Yacht Club in the annual competition.

The Currie Cup event was sailed over a triangular course, and consisted of three races, with skippers and crews changing boats after each race. Each club entered two crews. The Toronto crew piled up 25 points to annex the event, although beaten out of first place by Royal St. Lawrence in the final race.

The Montreal crew placed second with 21 points while Kingston finished third with 18. Jack Wright was skipper of one Toronto crew, and Bill Godderham led the other.

In the first of a home-and-home series between Montreal and Kingston Yachts, the Kingston sailors gained a two-point margin to protect at Kingston in two weeks' time.

One minor accident caused a delay during the sailing of the Currie Cup races. In the second race, the Toronto Yacht Brud II under Gooderham broke a mast and dumped her crew into the water. The other boats returned to the starting line, and the Griffon replaced the Brud II.

MANY SELECTED NOT ELIGIBLE SAYS W. HAGEN

Ryder Cup Team to Play Team Selected by Gene Sarazen for Red Cross

SINGLES, MATCHES

Hagen Claims Many Players on Other Team Not Eligible Because of Non-Membership in R.G.A.

Detroit, July 15.—(AP)—Dapper Walter Hagen came to the tee from his side today to answer some hot shots from Gene Sarazen over the Professional Golfer's Association's practices in selection of the Ryder Cup Golf team.

Sarazen's challengers engage the Ryder Cuppers tomorrow and Wednesday at Oakland Hills in charity matches for the Red Cross. Hagen, the Ryder captain, charged that Gene had overlooked "one important thing—the big point" in finding fault with the makeup of the cup outfit.

"Sarazen claimed that he could pick a team from those overlooked by the P.G.A. and beat us", Hagen said. "But when it came to picking his team, he selected quite a few who weren't even eligible for the Ryder Cup team".

The Haig then went to work on Sarazen's outft, and when we got through, there weren't many of them left. First he ruled out Tommy Armour, Jimmy Thomson and Harry Cooper. They are foreign-born and thus ineligible to the cup team.

From that point Hagen proceeded to rule out Ed Oliver, National Open Champion Lawson Little, Ben Hogan, Clayton Heafner and finally even Sarazen himself.

Doesn't Belong to P.G.A.

"Little", said Hagen, "isn't eligible because he doesn't belong to the P.G.A. Hogan wasn't eligible a year ago when the team was selected. Heafner doesn't belong to the P.G.A. and Oliver wasn't heard of very much last year."

Pointing out the Ryder team was chosen almost a year ago, Hagen said "we couldn't wait to see which golfers would be goin hot now".

"On the other hand Sarazen, knowing our lineup, now can go from coast to coast for his team and take fellows who are definitely on their game now", Hagen said. "Why, last year Sarazen wasn't playing well at all and couldn't have been picked for Ryder Cup play on his record. Yet this year he's going great."

The teams will meet in foursomes tomorrow and in singles Wednesday. Hagen and Sarazen have agreed to play one another on Wednesday. On the Ryder Cup team are Henry Picard, Ralph Guldahl, Sam Snead, Harold McSpaden, Byron Nelson, Horton Smith, Dick Metz, Vic Ghezzi, Paul Runyan and Jimmy Hines.

ROCHESTER WINGS HAVE 2 HURLERS WITH 12 WINS

Herschel Lyons and Charlie Brumbeloe Climb Into Select Circle Sunday

MONTREAL SPLITS

Newark Bears Divide Pair of One-Run Decisions With Jersey City

(By The Associated Press)

If you're looking for two new reasons why Rochester Red Wings are atop the International League baseball standings, you don't need to look farther than the pitching records of Herschel Lyons and Charlie Brumbeloe. Both of them yesterday climbed into the select circle of Rochester hurlers who have won 12 victories this season.

Lyons, pitching a 4 2-3-innings relief job, was credited with the first victory, by a 6-5 score, while Brumbeloe scattered eight hits for a 4-2 nightcap victory.

When Rochester's margin in the first game was reduced to one run and the outlook dark, Lyons went in to pitch. He fanned the last two batters in the fifth to strand two runners and yielded only two singles the rest of the way.

Buffalo Bisons let go a murderous blast on Montreal pitching, socking out 20 hits in the opener to win by 18-10. Montreal's Lee Grissom came back to hold the Bisons to four hits and win, 7-3. The split gave Montreal the series, three games to two.

In the first game five Montreal pitchers saw action, with Ray Davis, former Cincinnati Red, charged with the defeat.

Newark Bears split a pair of one-run decisions with Jersey City Giants, winning the first 4-3 and losing the second by the same score. Tommy Byrne, Wake Forest college star, made his debut in the first game and let the Jaycees down with five hits.

Hugh East limited the Bears to six hits in the second game but spoiled his performance by issuing seven walks. The deciding runs came in the sixth when a hit by Epps with the bases loaded scored two mates.

Syracuse Chiefs won the second game of their doubleheader against Baltimore 10-4 by pounding pitcher Dick Midkiff hard, after the Orioles staged a pair of rallies to win the opener 6-5.

Chicago, July 12 — All's Jake with the Cubs now.

That is, all's Jake Mooty with the Cubs.

Mooty? That's the gent who has hurled five straight wins for the Chicago Nationals and he's only a freshman this year!

Mediocre with Syracuse last year the big Irish pitcher has proven the class of the Cub rookies and that includes one, Dominic Dalleandro, a $75,000 piece of Pacific coast property.

Mooty wasn't given a starting chance this year. That came later. But he has surprised one and all by hurling five straight wins against no defeats and may be on the trail followed by Atley Donald, the Yankee star who dashed through 12 straight victories last year before being tagged for a loss.

Born at Bennett, Texas, 26 years ago, Jake went to a local grammar school and then to a Port Worth high school. In school he played more basketball than baseball. Upon graduation he enrolled at Texas A. and M. college and was a star in several sports.

He was offered a contract by Wilmington in 1935 and participated in 11 games.

Mooty followed up his Wilmington stay by terms at Toronto then Cincinnati and finally Syracuse. He remained with Syracuse during the seasons of 1938 and '39. He was drafted by the Cubs at the 1939 selection meeting.

Mooty has good control and fields his position well. He is married and has one child. He plays golf and hunts in his spare time.

Peterboro Swimmer Sets New Mark For 200-Yard Breast Stroke

Verdun, Que., July 15 (CP)—The depth of Verdun's new municipal swimming pool and the lowness of the turning walls were credited generally with having prevented a few more records being broken in the 1940 Dominion Swimming Championships.

In a night and an afternoon filled with closely-fought events, big Jack Marshall of Peterborough, Ont., was the only swimmer able to better marks set up in previous years. He turned his broad shoulders into a powerhouse Saturday to win the 200-yard breast stroke for senior men in two minutes, 33 4-10 seconds, 1 2-5 seconds better than the old mark of D. Benedict of Toronto.

The only other time comparing with Marshall's was made Friday night by 16-year-old Irene Barr of Hamilton who swam her heat in the 100-yard free style for senior women in one minute, 4 1-5 seconds. The time bettered her own junior mark of 1.04 5-10, but it was not set up as a junior record since it was made in a senior event.

Saturday the sensational young Hamilton speedster slowed down and failed to get better than third place in the final of the event. She was beaten by Kay Gordon and Margaret Taggart, Winnipeg girls who placed first and second. Miss Gordon's time was 1.05 1-5.

Irene won the 100-yard free style for junior women in 1.06 1-5, coming in ahead of two other Hamilton girls, Bernice Belbeck and Margaret Cox. She was second in the 200-yard free style senior, behind Dorothy Hobson of Toronto and ahead of Ethel Gilbert of Winnipeg.

Like the women's events the men's speed races were considerably slower than the record times. Jack McCormick of Hamilton won the 100-yard senior free style in 58 1-5 seconds, five seconds slower than the record figure. Ted St. Aubin of Hamilton won the 440-yard senior free style in 5.31 2-5, compared with the record of 4.48 7-10.

TENNIS

Quebec, July 15 —(CP)— Canadian names were entered today as titleholders in every senior division of the Canadian Tennis Championships for the first time in six years.

Leading the way in breaking the domination of United States players in the tournament, which ended here Saturday, were the Vancouver duo of Eleanor Young, Jean Milne and Montreal's Phil Pearson, who together gained shares in four titles. The other, the men's singles, went to Don McDiarmid of Ottawa. McDiarmid took a straight-set victory over Lewis Duff of Montreal in the final.

Miss Young won the women's singles title. She defeated her city-mate, Miss Milne, 7-5, 7-5, in the final to succeed Elizabeth Blackman of Detroit as champion.

First ranking woman player in the Dominion, Miss Young teamed with her singles opponent to win the women's doubles crown over the Montreal duo of Mrs. Rene Bolte-Francoise Lacasse. In the mixed doubles, Miss Milne and Pearson beat Miss Young and Montreal's Roger Durivage in the final.

Former Davis Cup player, Pearson gained his second share of a title when he paired with Ross Wilson of Toronto to defeat Duff and McDiarmid in the men's doubles final. They were forced to extra games for an 11-9 victory in the initial set but won the next two, 6-3, 6-3.

HAMMERIN' HENRY TO MEET JENKINS

Will Go Twelve Rounds Before 40,000 People at the Polo Grounds

New York, July 15 —(AP)— A Negro fights a former army mule skinner.

That's the prize ring's prize offering for the month—and there's no title in sight for either of the fighters.

Seldom has fistiana pitted two such extremes as Henry Armstrong the welterweight king, and Lew Jenkins, the Texas thin man who ruled the lightweight division.

But for all their apparent differences, they have one thing in common—the pound for pound ability to fight better than anybody else their size, and it is pronounced that their 12-round Wednesday night meeting will lure some 40,000 to the Polo Grounds.

Armstrong, who once held the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight titles at one time, has an autobiography almost ready for the publishers, but the most interesting chapter may have to be written after the fight—if Henry can still write by then.

Because of his greater experience and durability, he'll be favored to win, even though he hasn't set anyone aflame with his training camp showing.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

According to Jimmie Powers, sports editor of the New York Daily News, there are ten different types of ball fans. Reviewing "the wolves" recently, Powers classified the types of fans as follows:

"(1) The 'If-Fan.' He always has an alibi. 'If Wyatt hadn't hurt his knee—'...'If Jurges hadn't fought with Magerkurth—'

"(2) The 'So-What Fan.' He goes placidly to the game. He seldom gets excited. If his team wins, 'swell.' If his team loses, then the other fellows were better. 'So-What?'

"(3) The 'Lucky Fan.' Everything is luck. The other fellow hadn't hit a home run all year. He picked the one inning and hit his first and ruins us. It's all luck and nothing can be done about it, that's all.

"(4) The 'Turn-About Fan.' He criticizes all players in league except those on his club. He doubts their courage, sneers at their ability, discounts their records. But as soon as they are traded to his club, he makes a quick switch and starts boosting them.

"(5) The 'Razzberry Fan.' He boos all afternoon. Winning is everything. If other team is better cripple 'em! If the other pitcher is going good, spike him, or pick a fight and rattle him. If the rival sluggers are hitting the ball—dust 'em off! Fracture their skull! (A nice guy).

"(6) The 'Wisher Fan.' He's always wishing for something better, no matter how many other teams are worse off. I wish they'd bought Joe Blow, or Willie Whiff — then we'd show 'em something.

"(7) The 'Give-Up Fan.' He's a real booster for about two months. Then, if his team goes bad he grumbles. 'I give up. No more for me.' But next year he's back again.

"(8) The 'Just as Good Fan.' His team is down in the race but his third baseman is 'just as good' as third baseman on the No. 1 team. His infield is 'just as good' as the champion's. All up and down the lineup, his boys are 'just as good' as anybody's. He can't explain why his team isn't first. And you shouldn't ask him, anyway.

"(9) The 'Wait'll Next Year Fan.' He believes all he reads about rookies. He can take a beating this year and lives on rosy hopes of a future that never comes. He smiles pityingly when you tell him how terrible his club is, because he knows that they'll be great. .... 'next year'.

"(10) The 'Loyalist.' He's 100 per cent faithful to the end, rain or shine, first place or last. His team never does anything wrong. His manager's judgment is perfect. The fellows on his club are the handsomest, bravest, fightingest gang in the league—in both leagues—in the world! He shares their sorrows and joys and win or lose, for better or worse, they're HIS TEAM.

"Well, there you are. Can you identify yourself? Or any of your pals?"

However, Mr. Powers apparently does not have to attend softball games, as there is still another type of ball fan. The one who turns his head when the collection box comes around, but who is loudest in his criticism of the players, umpires and who can usually be dentified with his annoyance of other patrons by telling them how the game should be played.

After last week's results the standings of the local softball leagues are:

John C. Grimek, well-known Yankee weightlifter and chosen as Mister America over 60 other weight-tossers at the recent National lifting contests, scoffs at the more or less popular idea that weight-lifting causes muscleboundedness.

Grimek explains: "There is no such thing as muscleboundedness. People get me angry sometimes and I speak harsh. They say 'Let me see you scratch back of your shoulder.' That means if I cannot scratch back of my shoulder I am bound. But I say, 'No, why should I? I have no bite back of my shoulder so why should I scratch where I have no bite?'

"That usually calls a halt."

Do you remember when a 21-year-old, Gene Sarazen, won the United States open golf title with 288 for 72 holes at Skokie, Ill., 18 years ago today. Bobby Jones, Atlanta, Ga., amateur, tied for second place with J. L. Black, one stroke back. Sarazen has won all major golf titles since 1932 and this year tied with Lawson Little for the U. S. open, losing the play-off.

Co-operating with the Movie Industry's war charity night, the Corby A.C. postponed tonight's Picton at Corby softball game at the Flats, leaving a clear field for the war charity movie night across Canada.

The guys along Broadway claim Wednesday night's Henry Armstrong - Lew Jenkins scrap will just about be the top scrap of the season. Armstrong isn't enjoying the favoritism in the betting that dominated his bouts for the past few years. Armstrong has passed his peak and going down the grade, but he still carries sting in both hands despite the acknowledgement of Jenkins' ability of slinging potent leather.

SPORT SPICE:—"Fat Freddie" Fitsimmons entered the baseball hall of fame when he chalked up his 200th win over the weekend . . . The Yankees picked up three games over the weekend and gained considerable ground on the league leaders. . . . With no softball on tonight all three local theatres should be well patronized for the all-Canada movie war night effort of the movie industry. . . . However, it's R.C.A.F. "Flyers" vs the "Oilers" at the Flats tomorrow night in another war benefit, this time it's in favor of our own Belleville boys now with the 34th Battery. . . . Skipper Maurice Callaghan says the Yacht Club will race for the Mikel Trophy on June 21st this year. . . . The Mikel Trophy is a challenge cup raced for each year in June, but the season was so backward that it has been necessary to postpone it until July 21.

SHINING WINDOWS
by Kathleen Norris~

INSTALMENT 7.

At eleven Ben brought the car around from the garage, with the rain curtains buttoned. It seemed strange to be going anywhere except in the big car; they started down the wet steps rather silently, and stowed their suitcases snugly. The mother and father watched them from the shelter of the big hood over the door.

"See you at La Perdita!" Joyce called out in farewell. She saw her mother's face wrinkle with tears.

Ben drove down to the Bayshore Highway. It was all straight ahead then, the long road went in a direct line southward past the towns, San Mateo, Redwood, Palo Alto, San Jose. The rain continued to fall steadily.

"By George, I believe the old bus will make it!" Ben said when they had had coffee and sandwiches at Morgan Hill and were nearing the end of their road. Joyce's eyes had been busy, had been entertained all the way; Dodo, in the back seat, had dozed, with her head against Lissy's shoulder and the cat in her lap asleep; Lissy had sat erect, not interested, hopeless, weary.

"Gilroy three miles, Ben. And it's only quarter to two."

Joyce was conscious of being tired of the seat and tired of the rain and a little chilly. Ben yawned, shook his head as a dog might, drove on.

They took the wet road toward the west. On the right, as the winding highway went up into the hills, was a faded sign: "Cooley's Sulphur Well. Picnics." It looked forlorn and forgotten in the rain.

Joyce was getting very excited now. They went in at an open farm gate and past a clump of redwoods. Off toward the west the hill rose steeply.

Presently a shabby rabble of collapsing barns and fences came into view with some sparse willows and one great oak beside them. Toward the north, on a bare rise of ground, the farmhouse stood, stark, square, dingy, hideous.

It looked what it was, the cheapest structure unskilled labor could devise from planks and paint. The paint had been gray; it was streaked with yellow now and chipping from the walls. There were steep front steps, a forbidding front door. The lower floor was raised some four feet above the level of the packed hard wet earth outside; the house looked as if it were balanced crazily on stilts.

Ben brought the car to a stop. Rain was dripping from everything.

"Do we get out?" Lissy presently asked fearfully.

"We'll have to get out, I suppose," Ben said, not very sure about it.

"We can't," Lissy said opening the rear door but making no move to descend, "we simply cannot stay here."

In the gray rainy light of midafternoon the yard presented a desolate picture. It was littered with rusting cans, corn shucks, fruit boxes, rags, chains, ropes. Dust and dirt and rubbish had accumulated upon them and between them and around them; water spattered dismally over the whole.

Dodo, stiff with cold and fatigue, had just painfully awakened from restless sleep. "Oh, where are we? Oh, is this it?" she stammered, tottering on her feet. The cat was down and away like a flash.

Ben looked at his keys.

"Side door," he read. "Unlocked of course! I knew it would be."

The side door was indeed unlocked and even hanging open. They all went into a small square entry and opened a door that gave upon the kitchen. Joyce suspected that their hearts failed them all, as hers did her, when they saw it.

The kitchen was a large room with a narrow wooden stairway angling up from one corner to the floor above. The floor was plain pine, splintery, black, oily; there was a dark tin sink, a stove rusted and cold, a large table. Otherwise, except for a woodbox into which rubbish indescribable had been thrown, the place was unfurnished.

On the way down the travelers had stopped for milk, bread, butter, honey. They set these things in their wet paper bags on the table. Lissy shuddered in the stale smells and vaultlike chill of the kitchen. Joyce said:

"Ben, could we build a fire?"

"Yep," he said, roused from a sort of stupor of bewilderment and disappointment. "The old man couldn't mean that we're to stay here?" he asked in a troubled undertone.

"I don't know," Joyce answered doubtfully.

"I wish dad had come with us," Dodo said falteringly.

"They may be here any moment." This was Joyce. "We'll have to do something; we'll have to get this place warmed a little. See if you can find something to make a fire with, Ben."

They took off their spattered coats and hats; looked into an adjoining room to find it completely unfurnished except for some small square platforms and the trunks and boxes that had come down from the city, and shudderingly shut the door.

Ben returned from the investigation of an outhouse with an armful of wood. The stove lids, hanging with fringes of soot, were opened by Ben's inexpert hands, the fuel crammed inside. Blue smoke poured into the kitchen in clouds, door and windows had to be flung open to carry away its choking thickness.

Presently there was a crackle of wood and a half-hearted spurt of flame. Smoke still seeped out in circles around the lids, but there was some warmth. The Ballards gathered about it, holding out their cold hands, and Joyce put some milk on to heat in a battered saucepan.

They investigated the crates that were in the dining room. It was hard to find what was wanted among all the newspaper-wrapped items.

The milk on the stove continued to look cold, unaffected; a fine film of soot gathered on it, making it grey. Joyce and Ben went upstairs and unlocked a closed room; here were chairs piled one on another, tables, beds.

"Where are blankets, Joyce? It's going to be colder than Greenland here tonight; you can feel it already."

"They're in one of those big rolls downstairs, blankets and sheets."

They went downstairs again. The milk was surprisingly hot. Ben had brought down two chairs; he sat on the woodbox and Joyce on the table, and the four drank the heartening food with deep gasps of appreciation.

"Now, what had we better do?" asked Ben, feeling better.

"There's an old broom there, I think," Joyce said as neither Dodo nor Lissy seemed able to make any helpful suggestion, "we ought to clean out this room and that next room, and get out the mattresses and sheets, and sort of get things started. By the time we get some beds made, mother and dad'll be here."

Lissy and Dodo looked actually frightened. Nervously and quietly they followed her suggestion, moving about like girls in a bad dream. Ben found a knife and began to slash the burlap and cords that held the mattress rolls. Rubbish and dust began to move across the splintery floor ahead of Dodo's unaccustomed broom; Lissy carried tins and boxes into the closet; Joyce and Ben labored with the bedding.

They were dirty, weary, their hands were grimed; there was no soap, no hot water nor towels with which to clean them. Joyce dared not think of tomorrow—of all the days ahead.

In the train of her uneasy thoughts came the discovery that there were no lights at all in the farmhouse. No electricity, no gas, no lamps. Dusk was falling over the rainy world like a cloud at five o'clock there was no way of lighting the kitchen.

By this time, with a housewifeliness of which the three Ballard girls had never suspected themselves sheets had been laid smoothly on the floor of the small room that flanked the kitchen opposite the dining-room, mattresses laid on the sheets and some attempt made to lay blankets and pillows in place. A knock at the kitchen door late in the afternoon brought them all to face it breathlessly, with a general gasp of relief. "Mother!" Dodo said.

But instead it was a muddy-booted blond giant of a farmer in a mackinaw coat. This was Knud Paarsen, whose place was next to theirs down the hill; he had brought them a telegram.

"Dearest children," it said. "Cousin Laura dying we come tomorrow." It was signed "mother". There was but brief comment on this news. Cousin Laura was always dying at inconvenient moments. The Ballards returned to the problem of food.

Joyce had found among the boxes and packages some scores of tiny red and green birthday candles. By the light of these the Ballards made their supper of bread and stewed tomatoes and chocolate; at eight o'clock they were all stretched wearily on their mattresses.

Joyce wakened to the monotonous drip of rain in the morning. Lamely, stiffly, shuddering with cold, she went to the kitchen door and looked in to see Ben still sound asleep in a rolled cocoon of blankets.

It was a terrible morning. The strangeness, the inconvenience of the ugly uncomfortable house hampered them in every direction. The stove smoked again; a cow, penned somewhere nearby, lowed dismally at intervals of two or three minutes, was silent and lower again.

Ben, Lissy and Dodo were disheveled, tired, despairing. Even Joyce's new philosophy was put to an acid test.

Awkwardly, disgustedly, they again attacked the familiar bread and butter and coffee. Some one had found some tins of milk; the fresh milk was gone. They had merely opened their suitcases on the night before; the surface contents were scattered about. Bedding dragged on the floor that was tracked with rain water and mud.

"This is simply incredible!" Lissy muttered.

"If we could once get the stove to working and the place cleaned up," Joyce said. "Of course it's got a wonderful view of the whole valley and there are those little canyons back of the barn. It has—possibilities."

"It has possibilities of arson," Ben said.

STRUCK BY ENGINE

Smiths Falls, Ont., July 15—(CP) —Robert J. Hutchison, 46, Canadian Pacific Railway brakeman, was killed Sunday when he was struck by an engine at nearby Finch.

Apparently Hutchison leaned out too far on the gangway of the engine of his own train and another train coming in opposite direction on the double track struck him. He was on his usual run from Smiths Falls to Montreal when the accident occurred.

KITTY WAS A HOT-WEATHER OFFENDER

SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT 'B.O.'

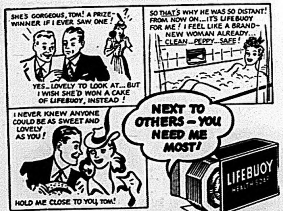
The adult skin has 2 to 3 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyper-pyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it. Summer heat, nervous excitement, heavy clothes or warm rooms quickly decompose this sweat deposit —turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

IN her photos, Kitty had everything—a gorgeous face ... a perfect figure. Women envied her. Men sought to meet her. But, in real life, Kitty didn't have a single close friend. For some strange reason she believed herself immune to the most common enemy of popularity—she had become a "Hot-Weather Offender."

All of us must perspire to live, just as we must breathe. Warm, sweltering weather increases perspiration—and what is worse, it speeds up decomposition. Left on the body, under the arms, around the waist, sweat deposits go stale—decompose. Then YOU have "B.O."

"B.O." can ruin romance, business and social chances. Check it before it starts with Lifebuoy. Lifebuoy contains an exclusive deodorizing ingredient not found in any other leading toilet soap. Used regularly in your daily bath, Lifebuoy protects you from offending others—stops "B.O."—and its generous purifying lather washes stale sweat deposits away. It is also kind to the skin—20% milder than many so-called "beauty" and "baby" soaps, by actual test.



SHE'S GORGEOUS, TOM! A PRIZE-WINNER IF I EVER SAW ONE!
YES—LOVELY TO LOOK AT... BUT I WISH SHE'D WON A CAKE OF LIFEBUOY, INSTEAD!
SO THAT'S WHY HE WAS SO DISTANT! FROM NOW ON... IT'S LIFEBUOY FOR ME! I FEEL LIKE A BRAND-NEW WOMAN ALREADY... CLEAN... PEPPY... SAFE!
I NEVER KNEW ANYONE COULD BE AS SWEET AND LOVELY AS YOU!
HOLD ME CLOSE TO YOU, TOM!
NEXT TO OTHERS—YOU NEED ME MOST!

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and I was sitting on the floor just thinking saying, Aw G wizzickers, gosh shang the luck, I'll never be able to do it so I might as well stop trying.

What are you trying to do? pop said, and I said, Nothing right now, but I waisted about an hour trying it this afternoon.

Well what's it all about? pop said. Perhaps with the experience gleened in the passing years I can cast a ray or 2 of light that may sufficiently clear your path so that you can successfully grope on alone. In the brief battle of life the winners are those who know enough to save their own time by taking advantage of the expriences of others, he said, and I said, Well did you ever hear of trying to pat your stummick and rub your head at the same time?

Well yes, I believe I've heard tell of that strange art, or science, though I dont remember ever having given it my personel attention, pop said, and I said, Well that's a lucky thing for you, because I've tried and I've tried, and I can pat my stummick with my left hand while I'm rubbing my head and I can rub it with my left hand while I'm patting my head, and I can even rub it with my right hand while I'm patting my head but darn if I can pat it with my right hand while I'm rubbng my head. Go ahead and try it, pop, I said.

I'm afraid I'd start out a defeated man, it's only in youth that ambitions can vault so high, pop said And there are certain destinies that must be worked out by oneself along the rough path of trial and error, and I fear this is one of them, he said

Meaning he proberly couldn't help me, wich he properly couldn't.

PETAIN REGIME MAY PEG FRANC TO U.S. DOLLAR

Grenoble, France, July 13 (AP).—The Petain government has decided pound sterling and peg it to the to detach the French franc from the United States dollar, the newspaper Le Petit Dauphinois stated today in a dispatch from Vichy.

The dispatch said the government had not yet announced the rate to the dollar, but the franc, which formerly was 176⅝ to the pound, now may be set at 43.30 to the dollar.

"The strength of the government and the confidence of Frenchmen in it will give the franc its true value, which will be mainly determined by the nation's working capacity," the dispatch said.

The franc thus will become a strictly controlled currency with the rate on the official market based on United States cents, the newspaper added, "and will represent the real economic wealth of our country".

Cheese Gains Fraction In Light Trading

Cheese registered the only price change on the Toronto open produce market Saturday, gaining a fraction in trading that was virtually at a standstill. Eggs and butter closed the week on a steady footing.

Trading in cheese was so limited that prices quoted were really nominal only. New, large current-make stock advanced slightly to 13 7-8c on the wholesale market, with some brokers asking 14c. Offerings were few.

Butter was firm at 21 1-2c in quiet trading. Receipts were cleaned up without difficulty. Holders of Western butter asked 22 1-2c but no sales were reported.

Eggs held steady. Receipts were ample for buyers' requirements and the usual light Saturday trading prevailed. A-large eggs in the graded section sold at a range of 25 1-2 to 26c unchanged from Friday.

St. Swithin's Legend Not Fulfilled In Canada

Toronto, July 15—(CP)— Today is St. Swithin's Day and if an ancient English legend means anything it is going to be a rainy summer for Ontario and Quebec, a drought for the prairies and fine tourist weather for the Maritimes and the Pacific coast.

The old legend is expressed in this verse:

St. Swithin's Day, if thou dust rain,
For 40 days it will remain.
St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair,
For 40 days 'twill rain no mair.

Dominion weather experts here said today there would be showers during the day in parts of Ontario and Quebec and no rain in the West or the Maritimes.

There is no need to worry though. The weathermen also say that the St. Swithin's legend may have been fulfilled at times in England, where it originated, but never in Canada. There have been some dry seasons on the prairies but even in the worst drought years there always was some precipitation, possibly a few drops, to break the continuity of the dry weather. And there has never been a completely wet or completely dry summer in any other part of Canada, they said.

MANY SOLDIERS TO SEE WIN-THE-WAR SHOW

Dartmouth, N.S., July 15—(CP)—At least 100 members of a military unit stationed here will enjoy the "Win-The-War" show at Dartmouth theatres tonight through the generosity of an unidentified Dartmouth resident. The resident bought War Savings Certificates, entitling him to 100 tickets for the show. He sent the tickets to the unit's commanding officer.

PLANS TO EVACUATE 8,500 CHILDREN

London, July 15—(CP)—The Ministry of Health today announced plans to evacuate 8,500 children from the southeast coast towns of Eastborne, Hastings, Bexhill, Rye, New Haven and Seaford to inland areas on Sunday. An additional 3,000 children, who had been evacuated to Worthing from London in September, will also be moved inland.

BRITAIN PREPARED

Effort, Vigilance Redoubled

Then, looking beyond the "impending assault which we await undismayed," he asked, "why do I dwell on all this?"

"Not, surely, to induce any slackening of effort or vigilance," he said.

"On the contrary, these must be redoubled and we must prepare not only for the summer but for the winter, not only for 1941 but for 1942, when the war will, I trust, take a different form from the defensive in which it has hitherto been bound."

Even as he spoke, Britain issued a new tally of that "defensive" war.

In the air, he announced five Nazi dive-bombers and two escorting fighter planes brought down during an attack on a ship convoy in the Dover Straits yesterday. One R.A.F. plane was lost then. R.A.F. raiders Saturday night struck at 14 airdromes and other military objectives in Germany, Holland and Belgium and downed one Nazi defending plane.

The loss of one R.A.F. plane, occurred in Saturday's action.

A "few enemy aircraft" dropped bombs in southeast and southwest England last night with "slight injury" to one person, the government announced and later a person was reported killed in another raid.

In the war at sea, the Admiralty announced loss of the 1,350-ton destroyer Escort with two of her seamen. The Escort, second surface warship lost by Britain in the Mediterranean, was torpedoed by a submarine and sank while being towed to port. The Admiralty also announced the submarine Shark, 670 tons, was over-due and presumed lost.

The Shark was the 10th British submarine lost in the war, including the Oxley, which was destroyed by an accidental explosion last Sept. 11 and thus became Britain's first naval loss. Another of the Shark's class, the Sterlet, was reported lost April 30.

The Shark normally carried a crew of 40.

The sinking by a submarine of the 4,180-ton anti-aircraft cruiser Calypso in the Mediterranean was announced June 15.

Not all of Mr. Churchill's speech was devoted to the future. He began by explaining again the necessity of British naval action to immobilize the French fleet, saying that "the transference of these ships to Hitler would have endangered the security both of Great Britain and the United States."

Then, recalling that July 14 is "the national festival of France," he predicted "some of us will live to see a 14th of July when a liberated France......will once again stand forward as the champion of the freedom and rights of man."

Stating that "the peoples of Europe will not be ruled for long by the Nazi gestapo." Mr. Churchill then turned to Hitler's plan for an invasion of Britain. He declared that, on the evidence of plans for Nazi conquest of Poland, Norway, Denmark, the low countries and France, there undoubtedly was such a plan for Britain.

But he claimed the new strength Britain gained during the last month meant such a plan "must have had to be entirely recast."

No Placid Submission

The Prime Minister said there "will be no placid lying down of the people in submission," but that "every village, every town and every city" would be defended and that "we would rather see London laid in ruins and ashes than that it should be tamely and abjectly enslaved."

As to the date of the German attack, he said, "perhaps it will come tonight. Perhaps it will come next week. Perhaps it will never come."

To which the German radio replied late last night:

"We wonder if Mr. Churchill was counting buttons on his waistcoat when he said that. The answer is: Not this week, neither next and certainly not never, but very definitely some time."

SOLDIER FACES MURDER CHARGE

Corp. Richard Anderson of St. Marys and Corp. Jim Redfern of Stratford were witnesses of the shooting. Moulton is alleged to have used a rifle belonging to Pte. Norman Lee of Vancouver Island and ammunition from a stock issued to Pte. H. Jones of Tavistock, Ont. Only one of five shells in the gun were used.

Moulton was said to have threatened to shoot Phillips when they met here earlier in the day. On returning to camp, Moulton is said to have entered a tent he formerly occupied and taken the gun and ammunition. Soldiers said he was intoxicated and that he cursed Phillips violently before pulling the trigger.

Coroner Dr. E. T. Kellam said no inquest would be held unless ordered by the Attorney-General

Phillips was popular in his home town where he sang in the United Church choir. He was a member of village hockey and baseball teams.

No date has been set for the funeral which will be held from the home of John Phillips, no relation, of Sebringville. Jack Phillips of Tottenham is the only known survivor.

R.C.A.F. RECEIVES

A Lockheed bomber thundered overhead and three Westland-Lysander co-operation planes paid an aerial salute to the Governor-General by performing intricate manoeuvres in formation over the airdrome.

Then before a group of about 200 women, representing the I.O.D.E., Mrs. W. B. Horkins of Toronto, the Order's National President, handed a cheque for $100,000 to the Princess Alice who in turn gave it to Air Commodore L. S. Breadner, Chief of Air Staff.

The new plane, produced in Montreal, painted in dark camouflage and ready for action was drawn up at the edge of the hangar and the ceremony took place almost under its snub nose.

Mrs. Horkins said that "behind our endeavor in purchasing this plane is an impelling desire to help the Empire. The response to our efforts showed what women working as a unit can accomplish."

Money for the plane came from all over the Dominion, even up in the Yukon where $5,000 was collected.

DOUGLAS HUFFMAN

Probably Leaned Against Pedal

Douglas, while playing at hide-and-seek with his three-year-old sister, Doris, climbed into the parked automobile to hide. It is believed by authorities that the little lad leaned against the clutch pedal and released the clutch, thus allowing the car to roll off the dock, as the vehicle was found to be in gear when located in 20 feet of water off the dock here. The car passed the horrified mother as it rolled into the bay, Mrs. Huffman having been sitting within five feet of the car as it rolled unmolested off the dock.

The screams of the woman soon brought assistance and men dived into the water in attempts to release the confined boy, but the pressure was too great. Robert Babcock of this village, and Harry McCreary, Belleville, succeeded in breaking a window to relieve the pressure, but it was not until thirty minutes of effort that Mr. Babcock finally cut a hole in the top of the car and pulled the child to the surface. The car was later raised by two Belleville tow trucks.

An inhalator was rushed from Belleville and under Assistant Fire Chief Gerald Vance and Assistant Chief Lawler of the Kingston department, the firemen labored over the boy until Dr. R. S. Gibson pronounced the lad dead at 6.03 p.m., one hour and 12 minutes after the accident occurred.

Coroner Dr. R. A. Thompson of Wellington, was present and announced no inquest would be necessary. The accident was investigated by Motorcycle Patrolman Jack Hatch.

Several of the persons attempting to gain entrance to the submerged vehicle beneath the water, sustained badly cut hands and arm laceration as the result of their attempts to break the window glass in a futile effort to gain entrance to the vehicle.

PEACE ATTEMPT

ing it was shipment of supplies from Western Powers on the Burma Road.

3. Britain, although contending that closing the Burma Road would not greatly handicap China, offered to do so for three months, but would retain "freedom of action" if the settlement failed to suit China, Japan and all others interested.

That results of this peace attempt would be known soon, it was reported in a broadcast at Singapore by S. W. Jones, acting governor of Malaya, who declared "His Majesty's government will go to the greatest length to avoid seconding and prolonging the war in the east and will put forward every effort it can afford to end it".

However, this statement by an official virtually unknown in the diplomatic world was described in London as not intended to portend a new policy toward Japan. Rather, it was believed Britain intended to offer some basis on which peace discussions could be built. Authoritative quarters suggested this might include concessions to Japan in Hong Kong and over the Burma road, China's last important link with the outside world.

It was said reliably here today that Mr. Jones' statement was made without the knowledge of the Foreign Office. However, informed sources said that Anglo-Japanese conversations in progress at Tokyo "touch upon restrictions of traffic on the Burma road as a temporary measure, possibly for three months."

(A possible new source of friction arose today, however, when the Japanese navy, claiming "military necessity", issued a proclamation barring all shipping along sections of the Chinese coast south of Shanghai.

(British authorities, hit hardest by this measure, announced they would insist on the right of British ships to operate in these areas, and would hold the Japanese responsible for any losses.)

In Tokyo British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie continued discussions with Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita over the Japanese demand that the Burma road be closed to transport of arms to China. British sources pointed out these negotiations were aimed at a general settlement, of which the Burma road question is only a phase.

Informed quarters said it probably would be some time before any definite settlement was reached.

The diplomatic correspondent of The London News Chronicle commented:—

"The guiding factor which Britain, preoccupied as she is with the continental war must follow in any far eastern policy is the attitude of the United States.

"That attitude . . . is conditioned by America's problem of defending two ocean front with a one-ocean navy. . . .

"Until the United States has solved the problem by building a two ocean navy—which obviously must take time—it is believed that President Roosevelt will be inclined to temporize as regards the Far East".

Shanghai, July 15 (AP)—The Japanese navy moved today to close the last loopholes along the China coast through which supplies have been reaching that part of China still holding out against Japanese invasion.

Vice-Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese China sea fleet, issued a proclamation prohibiting traffic from midnight tonight (11 a.m. EST) of all ships in specified areas along the coasts of Chekiang and Fukien Provinces, south of Shanghai.

Shipping of all foreign powers but mainly of Great Britain will be affected and British authorities announced immediately they would insist on the right of British ships to remain in the forbidden areas or to enter them or depart.

They said they would hold the Japanese responsible for any losses suffered.

"Military necessity" was given as the reason for the Japanese move.

Admiral Shimada's proclamation said ships entering or attempting to enter the areas concerned would be detained by the Japanese navy which would assume no responsibility for any losses incurred.

Areas affected included those around Hangchow, port at the head of Hangchow Bay, 110 miles southwest of Shanghai, in Chekiang Province; Wenchow, also in Chekiang Province, and Foochow, capital of Fukien Province.

"Progress Made," Says Tokyo.

Tokyo, July 15 (AP).—The Japanese foreign office announced today that "progress has been made" in the latest discussion between British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie and Japanese Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita about Japan's demands tha Britain close the Burma road to China.

It was reported on reliable authority that a compromise plan to be presented to London and Burma stipulated a cessation of traffic over China's last lifeline for two months.

It was understood here that the British will not permit a Japanese inspection party to enter Burma, as the French permitted in Indo-China.

Authoritative sources said the Burma road was intrinsically unimportant, since "a mere trickle" of goods has been reaching China by that route.

Chungking, July 15 (AP).—A Chinese foreign office spokesman declared today that China would "take appropriate action" if Great Britain decides to close the Burma road, vital supply artery, to traffic with China.

He recalled that Britain had introduced a resolution in the League of Nations which bound all members to take no measures detrimental to China's interests.

If Britain is "betraying China", one official said, it would "serve France, Britain and even the United States right if China made peace with Japan, freeing the latter for military action in southeastern Asia."

DOUBLE FATALITY,

Patsy Alberico, passenger in Herbert's car, is in dangerous condition in hospital at Welland. His left leg was amputated above the knee and his right leg was fractured. Nine other passengers were injured less seriously.

Three children were killed Saturday when struck by motor vehicles. Jeannette Jones, four, died at Sudbury, two-year-old Keith Hill was killed at Kirkland Lake and Raymond Dietrich, four, was injured fatally at Kapuskasing.

Pinned Under Machine

George Denniss, 60-year-old Port Stanley trucker, was killed Sunday near Straffordville when the truck in which he and four companions were returning from a fishing trip went out of control and turned over on the road. Dennis was pinned beneath the machine.

Pte. Andrew Phillips, 28, of Carlingford, was shot and killed yesterday at the Perth Regiment camp in Queen Victoria Park near Niagara Falls. Pte. William E. Moulton, 32, of Stratford, was arrested afterwards and charged with murder. Police claim Moulton shot Phillips with a bullet from a .303 calibre army rifle after he had threatened earlier in the day to kill him.

Murdoch C. MacLean, 48, educationist and member of the Dominion Statistics Bureau Education Branch was drowned in the Ottawa River at Britannia and 21-year-old Ubald Roy of Cyrville is believed to have lost his life in the Rideau River near Ottawa.

Drowned in Quinte Bay

Four-year-old Douglas Huffman of Belleville was drowned when an automobile plunged into the Bay of Quinte at Rednersville. The child was in the car, parked near the edge of the dock, and is believed to have pushed in the clutch. The car rolled off the wharf.

Donald Carson, 62, was gored and trampled to death by an enraged bull on his farm in Keppel Township near Owen Sound Saturday. Almost every bone in the man's body was broken and crushed.

Robert J. Hutchison, 46, Canadian Pacific Railway brakeman, was killed Sunday when struck by a train, when he fell from the engine of his own train.

FRENCH RECALL

From that brief ceremony Petain turned for a farewell visit with former President Lebrun and then hastened to his office to pursue the tasks of government.

New Regime

Moving swiftly to complete the setup of the new regime, Petain announced that Rene Belin, formerly second in command of the General Confederation of Labor, had been named Minister of Industrial Production and Labor.

At the same time Jean Ybarnegaray, Minister of Youth and Family, disclosed measures where being taken for organized leadership of children. His program called for government-directed surveillance of children from an early age.

The Ministry of the Interior ordered a number of French newspaper men and politicians to leave the provincial capital as undesirables.

French sources said that the latest information concerning the British attack on the French fleet off Mers El-Kebir, Algeria, July 3 indicated that 1,000 French sailors had been killed.

They also claimed that the British battlecruiser Hood had been seriously damaged and two British destroyers sunk.

(A British source at Gibraltar said the Hood never had been damaged.)

GAS RATIONED IN AUSTRALIA

Minister of Supply Promises to Reconsider Matter After Many Protests Received

Melbourne, Australia, July 15—(AP)—The proposed rationing of gasoline in Australia, twice as drastic as expected, has aroused such widespread protest that Frederick Stewart, Minister of Supply has promised to reconsider the measure.

The protest followed announcement 10 days ago that gasoline will be rationed next month. Private automobiles will be allowed eight to 18 gallons monthly according to horsepower, and commercial vehicles 20 gallons. Trucks will be grouped to reduce aggregate mileage and each group will receive special rations.

The government wishes to reduce consumption by one third, because of the need of conserving overseas exchange for defence purposes, because of the risk of transporting gasoline by water and owing to greatly increased defence requirements. The Royal Australian Air Force alone will consume about 15,000,000 gallons a years.

50 Per Cent of Supply Imported

Gasoline is Australia's largest non-sterling import. Sixty-three per cent of the commonwealth's supply from the Dutch East Indies and 14 per cent from the United States. As the distributors mostly are American, sales affect the dollar exchange and, moreover, it is essential to conserve Australia's sterling funds in London.

The rationing will reduce private consumption by 50 per cent, representing 16 to 18 per cent of the total. Commercial cars and vehicles under 30 hundredweight have been called upon to contribute five to seven per cent of the saving. The proportion for heavier vehicles is 10 per cent, or 27 per cent of their total consumption.

Consumers have asked why the rationing was delayed so long if such drastic measures now have been found necessary. The government claims that the rationing will free a large number of men for the manufacture of munitions and for other war industries.

GASOLINE SPREAD FLAMES INTO WHEAT FIELDS

Three railway cars went up in flames at Omemee on Saturday when a passenger train and a gasoline truck were in collision. Conrad Smelser, of New Toronto, Ont., was pinned for two hours under the overturned locomotive. The photograph above, taken from the air in a specially hired plane, shows the scene shortly after the accident occurred. The collision derailed two of the coaches which were untouched, but the three rear cars, sprayed by gasoline, burst into flames and burned to the rails. A large section of rail and ties was torn out, and was just being replaced when this photograph was taken.

U. S. Clears Way For Entry Of Thousands of Children

Proposal is to Make Use of American Ships for Purpose of Bringing Out Refugee Children

‘RED TAPE’ SEVERED

Washington, July 15—(CP)—Hindering "red tape" that barred the entrance into the United States of refugee children was sundered today and the way was cleared for thousands of five-to-16-year-olds seeking haven in the New World from the impending battle of Britain.

Only a scarcity of British naval vessels available for convoy duty stood in the way of the westward movement of the children and proposals were reiterated today that the United States aid the large-scale evacuation by using American ships for humanitarian service. Revision of the neutrality law is necessary.

The Justice and State Departments Saturday approved an order permitting entry into the United States of refugee children without regard to immigration quotas. It was announced children under 16 would be admitted on visitors' visas, with the understanding that they shall return home upon the termination of Hostilities.

U. S. Ships Proposed

Postponement of the British Government's scheme to evacuate thousands of children to Canada and the United States because the Royal Navy at present is unable to furnish convoys was announced in London Friday. However, children will be allowed to leave at their parent's risk or at the risk of the associations arranging for their transport.

Taking the lead among United States newspapers, The New York Times has advocated editorially that American ships be used for the purpose and reiterates the proposal today. It urges Congress to amend the neutrality law" so that this mission, the greatest humanitarian challenge we have yet had in this war, can be carried out without delay."

Many Support Plan

Dorothy Thompson, the columnist, and others also have advocated such a course and it was recalled today that Henry L. Stimson, whose appointment as Secretary of War was approved by the Senate last week, has approved such measures. Speaking as a private citizen in New Haven, Conn., last June 18, he recommended repeal of the law to permit sending munitions to Britain "if necessary in our own ships and under convoy."

He added: "We should open our lands as a refuge for the children and old people of Britain."

While not referring specifically to aid the evacuation of the young from the British Isles, Senator Claude Pepper, Florida Democrat, recently urged that part of the United States Navy be put at the disposal of British sailors and used to "crush Hitler." Pepper has been vociferous in recent months in advocating aid by the United States to Great Britain.

However, indications here today were that such proposals would make little headway in Congress at least at the moment.

Police Blotter

A galaxy of legal dignitaries graced Magistrate E. J. Butler's local police court here today Acting Crown Attorney W. S. Lane of Picton Ex-Mayor A. C. Hall of Oshawa, Clifford Howard, Toronto, barrister, as well as Richard Arnott K.C., M.L.A., Ormonde Butler and Robert McCulloch were all present in today's police court proceedings. Several postponements resulted in the majority of the local profession having little to say to the court, however.

Alex. Brandt Deseronto, appeared on two charges, first of driving a motor car, while intoxicated and second of operating the vehicle without first having obtained a driver's licence. On the drunk driving count Brandt was given 15 days in the common jail without the option of a fine, while on the second count a fine of $10.00 and costs was imposed with a 21-day jail sentence levied in default of payment thereof.

"This man was begging and generally annoying the public, they tell me," stated Mr. Lane as Cyril Smallman, Toronto transient, appeared on a charge of vagrancy. He was given seven days in the local bastille.

Ronald Elliott, Oshawa, appeared on a charge of joy riding and entered a plea of guilty through his counsel, A. C. Hall. Elliott was given a suspended sentence upon the payment of the costs of the proceedings. "There was no damage resulting here and I am content to recommend a suspended sentence," stated Mr. Lane after Mr. Hall had suggested that a suspended sentence would doubtless meet the ends of justice.

REG HINCHEY'S MARCH TO BE FEATURED

The Toronto Symphony Band under the direction of Conductor Laidlaw Addison, former ex-Kiltie and well-known in musical circles here will feature the march "Old Soldiers Never Die" in the weekly broadcast of the band over station C.B.L. tonight.

The march was written and arranged by Mr. Reg. Hinchey prominent local composer and musician, whose compositions have been featured by the band during the past few months and which are rapidly gaining popularity among band circles of the Dominion.

No Great Rush In Belleville To Beat Deadline

In spite of the fact that a governmental edict stated that all men joining the service forces of the country who get married after July 15th., will be regarded by military authorities as "single' there was no great rush to the City Hall, by potential bridegrooms, to secure the necessary license, officials stated today.

There appeared to be no undue haste, they said on the part of the single men of the city and district to enlist the aid of Dan Cupid.

The ordinary number of applications were made during the past week, but licenses issued showed no increase over numbers of preceding weeks.

(By The Canadian Press)

Dan Cupid took time out today after a busy week-end which saw a large increase in marriages in several Canadian centres. The rush was attributed by authorities to the new Dominion Government ruling—announced Friday— that men married after Sunday will be considered single for National Registration purposes.

The greatest activity apparently was in Quebec province. A shortage of licence forms was reported in Montreal where it was said at the Archbishops Palace that more than 200 applications for dispensation were made Saturday. Roman Catholics require a dispensation unless banns are published in the parish church on three successive Sundays.

Special Licence Required

More than 250 marriages were reported Saturday and Sunday in Quebec city and district. There were another 150 in Roman Catholic and Protestant churches and rectories in the Hull area. Fifty weddings were performed in each of the Chicoutimi, St. Jerome and Valleyfield areas.

Special licences are required in Quebec if couples wish to be married on short notice by a Protestant minister.

There was a steady demand for licences at Edmonton. The provincial government's vital statistics branch was kept busy issuing licences and sending out fresh supplies to rural points.

At Vancouver, more than 100 licence were issued between nine o'clock and noon Saturday. Some applicants asked the registrar to waive the three-day waiting period required by law.

Couples in Toronto and Hamilton thronged to marriage licence offices Saturday although it was too late for them to meet the deadline since Ontario marriage laws require that three days must elapse between the issue of a licence and the ceremony.

There was little haste at Winnipeg. Officials there said there were "scarcely any applications" for licences.

Sherbrooke, Que., July 15 (CP).—Jewelers here ran out of wedding rings during the week-end, when Sherbrooke men rushed to bat the federal government ruling that those married after July 14 would be considered single and eligible for early military training.

There were 22 marriages celebrated in the city's eight Roman Catholic Churches during the busiest part of the week-end for cupid the city has known. Several couples were refused licences "for canonical reasons", ecclesiastical sources reported.

HAND IS SEVERED ABOVE THE WRIST

Edward Dupuis, Bancroft, Has Hand Caught in Planer in Mill

Bancroft, Ont., July 15.—(Special)—His hand severed above the wrist as a result of a planing-mill accident, Edward Dupuis 32. Lake St. Peter resident, was rushed to the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital late Saturday afternoon. His condition today was reported as being favorable.

Dupuis was working with a planing mill in shop of his brother-in-law, George Twa, when without warning his hand was drawn into the machinery. The member, badly mangled by the sharp teeth of the machine, was severed before Dupuis could extricate it.

The first intimation Twa had of the accident occurred when Dupuis came down the stairs of the shop clutching his arm. He was calm and showed no signs of pain as he casually remarked to his relative, "Look, George, see what I have done to my arm".

Twa immediately applied a tourniquet to the arm which was bleeding profusely and rushed his relative to the office of Dr. O. W. Anderson. Following treatment he was ordered to the hospital.

PROPERTY OPTIONS ARE TAKEN UP

Options on farming property in the vicinity of Mountain View where a proposed new airport will be constructed have been taken up by the government, according to a highly authoritative source.

Surveyors have been working on the site for the past ten days and actual construction went into effect over the week-end.

Work on the Picton airport has not been started as yet.

BRITAIN TURNS OUT TANKS AND 'PLANES TO HALT NAZI INVASION

British factories are now going all out in the mad rush to put a great force of tanks and airplanes in the field before the Germans open their long-threatened invasion of Britain. At LEFT here you see workmen putting the tracks on a tank in a factory "somewhere in England." This is one of the latest juggernauts with revolving turret. H.M.C.S. FRASER ON MERCY MISS ION JUST BEFORE HER SINKING

The Canadian destroyer Fraser is shown surrounded by fishing boats loaded with refugees as the trim little warship aided in evacuation of war fugitives from St. Jean de Luz, France, in the last stages of the Battle of France. Shortly afterwards the Fraser was sunk in collision near Bordeaux. The photo was made from the S.S. Baron Nairn, refugee ship which was convoyed by the Fraser, and is probably the last picture taken of the Canadian warship.

British Garrison Withdraws From Fort

London, July- 15 —(CP)— Exchange Telegraph News Agency reported from Nairobi, Kenya, today that the beleaguered British garrison at Moyale had withdrawn.

Moyale is a frontier outpost on the border between Kenya and Italian Ethiopia in East Africa.

The agency said a British statement issued at Nairobi reported:—

"Our garrison in British Moyale which had been surrounded for the last five days withdrew last night according to plan and without incident."

Advices from Nairobi earlier quoted a statement saying that R.A.F. fliers had bombed Italian Moyale, "setting fires to buildings around the village and making the enemy run from the ridge west of British Moyale."

The British troops which had resisted Italian siege since last Wednesday were reported by well-informed sources here to be the King's African Rifles, a famed corps of native troops under English officers.

Michaud, Montreal, was proceeding northerly on Pinnacle Street and when about to cross Bridge Street his motor car collided with a west bound car driven by E. D. Mott, 105 Lingham Street, city. The fenders, body and grills of both vehicles were badly damaged, the amount of damage being estimated by P.C. Arnott at $65.00 to the Michaud car and at least $50.00 to Mr. Mott's vehicle .

Britain to be Offered Choice Of Surrender or Destruction Says Gayda in Editorial

Rome, July 15—(AP)—Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor whose articles sometimes reflect Mussolini's opinions claimed in an editorial that Germany and Italy will serve an ultimatum on Great Britain within a few days, offering her a choice between surrender or destruction.

"Preparations will be completed in a very few days" Gaydo wrote in the newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia.

"Britain will have to settle her last account. She will have to choose between submission to the renovating, restorative forces of Europe or extremely grim, violent war in which inexorable destruction, a fateful, precipitous step toward final overthrow, will be measured not by years or weeks of which Churchill spoke but by days or hours.

Heart, Soul of Britain Sound Says N. Y. Times

New York, July 15 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast address yesterday was the "finest of all answers to whatever pessimism may prevail, outside Britain, about Britain's prospects in the ordeal that now fronts her," the New York Times said editorially today.

"The British people have never heard such accents of leadership as Mr. Churchill gave them yesterday," said The Times.

" . . . . The service of Mr. Churchill's speech was its demonstration, apparent to all who heard it, even in distant continents, that the heart and soul of Britain are sound."

Saying that "those who, from the security of a land as yet untouched by war, have presumed to caval, stand rebuked," The Herald Tribune said:

"Without hysteria, without bombast, but with a superb mastery of word, thought and emotion, Prime Minister Churchill spoke yesterday for the embattled British Empire. It was a grim speech, voicing no hopes for easy or early victory. He warned that the Empire must prepare not only for the summer, but for the winter, not only for 1941, but for 1942—'When the war will—I trust—take a different form from the defensive in which it has hitherto been found.' Nor did the Prime Minister paint a cheerful picture of the months and years ahead. He spoke of defending every village, every town and every city. He could visualize the vast mass of London itself 'fought street by street.'

"But underlying every word was high resolve, stern determination—and hope. There was never a hint of weakening, of possible defeat."

London, July 15—(CP) The Admiralty announced today that the 670-ton submarine Shark was overdue and presumed lost. She was the 10th submarine the Royal Navy has lost since the start of the war, including the Oxley which was destroyed last Sept. 11 in an accidental explosion.

"British planes during the night of July 14-15 dropped bombs aimlessly on northern and western Germany. Property damage was insignificant. Two British planes were bagged by anti aircraft artillery and one by night chasers."

The raider dropped one bomb on a residential area of the town and flew on to drop nine more missles in another area. A British plane pursued it.

The raid followed attacks last night by "a few enemy aircraft" which the government announced resulted in only minor damage.

Extended Territories Given Magistrates

Extended territories were given Magistrates presiding over police courts in Eastern Ontario in a circular sent out from the Provincial Attorney General's Department today. The additional courts added to the various district Magistrate's jurisdiction was made necessary when Magistrate McGreggor of Pembroke resigned to join the Canadian Active Service Forces.

Magistrate E. J. Butler of Belleville found his jurisdiction considerably enlarged, when it was announced that Mr. Butler will preside over courts at Marmora, Bancroft, Madoc, Tweed, Trenton and Belleville, while Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook, will take over the courts at Pembroke and Renfrew district, while Magistrate Garvin, of Kingston, will assume the courts at Picton and Napanee, as well as Kingston. Up until the new jurisdictions Magistrate Butler presided at Picton and Napanee courts.

PROCEEDS IN AID OF CHAPTER'S WORK

In Saturday's issue of The Ontario Intelligencer there was an item published giving an account of the dance held in the Hume Arena on Friday evening under the auspices of the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E., which stated that the proceeds of the dance were to be devoted to the Chapter's Bomber Fund. This information was not correct, and the attention of the paper has been brought to the fact that the proceeds were to be devoted for the St. Julien Chapter war work and not for the Bomber Fund as was previously stated.

One of Dead is Signalman Who Was Given Lift in Car, Another Signalman Injured

Dorval, Que., July 15 (CP) — Three persons were dead and two others were in hospital with serious injuries, result of an automobile accident here early Saturday when a car missed a turn in the highway and crashed into a tree.

The dead:

Norman Cyril Everson, 26, Lachine, Que., member of the Royal Canadian Signal Corps.

Mary Jane Bilovus, 24, Montreal.

Michael Boycsuk, 32, Montreal, restaurant proprietor.

The injured:

Fernande Chaput, 23, Montreal, head and body injuries.

Hospital officials said neither of the injured persons had been able yet to explain how the accident occurred, although they are not in a critical condition.

It was learned the Signalmen were hitchhiking their way home from their station at Kingston, Ont. when they were picked up by a car occupied by the other three. Dorval is 15 miles west of Montreal.

Police said the driver of the car, who was not named, apparently missed a curve in the Lakeshore Highway and lost control of the car.

Court Confiscates Arms, Ammunition

Found in possession of a shotgun, high-powered rifle, a revolver and a large quantity of ammunition, none of which had been registered as required by law, Dushan Kostick, shoe repair operator, residing at 180 Front Street, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's police court, charged that he had failed to register these firearms contrary to the Canadian Criminal Code. Kostick told the court he was not aware of such proceedings and admitted he had not registered his collection of firearms. His Worship fined the accused $25.00 and costs, amounting to $38.75 in all and ordered the confiscation of all Kostick's guns and ammunition.

Kostick, who is a native of Yugo-Slavia, he said today, pleaded ignorance of the law and told the court that he used the guns purely for hunting purposes. After viewing the large collection today, Magistrate Butler remarked: "That is a large amount of war material, there."

Acting Crown Attorney W. S Lane of Picton, suggested a substantial fine and asked the court to confiscate the entire armoury held by the accused man. Kostick told the court a deceased uncle in the U.S.A. had given him the guns for hunting purposes. The fine was paid and the firearms confiscated.

Weakness of Germany and Italy Seen in Early Success of Aggressor and in Attempt of Germany, Herself Non-Supporting, Trying to Absorb Non-Self-Supporting Overrun Nations — British Blockade Proves Effective While Enemy's Attempt at Air Blockade is Seen as Failure

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The axis powers have hoisted a new kite, apparently seeking a compromise peace before launching their effort to "annihilate England."

While the Royal Air Force blasted at 27 military targets in Germany and the Mediterranean fleet counted at least 20 Italian aircraft downed in recent action, Virgino Gayda, frequently a press spokesman for Mussolini, suggested Britain would be given a "last chance" to join the axis in "renovating" Europe.

Gayda's alternative, written on the shores of the blue Mediterranean, not far from the ports to which a large force of Italy's fleet fled last week from part of the Royal Navy, was "inexorable destruction."

It was suggested again today that Count Ciano, Italy's Foreign Minister, might call on Hitler to talk over plans for the "renovation."

Axis 'Blow' Has Not Yet Fallen

France surrendered a month ago, but the axis blow has not fallen and her air force blows at Britain have not grown in general intensity. Last night planes were sighted over northeast England, but no bombs were dropped and one raider was believed shot down.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Earth and weather! Most peopel feel, and rightly so, that weather is the result of certain processes going on in the atmosphere, but few ever think that these processes may be modified by changes in the earth itself. There seems to be no doubt that the general circulation as it now exists may be sufficiently modified by earth changes as to change the weather and climate of the earth. The surface of the earth may either rise or fall and thus bring about great changes in the land and water areas and also cause great changes in the circulation of the oceans. Volcanoes may change the composition of the atmosphere by adding more carbon dioxide and dust. These may appreciably modify climate.

Rome Hears Hitler May Make 'Last Offer'

Rome, July 16—(AP)—Diplomatic circles heard today that Hitler is preparing to make a "last offer" to Great Britain for a war settlement.

Diplomatic reports from Berlin indicated that Hitler might address the Reichstag within the next few days.

Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano is planning tentatively to go to Berlin before Hitler speaks to confer with the Germans as Mussolini's representative, diplomatic sources said.

Private advices from Berlin indicated that Hitler probably would suggest:

1. "A European settlement of continental affairs."
2. Return to Germany of colonies taken from her after the first Great War.
3. "Economic rehabilitation" of Europe.

NAVAL OIL TANKS AT TOBRUK, LIBYA BOMBED BY R.A.F.

Planes Penetrate 300 Miles and Described as Longest Flight Yet Attempted in African War

STATEMENT ISSUED

Cairo, July 16 (AP)—Direct hits on two large naval oil tanks in a British air attack on Tobruk, Libya, were reported today in a Royal Air Force communique.

Penetration of British planes yesterday almost 300 miles into Libya was described as the longest reconnaissance flight yet attempted in the African phase of the war. They flew as far as the port of Tocra, only sixty miles from the Italian headquarters at Banghasi.

The statement follows:

"Another successful raid was carried out on Tobruk. Many bombs burst in the target area, two large naval oil tanks suffering direct hits. The second explosion was much bigger than the first.

"Blenheims attacked large artillery stores at Bardia, registering direct hits. Other aircraft raided El Gazala, Libya, and successfully attacked many aircraft on the ground but the full extent of the damage is not yet known.

"A reconnaissance flight was carried out in the vicinity of Tocra. On the return flight military camps at El Faidia, Libya, were bombed. One of our aircraft failed to return.

"Direct hits were registered on barracks and buildings at Diredawa (Ethiopia) and considerable damage effected.

"Subsequently a bomb dump south of Assab was attacked. All our aircraft returned safely.

"Aircraft of the South African Air Force raided a military-occupied village south of Moyale. Ten direct hits were registered on the village and troops. We had no casualties."

ELECTION SETUP

Everyone Will at All Times be Required to Carry Registration Card

Ottawa, July 16—(CP)—There's to be no half-way business about this national registration next month. The instructions are crystal clear—and so are the penalties for not obeying them.

When the time and place of registration are announced for your locality, you go to the prescribed place, answer a questionnaire and sign your name to it. It's as simple as that. And everybody in Canada 16 years or more registers, man or woman, British subject or alien, with a few specific exceptions.

If you neglect to register or give the wrong answers, the maximum penalty is $200 or three months, or both. It's the same thing if you try to impersonate anybody or advise someone not to register or otherwise get in the way.

GENDARMES RAID GERMAN HOMES IN FORMOSA AREA

Twenty-Five Naxis, Suspected of 'Fifth Column' Activities, Arrested

LITERATURE SEIZED

Buenos Aires, July 16—(AP) — Reliable reports from Apostoles in the Northern Argentine territory of Formosa, said today 25 German residents had been arrested there and that eight were still in custody after raids on possible "fifth columnists."

The national gendarmerie, raiding homes and Nazi meeting places, seized stores of arms and ammunition and propaganda pamphlets, these reports said.

Some of the pamphlets were described as telling of German victories in Euro, and alluding to what might befall any country daring to oppose the Nazis.

The investigation is continuing, it was reported.

The government has made no comment

Argentina has banned "alien groups whose aims are contrary to the Republican and Democratic principles of the country."

In April, 1939, Buenos Aires police announced they had raided four "nests of Nazi infiltration" in the capital.

The raids followed publication of charges that Germany planned to colonize or annex Patagonia, southern territory of Argentina.

Dr. Alberto Grassi, head of a committee seeking elevation of Patagonia to provincial status, testified during a subsequent investigation that Nazi agents offered arms and money to organize a revolution in Patagonia.

Alfred Mueller, Argentine Nazi leader who was arrested during the inquiry, later was acquitted of conspiring against Argentine independence.

British Merchant Fleet Stronger Than When War Broke Out

By JOHN FERRIS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, July 16 (AP). — The British merchant fleet, swelled by new construction and ships of other notions gained through the fortunes of war probably is stronger now than it was when the war started, a study of available verified figures indicated today.

Germany claimed last week that up to July 1 she had destroyed 4,329,231 tons of British shipping, a figure which an authoritative British source said was more than four times the real losses.

The Associated Press figures showed the British had lost 243 ships of 932,158 gross tons up to July 4.

At the start of the war, according to Lloyd's register of maritime shipping, the British Empire had 21,001,925 tons of shipping, comprising 8,977 ships—steam and motor—of 100 gross tons and upward.

The loss of 243 ships would leave the British 8,734 ships totalling 20,069,767 tons.

Production of New Ships.

But this would not take into account Britain's production of new ships since the start of the war and her acquisition or control of an undisclosed amount of shipping gained when Germany invaded Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Holland and when the French signed Hitler's armistice terms.

Norway, for example, had 1,987 ships of 4,833,813 tons at the outbreak of war — the fourth largest merchant marine in the world, but ranked only by the British Empire, the United States and Japan.

Other Merchant Fle*ts.

Theatres 'One Night Stand' For War Savings Stamps Sale Raises Huge Sum Of Money

Patriotic Programs Rouse High Fervor in Audiences Which Fill Theatres Across Dominion — 'Sold Out' Reports Pour in from All Parts of Canada

By The Canadian Press

The Canadian Motion Picture Industry made a "one night stand" last night that filled the coffers of the Dominion Treasury with hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The win-the-war campaign sponsored by the industry to aid the nation's war effort by promoting the sale of war savings stamps attracted sellout audiences in hundreds of theatres across the Dominion. Patrons gained admission by buying a minimum of two 25-cent war stamps.

Finance Minister Ilsley left his post in the House of Commons to tell one theatre audience at Ottawa that the response of the Canadian people in buying war savings stamps and certificates has been more than gratifying. He said the government had expected sales of $1,000,000 weekly while actually they total more than $2,000,000.

Hon. J. L. Ralston, Defence Minister, said at another Ottawa theatre that "quarters will buy airplanes and ships, whose guns alone speak the language which Hitler and Mussolini understand.

Motion picture stars appeared at some theatres. Vivian Leigh, Laurence Olivier and Ned Sparks, Ontario-born comedian, visited Toronto movie houses Maureen O'Sullivan was at Ottawa and Sir Cedric Hardwicke at Montreal.

The movie houses donated the use of their facilities and the distributors the use of their films. The stamps purchased by patrons became their own property and are redeemable.

It was the same story from Halifax to Vancouver—"sold out." New Brunswick theatres are estimated to have sold $20,000 worth of stamps. Quebec City reported sales of almost $8,000. Theatre capacity in Montreal was not large enough to handle the crowds.

When reports reached organizers from 70 of Toronto district theatres the figure there had surpassed the $40,000 mark. A Napanee theatre with a seating capacity of only 400 sold $4,410 worth of stamps. A Kitchener theatre had sales of $8,800 and a special performance at a dude ranch in Kleinburg netted $4,000. Two Sarnia theatres took in $1,700.

Many patrons in Edmonton bought $5 certificates as their admission, and five others purchased a $500 block. Sales at Regina reached $7,600.

Cobourg, Ont., July 16—(CP) — Cobourg's "win the war" theatre night yielded more than twice its quota last night when $664 worth of war savings stamps were sold. So large was the crowd in attendance that two shows had to be held.

63 Killed by Mine Explosion Brought to Surface by Rescuers

21 Escape When it is Thought Spark from Coal Cutting Machine Set Off Blast

QUICK SCRAMBLE

Sonman, Pa., July 16—(AP)—In a deluge of rain, while thunder and lightning rent the skies above, grim rescue workers early today trundled out of the depths of a bituminous coal mine the canvas-covered bodies of 63 men killed by an explosion yesterday.

Although the Koppers Company, operator of the mine, announced belief all the victims of Pennsylvania's worst bituminous disaster in a decade had been found, the gas-masked rescue crews still explored pitchblack shafts in the possibility others might have been trapped.

Only 21 men escaped from the mine, sloping two miles into the earth from a mountainside, when either gas or coal dust exploded. They made a quick scramble for safety, some crawling on all fours to shelter themselves from the heat and lethal gas that filled the tunnels.

The company received an unverified report that a spark from a coal cutting machine set off the blast. Little damage was done to the mine.

One Knocked Down

Stanley C. Yuwus, 23, one of the survivors, said:

"It was more of a concussion than an explosion. A great ball of white fire swept down the tunnel. I was knocked down. With the others, I scrambled out on my hands and knees."

About 1,200 were employed in the mine in three shifts. The explosion swept through only three sections, however.

Sonman is in the southwestern Pennsylvania bituminous field, about 16 miles east of Johnstown, the "flood city."

One rescue worker discovered that a group of 34 miners erected a brattice of wooden planks and put a canvas over it in a vain effort to keep out the deadly gas. But it seeped in around the edges and killed them all.

Upon the body of James Monteith, foreman of that section, was found a list of the 34 men. He had apparently written it while awaiting death—and added directions for finding seven other men trapped nearby.

FOOD, MEDICINE AND SUPPLIES ARE RUSHED

Grenoble, France, July 16 (AP).—Hundreds of trucks hired by the American Red Cross and the American Society to aid war victims rushed food, medicine and other supplies today to the scenes of greatest refugee needs in parts of France unoccupied by German troops. The supplies arrived at Marseille yesterday.

20 ITALIAN PLANES SHOT DOWN OFF SOUTHERN ITALY

Naval Clash Last Tuesday Resulted in Severe Losses to Italian Bombers

BRITISH STATEMENT

Alexandria, July 16—(AP)—At least 20 Italian bombing planes were shot down in the British-Italian naval clash off southern Italy last Tuesday, according to a communique issued today by the commander-in-chief of the British Mediterranean fleet.

The statement listed again five bombers destroyed by fighter aircraft of the fleet, destruction of which previously had been announced, and revealed for the first time that at least 15 were shot down by anti-aircraft guns.

THE FOUR 'Bs' WORK TOGETHER

J. P. Bickel Flies to London to Assist in Aircraft Production

Toronto, July 16—(CP)—J. P. Bickell, Toronto mining executive, is on his way to London to assist Lord Beaverbrook in the wartime speedup of airplane production. Bickell's office announced today. Also associated in the work are two other Canadians Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Conservative Prime Minister, and Beverley Baxter, Canadian-born member of the British parliament.

The four "Bs" will conduct one of Britain's most important war efforts; the attainment of supremacy over Germany in aircraft production. Lord Beaverbrook, himself is a native of New Brunswick.

Bickell, close friend of Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, is an aviation enthusiast and has his own private plane. In 1938 he flew with Premier Hepburn on a tour of the Canadian North-west. He is President of the rich McIntyre-Porcupine Mines Ltd. and his other financial interests embrace mines, banks, life insurance, nickel. He is a native of Mount Forest, Ont.

Lord Beaverbrook cabled: "If you will come here and assist me we would welcome you." Bickell replied immediately and left by plane for London within a few days.

PROTEST VOICED OVER HALTING OF EVACUATION PLAN

Storm of Indignation Expressed by Labor M.P.'s on Announcement by Clement Attlee

200,000 APPLICATIONS

20,000 Offers Made from Dominions of Homes for Young Evacuees

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 16—(CP Cable) — A storm of protest and indignation developed in the House of Commons today when Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal and Deputy Leader of the House, announced that the government scheme to evacuate children to Canada and the United States had been postponed.

Mr. Attlee disclosed that a "certain number" of children would be evacuated in a few cases where it might be possible to provide proper convoy.

"There is a limited number," he continued referring to convoys, and "to that extent the scheme will go forward and will be giving some opportunity to children from state-aided schools."

Labor members protested at the thousands of children from wealthy homes, some of them titled children and children of members of the government, already sent overseas when poor children were forced to stay in the United Kingdom under war conditions.

One Labor member, C. G. Ammon, said he was convinced that the whole scheme was just a camouflage to get children with wealthy parents out of the country.

PROFITEERING IN NECESSITIES TO BE PUNISHED

Manufacturer Must Not Take Advantage of New 10 Per Cent War Tax on Imports

TAX IS PROTESTED

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 16—(CP)—Drastic retaliatory action by the Dominion Government is promised any Canadian manufacturer who tries to profiteer under the new 10 per cent war tax on imports.

If a manufacturer or dealer raises prices merely because he has that added protection against outside competition, the government may do any or all of these things, under a budget amendment proposed yesterday by Finance Minister Ilsley:

Impose a 10 per cent excise tax on all goods produced, sold or dealt in by the offender.

Remove or reduce all customs duties applying to such goods.

Fix prices.

SUGGESTS SALE OF ISLAND

London, July 16 (CP)—Oswald Lewis, Conservative member of parliament, suggested today that a British island in or near the West Indies be sold to the United States for an air and naval base "in full satisfaction of the balance of our debt outstanding to the United States in respect of the last war."

One of the World's Fattest Men Says Being Fat is State of Mind

New York, July 16—(AP)—Being fat is just a state of mind, and losing weight is mainly a mental process, says one of the world's most famous fat men, Alfred Hitchcock, the British movie director.

Three months ago, Hitchcock weighed 292 pounds. He now weighs 250 pounds. And he hopes in a year to be down to a neat 180

He has accomplished this by dieting—by eschewing two of his three huge meals a day and by cutting the third meal down to a meagre normal size.

But it isn't the lack of food that has taken three inches off his waistline, he insists. It's the mental anguish, the constant consciousness of the food he's missing.

"It works," he says, "the same way cooks get fat. It's mental. People say, 'oh, they're always tasting things....' But that isn't the reason. You can't 'taste' a steak you're preparing for somebody else, can you?"

"Hitch' is as famous for his food as for his unusual pictures such as "The 39 Steps", based on the book by the late Baron Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada. It is said that before he was getting $800,000 for five pictures in Hollywood, he would often borrow a pound (then $5) and spend it all on a lunch.

Tighter Blockade Against Italy Said Retaliatory

Vessels Navigating Within 30 Miles of Any Italian Territory in Mediterranean Will Do So at Own Risk and Peril

NAZIS HIT BY AIR

22 German Airdromes in the Past 48 Hours Heavily Bombed and Many Jumping Off Places Crippled —Considerable Damage Inflicted

London, July 16—(CP) — The British navy was presumed today to have laid new minefields in waters around Italian territory in the Mediterranean.

This belief was based on a brief admiralty announcement warning "all vessels navigating within 30 miles of any Italian territory in the Mediterranean" they would "do so at their own risk and peril."

The announcement of this tightening of the blockade against Italy said it was retaliatory. The Italian Government, it was stated, "recently issued a notice to the effect that within the limit of 30 miles from the Allied coasts all merchant vessels bound for Allied ports will navigate at their risk and peril."

Mother and daughter lived here together. Last week, Miss Ross was stricken with pneumonia and was rushed to hospital where she spent two days in an oxygen tent. She failed to rally and died Sunday night.

Relatives delayed telling the aged mother of her daughter's death until Monday afternoon. A few hours later she suffered a stroke, and died during the night.

SAY R.A.F. WOULD WELCOME U. S. PILOTS

London, July 16 —(CP)— An authoritative London source said today that an unlimited number of trained United States pilots would be welcomed for war service by the Royal Air Force but said no official move had been made to get volunteers.

This source said experienced fliers are needed to keep pace with the "excess of scheduled plane production." No oath of allegiance would be required, it added.

EARL OF COVENTRY IS KILLED IN ACTION

London, July 16 (CP)—The Earl of Coventry, previously reported as missing, was killed in action in France while serving as a Lieutenant in a Worcestershire regiment, it was announced today. MAY RESUME FLYING SERVICE

Weekly Flying Boat Communication Between Canada and England Would Serve Important Purpose

London, July 16—(CP Cable) — Weekly flying boat service begun last summer between Canada and England is likely to be resumed before the end of July, it was learned unofficially today.

Two craft, the Clare and the Clyde, "very much" like the Cabot and the Caribou which were used to establish the initial service, will fly from a base on the south coast of England via Foynes and Botwood to Montreal and New York.

The ships will carry mail and "official" passengers, meaning diplomats and others with important government business.

Resumption of the service has been urged in many quarters, especially to permit more rapid communication between Canadian soldiers and their relatives in Canada, but it was explained that the heavy demand for planes in the early stages of the war prevented re-establishment of the flights which had proved so successful in the trial stages.

One of the new ships probably will be in charge of Capt. Kelly Rogers, who commanded the Caribou on the first flight in August, 1939.

ACTION IS TAKEN TO CLOSE PORT

Announcement is Made That Japan Has Adopted This Step

Shanghai, July 16—(AP)— Warships, aircraft and marines have gone into action, the Japanese Navy announced today, to close Hangchow Bay and the important treaty port of Ningpo, through which the Chiang Kai-Shek government has been maintaining trade relations with the outside world.

Action has not been taken against Ningpo previously, it was explained because, while the port served the Chinese, it also provided a valuable outlet for Japanese merchandise.

The Hangchow Bay area is about 100 miles southwest of Shanghai. It is one of the places listed in a Japanese proclamation yesterday barring the coasts of Chekian and Fukien Provinces to all ship traffic

Nine-Year-Old Miss Spends Savings In War Stamps

A winsome little nine-year-old miss, charmingly garbed in a pretty frock, enhanced by colorful flowers in her chestnut hair, not only won the hearts of the audience of the Capitol Theatre at the War Savings Stamps Theatre Night last evening, but inaugurated a substantial sale of the stamps when she shyly presented to Master of Ceremonies Laurie Lewis, a cheque for $40.00, her entire savings.

She was Miss Georgia Maniates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Minos Maniates, proprietors of the Capitol Restaurant, Lower Front Street.

Clever, accomplished, and a talented young artiste, the little girl delighted her audience with a vocal solo, which she followed with another selection to which she played her own accompaniment. The presentation of a handsome bouquet of flowers, by a lady admirer after her performance, elicited rounds of applause from a delighted audience.

Georgia showed a tendency for things musical from an early age. Possessed of a sweet natural voice she has been studying for some years and when but a child of four years was taught elocution at Hart House, Toronto University.

She practices her vocal and instrumental lessons daily, and contrary to the ordinary tendencies of a child of her age, "does much better" when she has an audience. In fact when she is alone, Georgia arranges her thirteen beautiful dolls on the chesterfield at home, and performs for their benefit.

She has won several prizes, cash and otherwise, at various performances and the cheque with which she purchased $40.00 worth of war savings stamps last night represented her winnings and personal cash.

John D. Hayes Host To 350 Toronto Boys

Belleville Native Manifests His Interest in Boys of School Age

A picnic at Queenston and a tour of Niagara Falls was given the other day to 350 school-aged boys at Toronto on the steamer Cayuga. They were the members of the Gerrard "K" Club, founded by the Kiwanis Club of Toronto, to provide boys of the district with facilities for recreation. Their host, for the third successive year, was John D. Hayes, president of the Laura Secord Company, who always has been interested in boys' work. In addition to sports facilities the boys of the club are given individual guidance of business men throughout the year.

Mr. Hayes is a well-known Belleville boy, the son of Mr. Patrick Hayes, Catherine Street. He pays frequent visits to Belleville.

Mr. Hayes not only gives a picnic each year to the boys but also gives the same group at Christmas dinner each year.

Belleville Theatres Filled To Capacity as Citizens Rally In Support of Industry's Effort

$2,710 in War Savings Stamps Sold at Three Local Theatres — Stage and Screen Entertainment Provides Evening of Enjoyment

Magnificent as was the gesture of the Motion Picture Industry of Canada in donating gratis, pictures, entertainment and theatres throughout the far-flung sectors of the Dominion, as equally magnificent was the response of Belleville and its environs at the War Savings Stamps Theatre night held in the Capitol, Belle and McCarthy Theatres here last evening.

Residents of the city and district despite the fact that sullen skies sent down a steady downpour of rain during the early hours, turned out en masse to not only enjoy the high class entertainment provided by the various theatre managements, but to show in a tangible way that their hearts and pocketbooks are at the call of the Dominion and the Empire.

Not only did they "dig and dig deeply" for the war savings stamps that entitled them to a free admission to the performance, but they answered the appeal of the different masters of ceremony to buy and buy more, during the performance.

The humble twenty-five cent piece that bought a single stamp, mingled with cheques and cash for amounts as high as forty and fifty dollars. Members of St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. passed through the audicnee with the stamps and as one theatre manager puts it "the response was grand." The splendid sum of $2,710.75 was realized for the country's war coffers through the medium of the local theatres.

Matched Dollar For Dollar

In one theatre an enthusiastic patron matched "dollar for dollar" with the master of ceremonies. In another a winsome little girl shyly presented a cheque for $40.00, her entire savings. It was a crossroad of the population of the district that "loaned" to the Dominion, their money and gave their spirit. Farmers, in spite of the fact, that it is their busy season, forgot crops and other urgent necessities, and rubbed shoulders with their city cousins in response to the country's appeal. Business men, professional men, laborers, "white-collar men", stenographers, and charwomen gave their bit to help win the war.

And the theatre management, in anticipation of the fine response left nothing undone to provide for their patrons, gala entertainment. Stage shows augmented outstanding screen entertainment. Masters of ceremony, over public address systems, added their "bit". Special speakers brought out in patriotic eloquence, the deeper meaning of the drive for War Stamp Funds. If Hitler, had been "licked with stamps" in a literal sense, the fanatical aspirant to world domination would have suffocated beneath a coating of stamps that would have made an Egyptian mummy go green with envy. A gaily-appareled duo of pipers, including the famous 'Jamie' Clark, paraded in front of the theatres in a downpour of rain, their pipes skirling the lilting rhythms that none but a Scottish piper can bring forth.

And theatre managers, either through the medium of their masters of ceremony, or themselves expressed the heartfelt gratitude of the Motion Picture Industy of Canada, for the splendid response to that organization's appeal for cooperation in their magnificent contribution to Canada's war effort.

The Capitol

The popular Lower Front Street theatre was filled to capacity at an early hour. Shortly after 8.30 o'clock Master of Ceremonies, Ex-Alderman Laurie Lewis, introduced by theatre manager Tommy Mascaro, officially opened the program. In a brief address he brought out the urgent necessity of every Canadian to contribute to the country's war effort. It would be an effort, he said which would be paid for by posterity. Later in the evening, when the stamps were offered for sale, Mr. Lewis' eloquence was instrumental in bringing many dollars to the fund. Members of the St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. passed through the audience selling the stamps.

The stage show here was par excellence. Highlighting the program was winsome little Miss Georgia Maniates, Front Street, an accomplished little artiste, whose vocal and piano efforts nearly brought down the house. She culminated a splendid performance with the purchase by her own money of forty dollars worth of stamps.

The Misses Mary and Mafalda Pigeon, accomplished piano accordeonists delighted the audience with several selections, with Bruce Sills and his musical saw adding to the general entertainment. Twelve-year-old Georgie Shepard, boy soprano, was given vociferous applause after two solos, while the ever popular James Bankier, earned well merited acclaim with a duo of selections. Mr. Bankier led community singing later in the program.

Brought Greetings of City

Alderman Jack Allin, in a brief address brought the greetings of the corporation of the city of Belleville and personally represented His Worship Mayor Thompson.

The Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, rector of St. Thomas Church, principal speaker of the evening, in a brief but eloquent address told his audience that Canada with her mobilization of the three M's; men, money and material, will make a full contribution necessary before victory and peace can be obtained.

"Britain stands alone with her last ally, the help of God," he said, "and with His help and the leadership of the men He has appointed to lead Britain, the Motherland will uphold her honor, and will win in spite of the fact that others failed to uphold all she is fighting for."

If Canadians value British freedom and the heritage handed down by valiant forebears, then they will see that these same ideals are handed down to those who follow, the speaker declared. He paid tribute to the people of Britain whose efforts have been magnificent. "They are the soul of Britain and the soul of sacrifice" he said. "Canada has emerged from the last Great War and is ready to face her full responsibility. Thank God for Canada," he concluded, "but in our peaceful security, we must not forget that we as Canadians must face these responsibilities."

Manager Tommy Mascaro personally thanked all those who had contributed to the fund. He expressed appreciation of the many city industries and firms who had assisted in the drive, and the audience which by its presence indicated wholehearted support of the country's effort.

The picture "Flight Angels" and several shorts culminated a splendid entertainment.

The Belle

The "Standing Room Only" sign was hung out at the Belle Theatre long before the evening's program was scheduled to get under way, as theatre-goers from Belleville and district participated in the motion picture industry's win-the-war campaign. The drive to lick Hitler by "stamping him out" appealed to local citizens as they showed their approval by flocking to the theatre to purchase their minimum of two war savings stamps to gain admission.

Featuring the St. Michael's Band, and directed by little Miss Barbara Forhan, the stage show given prior to the regular movie reel proved especially delightful with the band playing as their opening numbers, "Officer of the Day" and "King Cotton." Mr. Harold Barrett acted as master of ceremonies for the evening while Alderman R. A. Pringle, on behalf of Mayor Thompson, welcomed the theatre patrons to the theatre on this occasion.

Richard Arnott, M.L.A., spoke briefly, asking if it was worth while that talented children such as the members of St. Michael's Band should be afforded the opportunity to continue their study of music under the Democratic system, such as we have enjoyed? Is it worth while, he asked, as he urged the patrons to continue buying war savings stamps.

Mr. P. C. MacLaurin also spoke briefly, stating that this had been an inspiring night a memorable evening. "We are here as Britishers fighting," said Mr. MacLaurin "fighting for our homes, fighting for our boys and girls, that they may enjoy the privileges of Democracy. This is only the beginning of a very real effort on the part of the public to buy more war savings stamps and to help stamp out Hitler."

Air of Patriotism

An air of patriotism and enthusiasm predominated throughout the theatre which was emphasized by the flag-draped orchestra pit which provided a fitting background for St. Michael's Band. A short period of community singing under the leadership of chairman Harold Barrett was thoroughly enjoyed while the instrumental solo by little Miss Terry Meagher with Mrs. William Grant at the piano was much appreciated, as was a clarinette solo by Betty Flynn. Master Robert Young delighted the audience with a saxophone solo with his rendition giving no doubt as to why he won first place among saxophone soloists at the band festival in Waterloo recently. The final selection, given by the St. Michael's Band, was the rendition of "Coronation Medley" as arranged by Mr. Reg. Hinchey.

The McCarthy

It was just one big, happy family at the McCarthy theatre, filling the theatre with song and laughter, expressing the deep feeling of pleasure it gave the citizens of Belleville to co-operate in the magnificent gesture of the theatres of the Dominion in aiding the Canadian government by sponsoring "War Savings Stamp Theatre Night". Outside the theatres, papers called attention to the gala evening. Crowds collected almost an hour before the program was scheduled to start and were entertained in royal fashion by Dan Pairman and his Tophatters, with a splendid program combining sweet and swing in rhythm.

Lieut. Fred Jobson acted as master of ceremonies and on behalf of the theatre thanked the people of Belleville for their splendid support of this event. Lieut. Jobson led the community singing in which the enthusiastic response of the audience made the rafters ring with melody. Mary Conner Deacon acted as accompanist in perfect style.

Alderman Harry Rollins represented Mayor Thompson and thanked Mr. J. C. McCarthy the management and staff for putting every facility of the theatre at the disposal of this war effort project. He thanked the citizens for their attendance in such large numbers and their generous purchase of war savings stamps, doing their bit for the government, demonstrating in a small way their determination to stand shoulder to shoulder with the peoples of the Empire until the war is won, and till ultimate victory reached, as it must be reached since the hand of God is on the Empire's side.

Jack Deacon Heard

Mr. Jack Deacon, accompanied by Mrs. Deacon, contributed two vocal solos, that were received with enthusiastic applause by the audience, delighted to have the privilege of hearing again one of Belleville's most talented singers.

"In Men of Harlech" and a Scottish warring song, Mr. Deacon's splendid tenor voice was at its best. Other numbers on the interesting stage show were the Hawaiian trio, Clarence Sligh, William Sligh and Walter Taylor, pupils of the Belleville Music Studio, who presented a group of numbers in very fine style and Allan McLeod of Kingston, whose interpretations on the piano, especially his rendition of "Basin Street Blues" made a distinct hit with the audience.

Addresses were given by Ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone and by Mr. J. B. Boyce. Mr. Bone spoke of the thrill it had given him to hear the audience sing "There'll Always Be an England," and reminded his hearers, that there always would be a Scotland, too. He gave excerpts of announcements telling of the efforts from the far flung reaches of the Empire to aid Great Britain and counselled his hearers to beware of talk and spirit of defeatism, a spirit which can not exist when one realizes the resources of the great Empire. Mr. Boyce expressed the gratitude all felt to that great citizen and patriot, Mr. J. C. McCarthy, and to the theatre's management for their co-operation in the great movement across Canada to aid the government by encouraging the purchase of war savings stamps. He made a vigorous appeal to citizens to continue this form of assistance by placing their savings at the disposal of the government in its effort to help the Empire win the war for democracy, for freedom and the liberties long looked upon as a birthright by democratic people. Those who cannot engage as soldiers in this combat can make sacrifices of pleasures, luxuries, and even necessities to buy war savings stamps, sacrifices that are small indeed in comparison to the soldiers who are sacrificing their futures and their lives for Britain.

Volunteer To Buy

In answer to this appeal, many from the audience volunteered to buy War Savings Certificates, many men in His Majesty's uniform being the first to step forward to contribute. The audience sang patriotic songs as the certificates were being filled out by Mr. Arthur Rogers of the Belleville Post Office staff. One ardent singer a tiny little boy was coaxed to the platform and delighted the audience with his solo "O Canada." Lieut. Jobson slipped a twenty-five cent piece into his hand and the little fellow scrambled off the stage to buy a War Savings Stamp.

As the stage program was brought to a conclusion, Lieut. Jobson expressed appreciation to all those, who had assisted in making it such a fine success, and the audience for its attendance. The evening's program then continued with an excellent movie program that was thoroughly enjoyed.

OBITUARY

MRS. STELLA M. WATERS
(Belleville)

The death occurred on Monday, July 15th., of Stella M. Waters, widow of the late Donald M. Waters and mother of Marjory T. O'Flynn of this city and Colonel Mackenzie Waters of Toronto.

She was born in 1865 in the same house in which she died, daughter of Caroline Ashley and Richard Taylor. She was a direct descendant, on the maternal side of Captain John Walden Meyers, the Loyalist, who received as his crown grant, a large portion of the existing city of Belleville. Hers is one of the few cases in the Province in which descendants of the original owners have continued to live on the same property to the present day.

Until about two years ago, when she was overtaken by an illness which resulted in her death, she took an active part in the social life of the community and having reached a ripe age has survived many of her intimate friends.

PHOEBE ADELIA (COOLIDGE) NELSON
Demorestville

Mrs. Urias (Coolidge) Nelson passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. W. Gorsline, Demorestville, on Saturday, July 13th. after an illness of only ten days' duration. The deceased was in her 77th. year, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ira Coolidge and had lived at Demorestville until ten years ago when she came to Belleville to reside with her daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Tripp at 170 Charles Street, and of late had resided in Picton. She was a member of the United Church and was highly esteemed.

Surviving to mourn her loss are four daughters: Mrs. E. W. Gorsline, Demorestville; Mrs. J. Frampton and Mrs. E. Addison, both of Toronto, and Mrs. Charles D. Tripp of Belleville. One son, Mr. Carson M. Nelson of Detroit, Mich. One sister, Mrs. Hannah Cole, Demorestville, and eight grandchildren, Harry Gorsline, Demorestville; Howard Gorsline, Guelph; Arnold Anderson, Picton; Wade Tripp, R.C.A.F.; Charlie Tripp, Belleville, and Betty, William and Patricia Nelson of Detroit, Michigan.

The funeral took place from the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. W. Gorsline, Demorestville, on Monday afternoon, July 15th., with Rev. Wood conducting the service both at the home and at the graveside.

LATE JOHN GRAY,

Queensboro, (Special) — Friends here learned with sincere regret of the passing of Mr. John Gray at the hospital in Peterboro on Thursday, July 11th.

The late Mr. Gray, while visiting Queensboro friends early in the spring fell on the pavement, fracturing his hip. Since that time he has been unable to leave the hospital.

The deceased, who was in his 81st year, lived many years in this community and earned the respect of all who knew him. He was a good neighbor and a fine citizen. The removal of Mr. and Mrs. Gray to Peterboro some years ago left a real gap in the social and church life of Queensboro.

His wife, predeceased him four years ago. One sister, Mrs. W. J. Wiggins of Toronto and one brother, Mr. Goldie Gray of Peterboro are left to mourn his passing.

Interment took place in Cooper Cemetery on Saturday afternoon with Messrs. Kiwanis Club Entertains 700 Children At Theatre Party

The Kiwanis Club of Belleville took an active part in the Special Theatre Night to "Stamp out Hitler" held in the local theatres last night, when they entertained 700 children of the city at a matinee performance of the evening show on Monday afternoon at the Belle Theatre. The club purchased $350 worth of War Savings Stamps, which will in a small way help to win the war and at the same time gave the kiddies an afternoon of enjoyment Morley Wyman, chairman of the Publicity Committee, welcomed the children on behalf of the club and hoped they would have a fine afternoon.

The Kiwanis Club has been very active in war endeavor since the outbreak of hostilities and are prepared to go even further in their effort to bring it to a successful conclusion. The members are now working on the Kiwanis Street Carnival which will be held in the middle of August and all funds derived will be applied to projects already under preparations.

BRITISH PEOPLE RESOLUTE

Prime Minister Churchill pointed out in clear terms the struggle which Britain is waging against Germany. The British are ready for whatever developments that come not only this summer but in the winter of the year and for the year 1941, and for 1942 he trusts to see the strength of Britain launched in a powerful offensive which will carry the British to victory and to the liberation of Europe. He expressed the will of the people, their iron resolve to defend Britain at all cost and declared the people would rather see London laid in ashes and ruins than tamely and abjectly enslaved.

Mr. Churchill told the Empire that Britain will seek no terms, will tolerate no parley and while she may show mercy she will ask none.

Here is the stern resolution which will carry Britain through. Mr. Churchill is the supreme interpreter and voice of the spirit of the British people at this time. He tells them the facts and he knows that they will acquit themselves like heroes. He is the spirit of Britain.

One of his noblest phrases was this "We are fighting by ourselves alone, but we are not fighting for ourselves alone."

Today he is the voice of Britain that has set its will not to be conquered, not to yield its precious liberties and civilization which have been won through the centuries.

Mr. Churchill's calmness is the calmness of his countrymen. Knowing what the future will contain, they boldly face it as did the sturdy ancestors who built Britain the trials of their days.

Churchill shows what supreme leadership means in the hour of destiny.

His nation and he are inspiring examples of freedom which has appeared on the stage of world history.

ANOTHER REFUGEE FROM THE WAKE OF THE NAZI

The hand of the Hun has fallen heavily on distinguished men. It is a mark of the nazi that he has struck out at civilization as well as individual life. There have been great names in Europe, names which will make this era last despite the bombs of nazi and fascist. Nazis cannot suppress them for they are of the spirit of freedom with not a trace of the spirit of the nazi in them.

Maurice Maeterlinck the Belgian poet, essayist and playwright, at 78 years, has arrived in New York, an exile, and with his fortune gone and his views puzzled as he looked out upon life. At New York he said that except for a few small royalties on his play, "The Blue Bird," the war has made him virtually penniless.

Out of the carnage of war and the destruction of his native Belgium he has brought two plays he hopes to have produced in America. They were written before the war plunged Europe into the greatest tragedy. He describes the situation as catastrophic. "You can not think. All you can do is wait. You must wait for history to clarify itself."

Maeterlinck at New York could not pass over the capitulation of the King of the Belgians and its tragic consequences to Belgium and to the French army.

Maeterlinck is an example of a man who has saved money and seen his savings swept away by German aggressors. "I had my money in a bank in Brussels. The Germans occupied Belgium. I had my house and belongings in Nice. The Germans have occupied France. All is gone. All I have, I have with me. I am stunned and yet surprised at the ease with which I accept all this. Yet nothing can be done. It's done." He had left Nice on an hour's notice leaving all his belongings. He went to Portugal and lived at Lisbon for eight months with his family. Then he was warned by the Belgian minister that the Germans might come even there. He knew that if he were captured by the Germans, he would be shot at once as he said, "since I have always been counted as an enemy of Germany because of my play, 'Le Bourgmestre of Stillemonde,' which dealt with conditions in Belgium during the German occupation from 1914 to 1918."

Here is a famed man, who has created some of the finest literature and drama of the past forty or fifty years and yet he is not safe from the nazi. There have been other playwrights who were safe in other eras from other nations which had been attacked by the playwrights. But the nazi does forget and must destroy.

Maeterlinck is one of the most unique writers who have been writing for the past fifty years and more. Those who have read his symbolic plays like "The Death of Tintagiles" and "The Blind," as well as "The Blue Bird," know the poetic and eerie quality of his artistry.

WHAT HITLERISM DOES

The mess that Hitler is making of Europe is seen by reports from France and other countries that the cattle are being slaughtered or taken away to Germany and that the food materials are being confiscated by the Germans.

What is Poland but a shambles? what is Czecho-Slovakia but a land depressed where the terror of the Gestapo reigns? what is The Netherlands and what is Belgium but mills to provide the avaricious Huns with food, with metals, with materials of all kinds, and with no doubt art treasures of the greatest value for the glory of the palaces of the leaders among the nazis?

The Hun means destruction, theft of the goods from the people, wanton glorification in ruin.

That is nazism. The principle who produced war on a gigantic scale can produce nothing else but misery, death, bloodshed, wretchedness, poverty, tyranny, loss of independence, starvation. All the noble guides of the national life of peoples are removed. Hitler and aggression have done this.

Lands that used to give their plenty to a world that needed food, Poland, Czecho - Slovakia, agricultural Denmark, The Netherlands, France, are themselves so poor now that it is feared there may be a famine. Hitler's war machine needs fuel, his vast army of men who are living on the loot of nations, must be fed even if Frenchmen and Belgians, if Poles and Czechs are deprived of their possessions and their food that the nazis may be able to carry on their destructive work.

He Climbed The Ladder

About eight years ago a big motor vehicle a luxurious home on wheels, passed through Woodstock on its way west from Toronto, and spectators learned that the occupant was Hubert T. Parson, retiring as president of the Woolworth Company after 13 years as its head. He had a home on Fifth Avenue, New York, and another at West End, New Jersey, and it was in New York that he passed away from a heart attack last Tuesday.

Mr. Parson was a native of Toronto, son of Henry E. Parson, once known as the "Oil King of Canada. As result of financial reverses the family moved to Watertown, N.Y., and after five years to Brooklyn, where Hubert was educated. Thereafter the story of his life reveals one of the romances of business for which this continent is distinguished.

Employed at the Atlantic Chemical Works as an office boy at $4 a week, Parson displayed so much business ability that he was given the opportunity of a partnership in another business. It folded up as result of a tariff change and Parson placed an "employment wanted" ad in a New York paper at a special rate of five cents then available to jobless. Mr. Woolworth answered advertisement and offered Parson $8 as bookkeeper. He held out for $12 and got it. That was in 1893 and Parson was 20. He became secretary, treasurer, general manager and finally president of the five-and-ten enterprise. He was director of a national bank, member of numerous clubs, and occupied a big office in the Woolworth Building. An age-limit rule required his retirement at 60.

Lack of financial backing doesn't mean a thing to a young man with what it takes to get ahead.

The other moral, added in deference to the advertising department, is that one little classified ad. may open the door to great opportunity and change the whole direction of a life.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Civil Aviation In Canada

A preliminary report on civil aviation in Canada in 1939 shows that the aircraft hours, flown increased to 143,639 from 133,168 in 1938, but the miles flown decreased to 10,969,271 miles from 12,294,088. The number of passengers carried increase to 161,503 from 139,806, but because of the longer flights of the Trans-Canada Air Lines, which started carrying passengers in 1939, the passenger miles increased to 26,107,750 miles from 14,886,718 in 1938. Pounds of freight transported showed little change, decreasing to 21,2[illegible],364 pounds from 21,704,587. Mail also showed a slight decrease to 1,900,347 pounds from 1,901,711.

Air Raids on British Isles

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Believed preliminary to Hitler's long planned attempt at invasion, Nazi air raids upon Britain have become an almost continuous performance, no longer confined to darkness. Casualties, though small in comparison with what might have been expected, have become more numerous, and the official statements that no military objectives have been damaged leave much to the imagination in respect of civil property. Certain the effect upon workers must be upsetting, as is known to be the case in Germany, where industrial centres are bombed nightly by the Royal Air Force.

There is some speculation on this side of the water as to why London has not suffered. Its strong air defences afford a partial explanation, but it would appear also that Nazi aircraft do not get very far inland. They "cross the coast," we read, and are shot down or driven off. That is interesting, because German planes seem to be able to reach distant destinations in the Reich at will, and not infrequently whole squadrons drop their devastating loads and return without suffering a single loss. Berlin is much more vulnerable than London, and there is no doubt that the capital and other unfortified cities could be smashed from the air if the British were so minded.

In all the circumstances, there can be no question that it is sound tactics to concentrate upon destruction of enemy bases for planes and ships, munition depots and oil storages—all the framework of Hitler's scheme for invasion. The R.A.F. has gained ascendancy, and even in the British Isles, where the attackers have an advantage, enemy loss of life exceeds that inflicted upon the civil population. The Nazis are losing seven or eight planes a day and have lost an estimated couple of hundred in these attacks. The Channel, too, remains a never-changing barrier, constantly watched by a fleet now augmented by French war vessels. In the British Isles is stationed the largest land force ever assembled there. The British are ready, even eager, for action, and if Hitler does not soon take the plunge he will find his armies on the defensive in some part of his now attenuated coast line.

Canada's Fishing

(Port Arthur News Chronicle)

The latest issue of Rotarian magazine contains an article telling its readers of the ease and convenience with which they may enter Canada and enjoy "a glorious holiday." It says that "with war having closed ocean lanes once popular for cruises and with favorable exchange rates, Canada is greeting many visitors from her neighbor to the south and both nations are continuing in the tradition of goodwill and understanding which for over a century has marked relations between them."

Thereafter, in an article by Ben East, it goes on to tell that "one of the greatest fishing areas left on the North American continent lies in Canada." In the Lake Superior country there are rivers where you can take walleyes on every cast with a chunk of pork rind. Other rivers where it's northern pike in place of walleyes, and the fishing is every bit as good. The lakes? More of 'em than are shown on any map, more than you or any other man can name. And in scores and hundreds of 'em nobody save maybe a roving prospector or bush trapper has ever dipped a fish-hook.

"Go whenever you can," he urges. "Some of the greatest trout fishing in the world awaits you. Spring to Fall, up there beyond the highway's end. You'll fight squaretails until your wrist aches and eat 'em till your eyes bulge. It's a brand of thrills that's worth going half around the earth to get, the fishing in these brawling wild rivers and dark lakes."

Frivolity

A certain tendency to frivolity unbecoming in times so grave as these might be detected in the official attitude as portrayed by a London newspaper police court reporter, the Toronto Telegram notes.

At the Clerkenwell County Court a man told Registrar Friend: "The landlord told my wife to go to blazes."

"And where is your wife this morning?" asked the registrar.

"She's at home, where she ought to be," said the complainant.

"Then," asked the registrar, "why worry where he sent her? She's not gone."

It was a very famous Canadian railroad president of many years ago who was charged with having made a flippant retort when presented with a similar querulous complaint. One of his station agents, always busy and at times almost driven crazy by the crowding and conflicting claims of his little job, one day told a customer of the line, who had been pestering him day in and day out about delay to a shipment of his, that he had better go look for it in a place where nothing perishable keeps.

The irate customer, scorning all intermediaries, promptly wrote the president, asking if he had to stand for being consigned to the infernal regions by any understrapper of the big corporation.

The presidents reply, according to gossip (but he, when interviewed, denied the whole incident) was:

"Dear Sir,

Sclerotherapy—A New Specialty in Medicine

As you read new words in medicine and particularly of the new kinds of specialists, you may wonder whether dividing the medical profession into so many different specialists is really of help to patients.

As a matter of fact, there is so much that is new being discovered and tested in medicine, that no one man could be proficient in all this new knowledge and how to apply it. The family or general practitioner in these days can usually look after the majority of ailments but because he keeps up to date he knows, for his patients sake, there are times when a specialist should be consulted. I do not means the surgical specialist, eye and ear specialist, but the newer specialists whose specialty as a specialty was unknown twenty to twenty-five years ago.

Some of these new specialists are the psychiatrists who try to discover why the patient "behaves" as he does, the endocrinologist who has made a special study of the gland system—thyroid, pituitary, adrenal, and others, the geriatrician who studies and treats diseases of older people, the allergist who treats patients who are allergic or sensitive to foods and various other substances such as pollen, fur, feathers, and chemical substances.

Perhaps the latest specialty is that of Sclerotherapy. 'Sclero' means hardening and 'therapy' means treatment, so sclerotherapy is treating various ailments by using hardening substances which harden or destroy the unwanted or imperfect tissues. This method of treatment was discredited years ago principally because of the fact that the hardening substances were at fault.

Dr. H. I. Biegeleisen, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, gives an outline of the various conditions of the body which can now be helped by the skillful surgeon or physician who has given sclerotherapy close study.

These conditions are:

1.—Disorders of the veins: varicose veins, variococele, piles or hemorrhoids, vein tumors.

2.—Disorders of the arteries. Enlarged arteries such a aneurysms.

3.—Cystic (bladder) enlargements; hydrocele, burstis—bag of water at joint—knee, elbow, shoulder.

4.—Ruptures or hernias.

5.—Growths—warts.

6.—Miscellaneous: fissures or little cuts, goitre, enlarged turbinates in nose, joints with too much motion.

Canucks Disappointed When Ordered To Return To England Writes Shannonville Soldier

Lance-Sergt. W. Waudley Writes Graphic Story of Entry and Withdrawal From France

BRING DOWN "JERRY"

A graphic description of the Canadian troops' withdrawal from France; of a "Jerry" bomber shot down by Canucks firing Bren guns, and of the timely warning of a French destroyer during the evacuation of the wearers of the Maple Leaf is given in the following letter from Lance-Sergeant W. Waudley to friends here. Lance-Sergeant Waudley was formerly a resident of Shannonville, and is now with the Canadians "somewhere in England."

P16477 Lance-Sgt. Waudley W.
"B" Coy. The Royal Canadian Regiment, C.A.S.F.
Base Post Office, Canada.
19th June, 1940.

Dear Mrs. Leverton, George, Art, Lewis, Don and Leburn.

Well I suppose you are wondering how, when, where, and why I am. Well, I am with the first Canuck Division "somewhere in England." We have been "somewhere in France" but made a hasty withdrawal as no doubt you heard on the radio or read in the papers.

Well I will start and tell you as much as I think I am allowed to and if the censor cuts anything out, you won't be able to read it.

Quite a lot happened even before we left England. We have done an awful lot of travelling and have therefore seen quite a lot of England.

We first did a big "scheme" on Salisbury Plains and were out for a week and ye gods it rained in the usual English fashion and of course we had to stay in it. Luckily no one caught cold and we are much better off for the experience. Secondly we moved back to barracks and puttered around for a couple of weeks and off we went again.

This time we moved to "somewhere in the Midlands" and we were billeted in private houses. It was only a small village (but the villagers called it a town) but we had a wonderful time even though we were there only a week. I had a very nice couple where I billeted and they thought it quite an honor to have a Canadian Sergeant to stay with them. Oh yes! I'm a Lance Sergeant now which is half way between a full Corporal and a full Sergeant. I carry three stripes now and the privates have to call me Sergeant Waudley. Sounds good too!

Well, to continue we came back from "somewhere in the Midlands" and moved into barracks again. After a few days there, we were sent to South Coast port and from there crossed the English channel to France. It took approximately 12 hours to cross, but although it was rough, I managed to hold my stomach down.

Ride in Cattle Trucks

We landed after an uneventful trip on a west coast port and rested for a few hours. Later in the day we were loaded on to cattle trucks, 24 men in each and away we went. I am not going to tell you that we suffered from cold or hunger, etc. because we didn't. I can honestly say that I personally enjoyed it very much. We travelled east and headed toward Paris. All the fellows were excited because we thought that we were going to see some real action. But we were disappointed because we were only 30 miles from Paris when we were ordered back. We passed hundreds of refugees leaving Paris and they were a pitiful sight and made me feel as if I would like to meet Herr Hitler face to face. On the way back we learned that the Germans were closing in on Paris and it would have been foolish for us to try to consolidate a position there, so it was a wise move to withdraw.

Bring Down "Jerry"

When we were again on the boat a "Jerry" plane flew over at night and all our Bren guns opened out and we later found out that we had downed him and the pilot had eleven bullets in him. Not bad shooting eh! Another "Jerry" came over the next morning and we scared him away. He was too high to get in accurate shots. We made a record trip over the channel, because just after we had started out of the harbour a French destroyer dashed after us and signalled that there were planes after our convoy, our ship put on full speed and although there were over 2000 troops on board it seemed to skim the water and we left the rest of the convoy far behind. We are now back in barracks and are waiting for the next move and we hope to get a crack at Fritz pretty soon. Well, reckon I'll have to close but will write again soon. Cheerio for now, hoping you are all well. Please write.

Bill.

Brightening Leisure

Quite a few women are knitting, many others are sending cigarets to the troops, and almost everyone, in one way or another, is doing something for our soldiers. But, are we not doing it in a little too impersonal a manner?

That thought has been well expressed by Captain the Rev. M. C. Davies, recently appointed chaplain of the St. Thomas Air Training School. He told an Amherstburg audience that there is need for citizens to make brighter the leisure hours of the men, and provide for them some recreation.

One thought is this. These men are away from home and friends. A barrack room atmosphere is not the most attractive in the world. Do you realize what a few hours spent in a real home would mean to an average soldier? He will not ask for excitement or extensive entertainment. Just to be able to relax in a pleasant home atmosphere, to be treated for a while as one of the family, and, best of all, to eat a good home-cooked meal, would bring untold joy into his life. You who have good homes might consider that suggestion. —Windsor Daily Star.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

While the biggest air battles the world has ever seen lie ahead over and around the British Isles the losses inflicted on German raiders within the past few weeks give the British air fighters an advantage in confidence and morale.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill yesterday said five German planes were lost for every British plane lost. It is possible the Germans may attempt to overcome air resistance by sending ever larger and larger numbers of bombers and fighters into the British skies at once.

So far as is known the German air force still has a considerable margin over the British in numbers of aircraft in service. It is therefore unlikely it will be deterred even by severe losses from attempting to blast the British fliers out of the air by destroying their landing fields and the factories which manufacture new aircraft and spare parts for those in service.

The prize of victory in the series of air battles now raging is supremacy in the air. Great Britain holds supremacy on the sea. Germany has a more powerful air force but until it can operate against the British Isles and against British ships at sea without constant interference from British fighting planes Germany lacks supremacy in the air.

Extensive Damage

An accident took place on Highway 62, fourteen miles south of Bancroft about eleven a.m. Saturday, when a car driven by Mr. P. McLaren superintendent of the Department of Highways, Bancroft division, became involved with a car driven by Mr. Albert R. Thompson of Lakewood, Ohio.

Mr. McLaren had stopped the Quinte Fruit truck loaded with slabwood for consultation and when McLaren was in the act of pulling out his car from its parked position behind the truck, immediately contacted the oncoming Thompson car, which went out of control, careening across the highway and coming to a stop several hundred feet from the highway causing extensive damage. The McLaren car was able to proceed not being mechanically damaged. The only other person, excepting the drivers, in the accident, was Mrs. Thompson, who was not injured. County Constable G. T. P. Wells investigated the accident.

Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer and family completed their vacation at Trout Lake this weekend in which Mr. Palmateer reports what he considers a very fine exhibition of fisherman's luck. He has for this proof extracted from the lake fourteen salmon trout, two speckled trout and twelve bass and lost the largest trout—as usual.

Trying to Retrieve Chapeau Probable Cause of Accident

Whenever milady's hat becomes disarranged nothing else is of importance or consequence until the troubl is remedied and those funny little things called ladies' hats are back into place at the proper and enticing angle.

However, when a sudden gust of wind blew Mrs. Wm. Jordan's hat off into an unbecoming angle the subsequent happenings proved drastic. Mrs. Jordan, who resides at 55 Dewes Road, Toronto, and is vacationing at Rossmore, released her hold upon the steering wheel of her car in a sudden, but feminine gesture to retrieve her chapeau. The rest is drastic. Mrs. Jordan's car got out of control and crashed into the guard rail along the bay bridge road shortly after 5.15 p.m. last evening.

The car was badly damaged about the radiator, fenders and undercarriage, while four guard rails were snapped off like match wood and only the guard rail cable saved her car from toppling into the ditch on the east side of the bay bridge road. Detective Fred Isard investigated and ordered the vehicle removed by a tow truck. Fortunately there was no other traffic in the vicinity at the time.

Yes, Mrs. Jordan's hat was retrieved and resting at its proper angle after the entire escapade was over, Detective Isard observed.

BOMBS INJURE SIXTEEN CHINESE

Hurled by Terrorists at Office of pro-Chaing Kai-Shek Newspaper

Shanghai, July 16 (AP) — Sixteen Chinese were injured today, several critically, by four bombs hurled by terrorists at offices of Shunpao, pro-Chiang Kai-Shek Chinese daily newspaper in the International Settlement. Two alleged culprits were arrested.

The bombings came after Wang Ching-Wei, head of the Japanese-sponsored regime at Nanking, had ordered arrest and deportation of five American newspapermen and Norwood F. Allman, American lawyer member of the Shanghai municipal council and a director of Shunpao.

GRAIN CROP DAMAGED SAYS KINGSTON REPORT

Kingston, Ont., July 16—(CP)—Considerable damage was done to the grain crop in this district as the result of a heavy rain last night. Hundreds of acres of grain, well headed, was flattened. Farmers say there is little chance of this grain raising again and will have to be cut with a mowing machine and fed to the horses and cattle. In some cases the grain will likely spoil before it can be cut.

PROTEST VOICED

Mr. Shakespeare disclosed that the number of children between five and 15 years who left the United Kingdom in June for the Dominions and the United States were 1,572 and 306, respectively. Of these 1,752 had normal residences in the United Kingdom.

200,000 Applications For Evacuation

"That is so," Mr. Shakespeare replied when asked if it were correct that there are roughly 200,000 applications of children for evacuation and about 20,000 offers from the Dominions.

Mr. Attlee said the scheme was suspended because the navy found it impossible to provide the necessary escort vessels for the Atlantic crossing but that the government hoped that at some future date the situation at sea would permit it being resurrected.

He said that the private evacuation of children would not be stopped but that the risks involved must be shouldered by parents.

Labor Intends to Debate Question

Labor members gave notice that they intended to debate the full question in the House later.

Meanwhile, the registration of children under the evacuation scheme has not been stopped. Already 50,000 have applied to go to Canada and 20,000 to the United States.

G. A. Griffiths, Labor said there is "considerable feeling" in areas which have been bombed because well-to-do children are able to leave for havens of safety while others must remain.

Geoffrey Shakespeare, Dominions' Under Secretary, made no reply when a Labor member asked if he was "aware that there is great indignation at the number of children of cabinet ministers who have left the country."

PROFITEERING

Take such other measures as the wartime prices and trade board applies against profiteering in necessities of life.

This amendment was submitted immediately after M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar) urged exemption of farm implements from the new tax or, failing that, a guarantee that Canadian manufacturers would not be allowed to take advantage of the increased tariff on imports.

The 10 per cent additional impost on imported farm implements was also protested vigorously by Walter Tucker (Lib. Rosthern) who asserted he did not vote for the budget because of this highly protective tariff on implements.

Approve Amendment

"To add 10 per cent to the cost of production of the great basic industries of this country at a time when they are barely able to carry on at all may well strike a blow at them under which they may reel for years," he said.

The House earlier approved another amendment providing that automobiles in possession of dealers when the budget became effective would be subject to a 10 per cent tax. The whole test was whether the car had been "delivered" and this might be at the plant or at the showroom, according to conditions incidental to the movement of the car.

The routine passage of 30 divorce bills in short order brought protests from several parts of the House. Prime Minister Mackenzie King commented that such periodic protests against the practice of the Commons automatically putting through divorce bills which had been examined by the Senate, seemed to serve some purpose because only Quebec and Prince Edward Island now lacked their own machinery for handling divorce cases and he hoped they would eventually remedy that.

Otherwise the day slipped by uneventfully in serious concentration on departmental estimates and governmental answers to ordinary queries.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Flight Angels"

A new, thrilling story of the airways, Warner Bros.' "Flight Angels," with an all star cast, is now playing at the Capitol. The story deals with those angels of the skyways—the airline hostesses.

Chick Farber, played by Dennis Morgan, is an ace pilot, who has flown for Federal Airlines for several years and is now informed that his eyesight is going bad. Flight Superintendent Bill Graves, an old friend of Chick's, reluctantly grounds him but suggests that he take a job as teacher in the airline hostess school. Chick doesn't want to, but Mary Norvell, beautiful air hostess for Federal, gets him to change his mind. But the job is short-lived, for one day the young flyer accepts a post as a pilot in China. The story containing many hilarious situations, is rapidly paced with action and comedy in a manner that will hold you spellbound to the end. Not the least of these is a race between a modern airliner and the good old-fashioned stork. The plane loses.

Dennis Morgan is perfectly cast as the carefree pilot who learns that he'll never be allowed to take a ship off the ground again. Virginia Bruce gives a realistic performance as Mary Norvell, a hostess with a sense of humor and a strong love for Dennis Morgan. Ralph Bellamy is great as the Flight Superintendent, who is forced to ground his best friend, but dares not show the least sign of sympathy for him. Wayne Morris has one of his finest roles as Artie Dixon, Dennis Morgan's co-pilot who has two loves—one for Jane Wyman and the other for a stratosphere plane that he and Dennis Morgan have designed. Jane Wyman lends charm as an airline hostess.

On the same programme for your added enjoyment action packed drama, "A Fight to the Finish" with Don Terry and Rosalind Keith.

AT THE BELLE

"Four Just Men"

One of the most thrilling stories from the pen of Edgar Wallace, master of mystery literature, has been faithfully brought to the screen of the Belle Theatre. The film is Monogram's "The Secret Four" which is based on Wallace's popular best-seller, "Four Just Men."

Four brave men, each imbued with a passionate love of his country and the freedom for which it stands, have banded together in an unofficial counter-espionage system whose influence reaches to the most remote corners of the earth.

There is Terry, already doomed to a speedy death by an incurable disease, fighting to the last breath for the cause. Mansfield, idol of the London stage, whose uncanny knowledge of human characteristics and theatrical disguises, enable him to pose as important high officials. Brodie, a theatrical producer, and Polcard, a society dress-designer, whose swanky shop serves to cover up his patriotic mission, complete the quartet.

Frank Lawton, who will be remembered for his excellent work in "David Copperfield" and more recently, "The Mill on the Floss" adds another wreath to his past laurels with his portrayal of Terry, the doomed patriot. Anna Lee, last seen in "King Solomon's Mines" and "Non-Stop New York", is superb as the young newspaper woman who recognizes, but does not expose, the Secret Four. Opposite her, Griffith Jones does fine work as Griffith, the theatrical impressario. Hugh Sinclair, as Mansfield, and Francis L. Sullivan as Polcard, also turn in performances that make the film outstanding entertainment.

Ellen Drew and Robert Paige, young film players who have attained success within the past few years, are seen together for the first time, hitting a new high for the fine performances, in "Women Without Names" the companion feature attraction.

Miss Drew is the comely girl who advanced from work in a drive-in stand in Hollywood to featured roles in a short time. Her first big role was in "Sing You Sinners," and she has been seen in such productions as "If I Were King" and "The Lady's From Kentucky." She will shortly be starred in the English made "French Without Tears" with Ray Milland.

Paige, the other half of the new romantic team, worked on the stage and in radio before coming to the screen. He has recently been seen in "Emergency Squad", and will shortly appear in "Opened by Mistake."

The story of "Women Without Names" finds them featured as a young couple who fall in love, marry, find their happiness shattered when the girl's ex-husband kills a detective, lets them take the rap. Judith Barrett is also featured. The Belle News of the Hour will be exhibited.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Informal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married in mid-summer, in church. I do not want to wear a formal wedding dress and veil.

1. Do you think that a light-colored sharkskin suit would be appropriate? The weather may even be too warm for me to wear a suit. I would like to wear yellow. What color accessories would you suggest? What type of hat should I wear?

2. What kind of flowers would you suggest my wearing?

3. Would a lace dress be suitable for my mother to wear?

4. What should the groom wear? What flowers should he wear for a boutonniere?

Bride-to-be.

1. I am very enthusiastic about your choice of a yellow sharkskin dress. This is a very smart and cool looking material and in yellow I think it is especially lovely. Your jacket could be a bolero or other type of brief jacket that could easily be taken off, if the day is too warm. Your accessories might be white, a darker shade of yellow, which is a fashionable combination this season. I suggest that you wear the season's fashion highlight in hats—a small hat made almost entirely of flowers. Have some of the flowers yellow, perhaps various shades of yellow and tones that harmonize with this vibrant color. If you aren't the type for small hats, you might wear a rather large hat of the garden party type, perhaps simply banded with a luscious shade of velvet ribbon, darker than the yellow of your dress.

2. Would you like to carry or wear as a corsage Talisman roses? Their beautiful shades—yellow going into dark pink toward the stem—would, I think, be charmingly effective with your yellow sharkskin dress.

3. Yes, a lace dress would be an excellent choice for your mother to wear.

4. At your informal wedding the groom might appropriately wear a dark blue coat and white flannel trousers. And for an informal wedding at this warm season, the groom very often wears a boutonniere of bachelor buttons.

Corsage.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a young man invites a young lady to a formal dance, is it correct for him to send her a corsage? Is it optional? What kind of flowers are best to send?

H. A.

Most girls are thrilled when they receive a corsage from the man who is escorting them to a formal dance. The corsage completes the gala idea of the occasion. Most girls expect a corsage, and most men, knowing this, gallantly send carefully-chosen flowers to arrive the afternoon of the dance. However, this gesture is, of course, optional.

It's an excellent plan for the "date" to ask the girl about the color of the gown she is going to wear, so that he can choose flowers of a color that will harmonize with the colors she is wearing. Sometimes, if he wants to surprise her, he asks her mother or sister or a mutual friend.

Since all girls like gardenias, and since gardenias, being creamy white, go well with any gown, these fragrant and romantic flowers are often sent. If the girl has the decorative habit of wearing flowers in her hair, the beau may send a corsage of three gardenias and one or two separate gardenias for her to wear in her hair. And, fortunately, gardenias are usually inexpensive.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Kisses Another Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For six months I've been going with a young man. I am very fond of him, and he seems to like me, at least so he tells everyone. But he's in the habit of kissing other girls right before my eyes.

We both belong to the same club and when we meet at dances, he never asks me to dance, yet he becomes very angry if I accept dances from other men. I always try to be nice to him. Do you advise that I keep on doing this, or shall I ignore him entirely? Our families are great friends, and we see each other at most all functions, so I can't avoid him.

Patricia.

It looks to me as if you've been spoiling this young man, my dear. He doesn't ask you to dance and gets angry when you dance with other men. He tells people he's fond of you, and then turns around and kisses other girls.

I think a good dose of indifference ought to work miracles with this young man. At the same time I'd advise you to dance with all the partners who ask you.

Not of Her Social Standing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 17 years old and will be in my last year in high school in the fall. There's a young man, employed by my family to do odd jobs such as cutting the lawn, washing windows, etc., of whom I've grown very fond. He is more than ten years older than I am and seems to be very intelligent.

I know he has not our social standing, but since school is out I see him oftener, and I find that I'm growing fonder of him each day. I know he cares for me and although he doesn't want to show it, sometimes he can't help himself. He says when I'm of age he would prove to me how much he cares. I'm willing to wait as I know I'm much too young to marry at present.

Merle

As you realize yourself, 17 is too young to consider marrying a man, especially if he's ten years older, and very probably would not be acceptable to your family. Why don't you mingle with the boys and girls in your high school class during the summer. Go out with them and enjoy yourself.

Seeing this young man so frequently makes it difficult for you to persuade yourself you don't care for him. Nearness has led to many an undesirable marriage. I wish I could persuade you to confide in some member of your family.

He Must Be Interested

Dear Miss Fairfax:

There's a certain boy who lives several blocks away from me. He's about a year older than I am, and I'm 16. I like to go places where I'm apt to run into him, but when I do see him I cross the street, and he does the same. Occasionally, I get up enough courage to speak, but his answers are always short. And then I'm more discouraged than ever. What do you suppose is wrong with us?

Maida

When you and the boy rush to different sides of the street at each other's approach, it only means you're mutually interested and are indulging in a perverse type of coquetry which is very genuine and might mean "I like you."

As girls have more poise on such occasions than the bewildered male, suppose you speak pleasantly and try having a little chat. His short answers are only his defense mechanism at work.

Domestic Roles Reversed; Husband Cooks, Wife Works

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My problem is a peculiar one. I don't want a divorce and am not in love with anyone else, nor is my husband unfaithful.

We've been married twelve years, and until two years ago, my husband provided for us in a rather meager way. He lost his job and eighteen months ago I secured a position where I am still employed. I've given up nagging my husband to get a job because it gets me nowhere. He stays home and keeps house, and although my love for him has turned to contempt I cannot bring myself to "throw him out" as I feel that our son of ten years needs his father.

When I come home and find my husband comfortably smoking, I doubt whether he makes any real effort to find work. Our little boy knows nothing of this domestic turmoil, as he and his father are pals. Can I sue for non-support?

Worried.

Your case suggests a very successful novel written by a popular author some years ago, under the title of "The Helpmeet." The case was identical with yours. The woman brought home the bacon and the man cooked it. There were arguments before the couple agreed to this solution.

Some women would be willing to accept the arrangement, especially if the husband is a good cook and neat housemaid, though what we regard as an innate sense of the fitness of things puts the man in an undignified position. If he has no job you could hardly sue him for non-support. With the war making jobs easier to obtain, it is probable, if he tries hard enough, he will be able to secure one.

Graceful Walk On Right Heels

By HELEN FOLLETT

A woman should be lovely from her head to her heels. Heels mean a lot. If they are too high they throw the body out of balance. The upper portion of the torso goes forward, the arms as well, the back has an ugly line. Knees buckle which means that the legs are not straight and neat as they should be.

Weak ankles result from the wearing of spiked heels because they assume a side to side swing for which they are not designed. Haven't you observed that many times? If the foot has a substantial hold on the ground that will not happen. Heels that are run over on the outer side make a girl look bow legged; those worn on the inner side give her knock knees. Hence, watch your taps, my paper friends. As soon as they show signs of wear, toddle to the cobbler, have them repaired.

Keep Straight

High heels were intended only for evening wear. Won't do much harm if lower heels are worn during the day.

It is vitally important that the spinal column be kept tall and straight, a condition to which lifted heels is not conducive. It is the straight backbone that gives spirit to the body and makes for good carriage. If a woman hasn't correct posture she need have no ambition to be a snappy dresser, it just can't be done.

Do you dream about magic drops that will make your eyes sparkle? Stop dreaming. Glitter on the soul windows is created by good health and natural animation. Keep jolly thoughts inside your head and they will peek out of your eyes.

When the eyes are tired, bathe with hot water, then with cold. Never rub the eyes with a soiled glove; that's the best possible way of starting up an infection. When using mascara or eye shadows, be careful not to get these preparations in the eyes. If vision isn't normal, don't hesitate to get specs no matter how much you hate them. Eye strain causes wrinkles, has a devastating effect upon the central nervous system.

Be good to your eyes and they'll be good to you.

"When using mascara or eye shadows, be careful not to get these preparations in the eyes."

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Care Against Infections

I wonder, speaking from experience, if the average mother really understands the need to keep infections from the baby—and the baby from infections.

I have just come from a home where I found the baby suffering from an intense cold. When I asked questions about the possible source of infection, I discovered that the father has had a bad cold for quite a few days. Yet, the baby slept in his crib, right beside his parent's bed, within a few feet of that coughing, sneezing father. I was harsh with those parents for the baby is very sick, and the cause of his illness is so obvious, and so unnecessary, that I was really exasperated. I told the mother that the baby may not get better—pneumonia may set in. And I also told her that if he dies, the parents are directly to blame.

The battle against infection is constant for all of us. A baby is far less able to wage the fight for he has had no time to build up immunities.

Infections are mankind's most uncompromising enemies. They never cease their efforts to cripple, to destroy. They are silent, they are insidious, they strike without warning.

For a baby, these enemies lurk in milk that hasn't been carefully handled, or is unpasteurised. They cling to the nipple of the bottle from which he eats. They come on the clothing and breath of brothers and sisters and loving parents. They come in with the friendly dog, the cat; they are even in the air he breathes. These enemies come at him from all angles and from all ways. Of course you cannot protect him from them all. But you can protect him from the majority of them, and from the most dangerous.

You can kill most of these enemies with disinfectants and by sterilizing. I have a friend, a doctor, who often tells mothers that they should boil everything except the baby. I agree with him. The milk should be boiled, the bottles and nipples boiled, diapers and clothing should be boiled.

Dozens of mothers have talked to me with awe of the great precautions we take against infections at the nursery where the Dionne Quintuplets live. Yet, these same mothers, perhaps, allow Aunt Delia when she comes for a visit with a heavy cold, to kiss and fondle the baby!

DANCING CLASS GIVES PROGRAM

Mrs. Lillian Ashley's Group Well Received at Hume Arena

The program of the floor show for the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. in aid of the Red Cross which appeared at the Hume Arena on Friday, July 12th, was given by Mrs. Lillian Ashley's class. These youthful dancers and singers were well received and their talent showed in the numbers they gave. Jeanie Watson in a very appropriate costume of red and blue danced a buck and wing tap dance. Ronnie Donavon attired in a black top hat and tails costume sang and danced with the ease of a professional. Little five-year-old Joy Mumby, Stirling, won the hearts of her audience with her Irish step dance. She was dressed as an Irish colleen. Joan Marsh and Joyce Woodhouse, ever Belleville favourites, as usual danced with perfect time and ease, a very smart team that is destined to go far in the entertainment world.

Dances Clever Routine

Seven-year-old Mona Jean Hartley, another favourite, danced a clever routine. She was dressed in a brilliant tuxedo costume and showed her ability as a dancer in the intricate steps she executed and seemed right at home doing her act. Another clever turn was Barbara Donavon who danced a Sailor's Hornpipe with taps, dressed in her white sailor costume. She shows skill and grace and was greatly applauded,

One of the special treats was Billy Ruth Marsh, clever soloist who sang "My Buddy." Billy then sang a duet with her brother, Jackie Marsh. This was received with great enthusiasm by the audience.

Jackie Marsh, whose splendid voice is always appreciated, sang several numbers and as usual was encored again and again. These kiddies deserve credit for their splendid program. Mrs. William Warham was accompanist.

CONFLICT, confusion and secrecy are observed in this day's astral chart. While there is a decided sign of benefit, with generous and expansive influence of enhancement, growth, financial gain as well as personal popularity and prestige, yet there is need of precaution, shrewdness or strategy to attain such desirable objectives. Writings, papers, and both business and social correspondence seems to be at the root of duplicity or craft, so be alert to all forms of subtlety. Be vigilant with friends involved in finances and keep restrained.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year of intrigue, deception, fraud or tricky entanglements unless they exert ceaseless vigilance and precaution, even in transactions involving friends. There may be peculiar developments or hazards with the most trusted of friends, and that concerning the affections as well as financial matters. Some decided benefits may be accomplished by shrewdness and watchfulness. There should be an expansive year, with personal popularity and many social pleasures. Be particularly careful with all correspondence and documents.

A child born on this day may be extravagant and generous to a fault, thereby being easily victimized financially and imposed on in sentimental relations. Special training in thrift and integrity would not be amiss.

Hundreds Of Applications Made To Children's Aid Society

Capt. T. D. Ruston, Supt. of C.A.S., Addresses Rotary Club on Subject

DETAILS EXPLAINED

Hundreds of applications have been made to the Children's Aid Society by people offering their homes to evacuees from England, stated Capt. Thomas Ruston, Belleville, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society for Hastings County, speaking to the Rotary Club here last night.

"There are three ways the children are being brought out to Canada from Britain," he stated. "First, there may be a complete transfer of a unit, such as a school or secondly private individuals may have relations brought out to Canada or thirdly the children may be brought out at the government's expense and placed in homes throughout the country by the Children's Aid Society.

"In all cases the children will be sent to homes that are similar to their homes in the British Isles. In this way the children will not feel so out of place, especially if environment is practically the same."

"Prior to leaving England, the children are carefully examined by doctors. On the voyage across the ocean one doctor attends to 500 children, while there is one nurse for each 200 children. Upon their disembarkment in Canada they are kept in their groups and sent to the various Children's Aid Society headquarters.

"The evacuees for Ontario are taken to Toronto and lodged in the University of Toronto and the Masonic Temple for a period of between five to ten days. During this time they receive medical care. Each child is vaccinated and receives the first dose of toxoid inoculation for diphtheria. Second and third doses are given the children after they have been placed in the private homes.

In Different Districts

"The evacuees are located in different districts based on the population of the district and the school accommodation," said Capt. Ruston. "It is the desire of the Children's Aid Society to see that the schools are not overcrowded so the school boards in some districts will not have to bear heavy expenditures.

"During the stay of the children in Canada, the Children's Aid Society will remain their legal guardian with full power and control over them. No child will be placed in a home longer than for the duration of the war.

"The children will range in age from five years to fourteen years. All records of the children will be maintained by the C.A.S.

"Homes that are about to accept children will be visited by representatives of the Children's Aid and must receive the approval of the local placement committee before the child is placed in the home. So far the applications have been of exceptionally high quality and can meet any requirements.

"During their stay in Canada, medical attention will be given to the children. Major illnesses or operations will be paid out of the Central Dominion Fund upon recommendation of the local C.A.S.

"Canadian people may nominate the children they desire to have in their homes," said Capt. Ruston. "The person desiring a child must give the name, age and the names of the parents in the old country to the Children's Aid Society in order to guarantee that the child will be placed in their home."

Capt. Ruston stated that there has been a wonderful response for children from the Rotary Clubs of the district and large numbers of applications have been received from private individuals.

In closing, he expressed his great appreciation for the offers of voluntary help that have been received and pointed out that in time this help would be fully utilized.

Rain Fails to Deter Citizens

A deluge of rain throughout the early part of the evening failed to keep hundreds of patriotic townsmen away from the two local theatres last night, as both were jammed to the doors and many had to be turned away.

War savings stamps night drew the largest crowds to the two theatres that have ever been experienced. Both theatres were sold out of stamps early in the evening and efforts to purchase more stamps at the banks by the theatre managers were unsuccessful. One theatre reports that he sold over $100 more than his allotment.

The Trent Theatre was jammed to the doors by seven o'clock with every war savings stamp sold out. The audience joined in singing patriotic songs before the show. The shows were "The Magic Bullet" with Edward G. Robinson and "Honeymoon Over."

At the Capitol Theatre, the response was the same with every war savings stamp being taken up shortly after the show had opened. Long queues waited on the street before the doors were opened in their desire to purchase the stamps. "Should Husbands Work?" a Higgins family picture and "Missing Daughters" with Richard Arlen and Rochelle Hudson, were the two excellent features provided by the management.

Rainstorm Welcomed

The rainstorm that swept the district and left the ground covered with inches of water was most welcome by the farmers throughout the district. The rain coming at this time will be a great help to the fruit growers and market gardeners around Trenton, it was reported here today.

So heavy was the rain that the gutters were unable to carry away the water fast enough and large pools collected on the streets.

The softball game between the Doughnuts and the Benedict Proctors was called off and will be played tonight, according to an announcement by Jesse Baker, President of the league.

Recruiting Successful

Recruiting at the Trenton Armouries has been very successful according to Major Angus Mowat, in charge of the depot, this morning. The station was opened yesterday and will be used by Headquarters Company of the Second Battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Yesterday large numbers of young men were taken on for the non-permanent militia and will receive their medical boards tomorrow night. Lt. Col. P. L. Reid, M.D., will be in charge of the medical examinations.

Traffic Drops 70 P.C. At Windsor Tunnel

Windsor, Ont., July 16 —(CP)— Officials of the Detroit and Canada Tunnel Corporation reduced their staff by five members and weekly working hours from 48 to 42 today because of a 70 per cent drop in traffic since the new United States Immigration regulations went into effect July 1.

Fred C. Reese, treasurer, said more men will have to go if traffic does not improve and they will all be Canadians.

"However, the tunnel company is hopeful that clarification of the immigration regulations in the United States will help and we won't have to cut the force any more," he said. "Eighty-five per cent of our traffic is American and there is no reason that we should not still have that amount."

Police Blotter

Ralph Graham, Trent Road, complained to police that a motor car had struck his automobile opposite the Belle Theatre last night, and the driver had failed to stop at the scene of the accident.

Mr. Graham was depositing passengers, who attended the Belle Theatre in connection with Canada's Movie Industry war charity, when another motor car struck his car in the rear. Considerable damage resulted to the rear fender of Mr. Graham's car. Fortunately, however, he was able to provide the police with the licence plate number of the fleeting vehicle and further action was promised by the Desk Sergeant Arthur Booth.

Early last evening Helen Sprung, 12 Murney Street, reported the loss of her bicycle, which she had parked at the West Belleville playgrounds while at play. Joyriders are believed responsible, police stated today.

A few minutes after midnight last night, Constables Thomson and Wright hastened to the vicinity of the Capitol Theatre, where disturbances were reported by neighbours. The officers stated that a fistic encounter had been in progress allegedly between Ross McKenna, 8a South George St., and Charles Keegan, 30 East Dundas Street. After questioning at police station McKenna was allowed his liberty, while Keegan was held pending L.C.A. charges, Chief Kidd revealed today.

MARSHAL PETAIN CALLS CABINET

Members Discuss Question of Moving Government Back to Paris

Grenoble, France, July 16.—(AP)—Marshal Petain, France's chief of State, called a second meeting of his cabinet in Vichy today to discuss reconstruction problems and the question of moving back to Paris.

The newspaper Le Petit Dauphinois here hinted that there was more than reconstruction in the Petain government's desire to return to Paris.

"From news coming from Paris", said a dispatch from Vichy, "it may be concluded that there is urgent need to clarify the situation created in Paris by activities of certain political personalities whose loyalty to the Petain government is doubtful".

There was no further indication of who these "personalities" were or what they were doing in the German-occupied capital.

Healey accused Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson and Police Chief Ralph Lawler of conspiring against him. Mr. Anderson replied, "There isn't a vestige of truth in these statements".

Open Forecast Roosevelt Willbe Nominated for 3rd Term

Member of Roosevelt's Cabinet Predicted President Would be Nominated and Would Run

FARLEY TO RETIRE

By W. B. RAGSDALE
Associated Press Staff Writer
Associated Press Staff Writer

—A member of President Roosevelt's cabinet openly forecast his nomination for a third term today while Democratic delegates pushed their convention through more gusts of oratory before the actual balloting begins Thursday.

Labor Secretary Frances Perkins told a breakfast gathering of several thousand women that "we are about to break tradition and nominate a man for a third term." When the burst of applause subsided, the Labor Secretary added:

"We don't do this lightly. There is not a woman in this room who doesn't realize the seriousness of breaking tradition."

Directors of the third term drive were described as still uncertain whether to put the President normally into nomination and the Vice Presidential problem, on the surface, at least, was no nearer solution than it had been yesterday when Speaker William Bankhead delivered the keynote speech.

Farewell to Farley

The keynote speech of Bankhead and a "farewell" address by National Chairman James A. Farley highlighted the first major convention session last night at the Chicago Stadium.

The delegates headed back this morning for another round of oratory before getting down to the real business of adopting a platform and naming a Presidential candidate.

Farley was given a tumultuous ovation when he urged the party workers to "give our successor and the new National Party organization the same support that was accorded to the National Committee in 1932 and 1936."

The delegates already had been counselled by Mayor Edward J. Kelly in his welcoming speech to "draft Roosevelt." But Kelly said the President always had turned aside his every suggestion that he run again.

Other leaders of States whose delegations are pledged solidly to Mr. Roosevelt for a third term said they had no more definite word from the White House than did Kelly. They had no instructions from anyone as to what to do.

In this air of uncertainty, a split developed in the Massachusetts delegation, promised to Farley. One delegate, Clem Norton of Boston, shouted in a caucus: "Mr. Farley is a phoney candidate. I want the world to know where I stand—with Roosevelt."

Five For Vice-President

The vice-presidential picture was even more confused. Potential candidates mushroomed on every side. State Secretary Cordell Hull, Jesse H. Jones of Texas, Paul V. McNutt of Indiana, Agricultural Secretary Henry Wallace and Senator Byrnes of South Carolina shared the most prominent consideration.

As in the recent Republican convention at Philadelphia, the knottiest problem was reconciling divergent views over foreign policy. The committee heard demands that the United States go so far as to convoy supplies to Great Britain. Senators Burton Wheeler of Montana and Patrick McCarran of Nevada declared that to do so would be an act of war. They have said they would fight any proposal that strong.

On the other hand Senator Claude Pepper of Florida was leading a demand for a plank advocating all possible aid short of war.

In his keynote address, Speaker Bankhead said the major objectives "of both parties must be unity and solidarity of purpose in preserving "inviolate the structure of our government and the perpetual freedom of its people".

He said that "not only is this administration opposed absolutely to a participation in any European war" but that it has "done everything possible within the bounds of reason" to preserve peace abroad and "keep us out of involvement in a foreign war".

"We do not propose", he added, "to appease those aggressors whose doctrines wage war upon every principle of liberty for a free people that our Declaration of Independence and our federal constitution preserved".

Italian Protectorate Over Palestine Urged By Roman Newspaper

HAIL THRESHES WHEAT IN FIELD

Allan's Mills and Ryleston District Suffer Heavy Crop Losses

Allan's Mills, Ont. (Special)—Hailstones said to be as large as mothballs and some the size of half a hen's egg, rained destruction on crops and gardens in this district early Monday evening when a freakish storm ripped a path four miles wide for an approximate distance of twenty-five miles.

In the vicinity of Rylston, the hail threshed wheat in fields and levelled other standing crops. Second growth of alfalfa and other hay grasses were levelled as flat as the proverbial pancake, while residents of the storm-ridden district report that not a flower is left standing in lawns and gardens. Potato crops and other planted produce suffered heavily, while in many districts of the area tomato crops are a total loss.

Telephone wires were ripped down by the severity of the hailstorm and service was disrupted for upwards of eight hours. Barns and other buildings show signs of the driving force of the hail, small indentations being noticeable on many frame buildings.

The storm is thought to have originated approximately twenty miles east of this district and travelled in a northeasterly to southwesterly direction. Areas a scant one hundred yards from the edge of the unique storm were undamaged.

Farms in the Springbrook district suffered heavy damage to crops and gardens, while other communities in the path of the storm report similar losses.

The storm was the heaviest to visit this part of the district in a number of years.

BIGGEST NAMES IN GOLF COMPETE

Walter Hagen's Ryder Cup Team and Gene Sarazen's Challengers Take to Course Today

Detroit, July 16 (AP) —Golfdom's biggest names match strokes over Oakland Hills' rolling course today as a climax to a war of words between Walter Hagen's Ryder cup team and Gene Sarazen's challengers.

From the match that grew out of an argument at last month's Inverness invitational tournament at Tolyedo, O. the Red Cross hopes to realize $25,000 for its war relief fund.

Sarazen, the Connecticut gentleman-farmer, found fault—and still does—with the United States Golf Association's choice of Ryder cuppers.

Ryder cup Captain Hager disagreed. Sarazen offered to pick a team that would sweep the Ryder cuppers off the course—any course—and Hagen accepted.

But the individual match between the two team captains is off—temporarily at least—because of Sarazen's insistence upon adhering to Ryder Cup rules.

"My team came here to play the Ryder Cup team", Sarazen explained. "Under Cup rules, Hagen is a non-playing captain and can get into competition only in case of emergency. As far as I can see, no emergency exists, so the match is out."

CALLS L. JENKINS TO TAKE BEATING

Sports Writer Favors Armstrong Against Lightweight in New York on Wednesday

(By Gayle Talbot)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, July 16—(AP)—At the risk of being disbarred from the local chapter of the ex-Texans Association, I'm afraid that Lew Jenkins is due to take a bad beating from Henry Armstrong tomorrow night at the Polo Grounds.

The reason is that Jenkins, though he fought his way to the lightweight championship in a sensational manner, has not been called upon to show that he can take a hard punching around the body.

In scoring the dazzling succession of knockouts that gained him his shot at Lou Ambers, Jenkins took no heavy punishment. All he did was thump his opponent a few times and then they turned on the lights and started stacking the chairs.

Jenkins backers are counting on a knockout. They hope that Lew can connect with a couple of those terrific swipes of his and flatten Armstrong before the negro gets in his really destructive work. It is doubtful that even Lew's best friend thinks he can win a decision over the dreamy little negro in 12 rounds.

But knocking out Armstrong seems to be quite a problem. Ceferino Garcia, a near-middleweight with a mule's kick in his right hand, laid perhaps a dozen of his famous "bolos" right on Henry's lug one night in the garden, and all it got him was a licking. Armstrong shuddered under the impact a time or two, but then only came on to rip at Garcia's middle the harder.

The Gamblers have had Armstrong a favorite all along, and their odds against Jenkins are likely to be a solid 2 to 1 before the two enter the ring.

Fred Reinke, Milwaukee Negro, is pictured in his outboard motorboat as he won the 60-mile international outboard marathon at Detroit before a large crowd. Reinke was awarded the Gar Wood trophy.

ROBOT RACKET TOAID TENNIS DUBS

This robot racket is claimed to be a boon to tennis players, both tournament players and just plain dubs, in that it will feed a constant succession of balls to any desired part of the court for practice purposes. As the balls drop from the container at the top of the machine they can be served or driven from any angle so that the player can perfect weaknesses in his play by constant practice. William F. White, instructor at the Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, is looking over the tireless robot racket.

Washington Senators Become New Wrecking Crew Of Majors Knocking Indians From Perch

Senators Defeat Cleveland While Tigers Take A's to Go Into Lead

REDS INCREASE LEAD

Cincinnati Now Three Full Games in Front of Dodgers Who Split Twin Bill

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Staff Writer).

The rest of the American League finally has succeeded in getting the proper respect from St. Louis Browns, but now the circuit has a new wrecking crew.

Washington Senators, who last week temporarily deposed Detroit Tigers from the American League lead, knocked Cleveland Indians off the top perch yesterday.

Washington won't be any more than a troublemaker this year, but Bucky Harris' Senators are doing their bit to keep the race in the junior circuit uncertain. They even climbed from the cellar to sixth place with their 8-6 decision yesterday, the second straight over Cleveland.

Big Sid Hudson, the rookie graduate from a class "D" league, pitched hitless ball for five innings and allowed the Tribe only seven safeties in all. His teammates gave him ample margin by smacking Lefty Al Milnar for six runs in the second and third innings.

13th Straight Defeat

The Browns, who were getting into everybody's hair through May and June, suffered their 13th consecutive defeat as Joe Cronin and Jim Tabor led Boston Red Sox to 10-6 victory. Cronin hit a homer and a single and Tabor three singles to place a 15-hit offensive.

Detroit nosed out Philadelphia Athletics 9-8 to regain first place. Eight of the Tigers' runs were crammed into the fourth inning, when Hank Greenberg hit his 17th homer with two on. But it took a later circuit clout by Rudy York to decide the game.

Chicago White Sox halted a four-game winning parade by New York Yankees with a 3-2 squeeze play. Lefty Ed. Smith held the champs to five hits for seven innings and when New York finally chased him in the eighth it was too late. Joe Kuhel's 14th homer in the first half of that inning proved to be the deciding run.

Reds Lengthen Margin

Cincinnati Reds won another one-run verdict, their fourth in six games, 3-2 over the Phillies and lengthened their margin in the National League over the second place Brooklyn Dodgers to three full games. Bucky Walters held the tail-enders to five hits in acquiring his 13th victory of the year.

The Dodgers divided a double-header at Pittsburgh, winning the first 10-1 and losing the second 4-3. Whitlow Wyatt spaced 10 hits effectively and hit a home run, a double and a single toward the Brooklyn total of 17 safeties in the first game. But the Pirates pounced on Tot Pressnell for four runs in the second and third frames of the nightcap and held on to win as Bob Klinger kept 10 hits scattered.

New York Giants dropped a 5-3 game to Chicago Cubs. The terrible Terrymen made 15 hits to seven for the Cubs, but left 16 runners stranded, two short of the record. Nevertheless they had the game tied at two-all when Hank Leiber came to bat in the last half of the seventh and hit a home run with two on.

St. Louis Cardinals massacred Boston Bees 12-2 with a 20-hit bombardment.

IN THE NAVY NOW

Dave Smukler, ex-Temple university star fullback and professional football player with the Philadelphia Eagles, is in the American navy now. He joined the regulars and is now stationed at Fort Slocum, New York, as a buck private at $21 a month. He couldn't make the air corps, so he entered the coast artillery and hopes to go to Hawaii for service. Private Smukler is pictured here at Fort Slocum.

RUPPERT REGIME AT N.Y. STADIUM NEARLY AT END

Postmaster General Jim Farley and Syndicate Likely to Purchase Yankee Machine

FARLEY WELL KNOWN

Lawyer for Estate Announces Sale Price for Plant and Clubs $4,000,000

Chicago, July 16.—(AP)— It's rather common knowledge now that the prosperous Ruppert regime of the New York Yankees is at an end.

The new owners of the club, likely a syndicate headed by Postmaster General James A. Farley, will have quite a task ahead of them if they expect to match the record of Jacob Ruppert.

The Colonel, who died in January, 1939, at the age of 71, became owner of the Yanks in 1923. They won the pennant that year on the last day of the season and captured eight other flags while the wealthy brewer was alive.

Farley, however, is not a newcomer to the sports field. He has behind him a distinguished record as chairman of the New York Boxing Commission from which he progressed into an equally brilliant career as a political strategist.

The report that Farley would head a syndicate to take over the Yanks has been prevalent for some time, but Attorney Jeremiah T. Mahoney of New York, representing George Ruppert, declared yesterday that negotiations with the Farley group had "gone from the speculatory to the very realistic stage". George Ruppert is a brother of the late owner and now vice-president of the club.

Mahoney added the sale probably would be consummated in two weeks for a price in the neighborhood of $4,000,000. The lawyer explained the Ruppert estate needed cash "to meet inheritance taxes". Farley, here for the democratic convention, declined to comment on the Mahoney statement.

JERSEY GIANTS TAKE DRUBBING

Defeated Twice by Newark Bears and Now in Fifth Place

(By The Associated Press)

Seldom has a defending champion in the International League taken a worse tumble than Jersey City Giants are taking in the current race—and no important help is in sight from the parent club across the river.

Two defeats at the hands of Newark last night on their home grounds, 4-1 and 8-4, dropped last year's champions into fifth place, a game behind Baltimore Orioles and only three games in front of sixth-place Buffalo. The other scheduled tilt between Montreal and Toronto being rained out.

George Washburn set the little Giants down with five hits in the opener to mark up his ninth victory of the season, and Norman Branch held them to seven blows in the second as he recorded his 10th win. Clydell Castleman and Frank Pearce were the losers.

Newark's leadoff man, Holmes, hit a double and two singles and scored three runs to wreck Castleman's chances in the first game.

And then Alex Kampouris unloaded his 20th home run of the season with the bases loaded in the second inning to put the second tilt on ice.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Seeking to assist our own Belleville boys, who are at present enlisted with the 34th Battery, the Shell "Oilers" play the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" softball team at Coleman Flats this evening. There are several important factors which the sports fans should remember—all of the proceeds will go towards the purchase of sporting equipment for the Belleville boys in the 34th; next, a good game can be assured as the Flyers boast of the best softball team they've ever had at the Trenton Airport and lastly every cent goes to war charity, so give early, often and without reservation. Incidentally several of the Belleville contingent with the 34th Battery are planning to take in tonight's game at the Flats. Perhaps it might be a good idea to have these boys take up the collection while in uniform. On Thursday night at Trenton the Flyers are playing the Simpson girls of the senior Sunnyside League in Toronto, this game being postponed on account of rain from last week.

The next week will see the termination of both the ladies' and men's softball schedules. Both leagues seem to be suffering from the malady, namely a weak sister club and several postponements that include these weaker teams. Neither Picton of the Belleville Softball Association nor the "Five and Tens" of the ladies' loop have won a single game all season. All postponed games in the men's loop affect Picton and should be dropped from the schedule and forgotten, thus allowing the loop to commence its play-offs July 24th. There are two separate and distinct play-offs incorporated in the Belleville Softball League, first the City League championships for the Bank of Commerce trophy in which all of the local clubs compete, and then there is the O.A.S.A. playdowns, which embrace only the Shell "Oilers" and Corby A.C. These are different and separate series with no connection and will be played at different times. Over in the girls' league they are seriously considering the completion of a home and home schedule, their original schedule being but a one and three-fifth schedule. The idea might be worth consideration, providing the top five teams were the only ones included in the additional series.

Did you know that Vernon Kennedy almost became the first author of a no-hit game to suffer defeat in a similar performance by an opposing moundsman when young Sid Hudson of the Senators, yielding one safety, triumphed over Kennedy and the Browns, 1 to 0, last week.

While with the White Sox, Kennedy turned back the Indians without a hit or run, August 31, 1935. Rip Radcliff, a teammate of Kennedy now, as in 1935, spoiled Hudson's no-hitter last week when he doubled for St. Louis in the ninth inning.

Nine pitchers are now in the majors with no-hit performances to their credit—Johnny Vander Meer, Bob Feller, Monte Pearson, Paul Dean, Bill Dietrich, Buck Newsom, Carl Hubbell, Ted Lyons and Kennedy—but none has ever lost in a game in which his hill adversary turned in a hitless performance.

Do you remember when Jack Delaney, French-Canadian challenger, dethroned Paul Berlenbach as world light heavyweight boxing champion, 14 years ago today at Brooklyn. The bout went 15 rounds Delaney winning by a wide margin. He dropped his title in 1927 to enter the heavyweight class.

After many months of rumours it begins to look as though the New York Yankees will be sold, along with all of the baseball holdings of the late Col. Jake Ruppert. Again name of Postmaster-General James A. Farley of the U.S.A. is linked as the head of a syndicate to purchase the baseball house that Ruppert built. Farley's name was not connected with the ballyhoo of the pre-convention Democratic platform, which might indicate that James A. is more interested in baseball than politics. The purchase figure is set at $4,000,000, but includes the Newark Bears, Kansas City Blues, Yankees and the "house that Ruth built," the Yankee Stadium, which alone is assessed in New York for $2,500,000. Actually one of the principal reasons Ruppert holdings are being sold is to meet governmental inheritance taxes. In the meantime the present-day Yankees are having a hard old battle in the American League and just can't seem to gain on either Cleveland or Detroit to date. However, we understand the sale of the Yankees has moved from the speculatory to the very realistic stage during the past few days.

SPORT SPICE—No matter how you look, Henry Armstrong will be at least a 2 to 1 favourite over Lew Jenkins Wednesday night. . . Actually the fight experts don't seem to agree when speaking of the results of Wednesday's scrap, which might indicate the champion is well over his peak and on the road downhill, in which case Jenkins would have a better than average chance. Jenkins was pushed around quite freely by his sparring partners, which doesn't mean a thing once the title bout commences, however. . . . The tip is out—at least six members of the Yankees are slated down the river in 1941, which means a trip to the big time for several members of the Bears and K. C. "Blues." . . . The Senators beat the Indians yesterday, putting the Tigers back atop of the junior loop. . . . Bucky Walters chalked up his 13th win of the season as the Reds beat the Phils 3-2, but the Tigers were lucky, they scored eight in the 4th to eke out a 9-8 win over the A's, which is too close for comfort. . . . And don't forget the war charity game at the Flats, although the girls are holding forth at the Armouries tonight also.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

PERCY C. McGUIRE NEW PRESIDENT OF ROTARY CLUB

Installation Ceremony Held at Country Club at Monday's Luncheon

DIRECTORS NAMED

With traditional Rotary ceremony newly-elected President Percy C. McGuire, who will guide the destinies of the local Rotary Club for the coming year, was duly installed in office at a luncheon held at the Bay of Quinte Country Club yesterday.

President McGuire, succeeds Past-President Howard Clarke, whose splendid efforts at the head of the club during the year just past elicited laudatory remarks from the majority of the clubmen present.

Other officers duly installed included Secretary Orland Pinkston; Treasurer Howard Frost and directors, Irvine Hefkey, John Deacon, Dave Martin and Lloyd Hicks. Past-President Clarke automatically becomes the vice-president of the club.

Installation ceremonies were conducted by Past President McLean Haig, who later briefly addressed the club. Past-President Clark in a "retirement" address expressed his appreciation to his officers, directors and members of the club for the fine co-operation and assistance given him during his tenure of office.

Novel Function

A novel function of the luncheon occurred, when President McGuire after assuming the chair, asked his co-operations and assistance given selves by giving the club a resume of their lives. Many humorous notes were introduced at this point with Rotarian Hefkey bringing down the figurative house, by explaining to his fellow Rotarians that at "present I am the manager of the Belleville Branch of the Royal Bank of Canada and Private Hefkey No. such and such of the Home Guard".

A distinguished guest at the function was Mayor William Hetherington of Malartic, a new gold-mining town with a population of 3,000 people which sprang into prominence practically overnight. Mayor Hetherington is the town's first chief magistrate and is general manager of the Canadian Malartic Gold Mine the first one of four large mines now in production.

A native of Deseronto Mayor Hetherington is paying his first visit to his native soil in 35 years. He is a mining engineer, and in years past his father was connected with the railroad, and the Rathbun Company in Deseronto. A son of the mayor, graduated from Albert College last year. Mayor Hetherington was accorded a warm welcome by the Rotarians.

21 1-2 Lb. 'Lunge Hooked at Marmora

Marmora, (Special)—Usually it is an American tourist who gets the first large-sized musky of the season from local waters, but this year, an Ontario visitor enjoyed the distinction of winning out against local anglers. Accompanied by Henry Empey of Marmora, and Orville Trumble of Deloro, Thomas Jackson of Coe Hill, hooked a beauty on Crowe River, south of the bridge at noon on Monday which tipped the scales at 21 1-2 pounds.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 8.

Ben looked tired and dirty in the cold morning light, and had not shaved. There was no bathroom in the house; there were no mirrors, no plumbing. But in a sort of shed back of the woodshed that opened off the kitchen there was a plain old pine table upon which a nicked basin and a tin pitcher stood as witness to the fact that ablutions had once been customary there. None of the Ballards had as yet made the effort to reestablish the custom. The girls' hair looked fuzzy and disordered; cramped and chilly they crouched on the chairs at the kitchen table or gathered about the reluctantly smoking stove.

Joyce buttoned on her coat about ten o'clock and went for a gingerly inspection of the ranch. She saw chickens picking their way about disconsolately; the cow somewhere went on lowing, lowing.

Suddenly she was back in the stale languid still chilly air of the kitchen.

"They're on their way up!"

"Who?" Lissy, huddled beside the stove in a coat, asked lifelessly.

"Mother and dad! I recognized the car. Now we'll get it all straightened out!" Joyce ran out to meet them as the car came into the yard.

Mrs. Ballard looked pale and tired; her manner was strained. She descended stiffly.

"Cousin Laura died at three o'clock this morning," she said in a subdued voice moving weary eyes to meet the glances of all her children in turn. She looked at her husband, questioned him apathetically. "Is this the place, Will?"

"I guess it is, Sally! Well, how are you all, and how'd you make out?"

"It's the most frightful place you ever saw!" Lissy said with feeling. Dodo, clinging to her mother, was quietly crying.

"It really is unspeakable, mother," Dodo said somewhat superfluously. For they were all in the kitchen now and its naked horrors were displayed in the gray rainy light. Mrs. Ballard clung to Dodo, her face growing paler.

William Ballard put down two heavy bags, went straight to the stove, stooped to shove, to pull, to shove again at some mysterious plunger hidden at the side. Instantly the smoke stopped issuing in gray wreaths about the plates and the fire started up with the first heartening roar it had made since it had been kindled on the previous afternoon.

"What do you know?" Ben said.

"You shut your damper off too soon, son!" the father said.

"Shut what off too what?" Ben asked, perplexed. "We never did anything like that," he said.

"I wonder you got the thing to burn at all, then," the man observed. "Well, this looks pretty sick, doesn't it? But we can't tell much about it until we've cleaned it up. How about getting your mother a cup of tea, girls? We had an early breakfast at poor Laura's; we got started at eight."

"Get the kettle boiling," Mrs. Ballard said. "One of you slept in here last night? That's one of the best sheets you've got under that mattress," she added apathetically.

"What's the matter with that cow?" William Ballard demanded suddenly, hearing for the first time the desolate moan that had been going on at intervals.

"I don't know, dad!" Ben said, injured and on the defensive.

"Is that one of our cows?"

"She's in our barn. I was just going in there when you came," Joyce observed.

"Come along with me, Joyce; we'll take a look around out there," her father suggested. Joyce already had on her coat and hat; she left the dreary group in the kitchen with alacrity.

"Want your hat, dad?"

"No," her father said cheerfully, almost jovially, "I don't think I'll wear a hat. I like the rain in my face."

Joyce guided him through the woodshed, through some outlying sheds and fences, up toward the barns.

"Well," William Ballard said striding along. "This is great, isn't it?"

Joyce sent him an unobserved sidewise glance. Was this all bravado? Apparently not. He appeared to be genuinely enjoying himself.

"The house is a perfect pig pen," she said mildly.

"Yes, I suppose so. Well, we'll get that cleared up. Chickens, eh?" he said as a draggled fowl addressed him on an interrogative note.

"There seem to be quite a few here."

"What'd you feed 'em?"

"We didn't feed them!" Joyce said, startled. "I never thought of it."

"Probably whoever's milking the cows did. Who brought the milk in?"

"Who—what, dad? We got four quarts on the way here yesterday, but we used it all up and this morning we had to use canned milk. Who . . .?"

"Didn't any one milk this morning?"

"I don't know," the girl said feeling stupid.

They were in the big dim barn. With the opening of the door the lowing of the cows increased; there were four of them, spotted black and white, standing with their lowered heads together, watching the newcomers suspiciously.

"Hosteins," Joyce's father said. "They've not been miked. Whoever he was that fellar ought to be strung up for leaving them! Here, boss—"

He crossed the open space of the barn and looked into the doors that stood in a row on the far wall. Presently he disappeared, to come back almost immediately with a stool and an old pail.

"We'll fix you up, Daisy!" he said. Joyce looked on in respectful awe as he set the pail and the stool in place, seated himself with his forehead almost touching the nearest cow's mud-plastered flank. Milk began to stream into the bucket.

"Two of 'em are running dry, luckily; it's a dangerous thing to let 'em go over a milking!" Will Ballard said looking up with perspiration standing on his forehead. "It's a good many years since I've milked, but you don't forget it. I used to milk seven of my grandfather's cows every day for years."

Joyce forgot herself, forgot the problems that the house, that cleaning and cooking and sleeping presented, in the sheer fascination of this morning hour with her father in the barn. With unerring instinct out back of the big building toward the hill he found a little shed obviously used as a dairy. Joyce rinsed big pans under his direction. There was a pleasant faint smell of souring milk and tin and wet wood.

Still dressed in the handsome grey suit he had worn to so many tense office conferences and throughout so many anxious business hours, he straightened up the back that was cramped by the unwonted exercise.

"Well," he said. "That felt good! Now about those chickens, Joyce. Let's nose around here a little and see if we can find them some food."

They opened grain bins, peeped into sheds. Everywhere were the same dirt, disorder, traces of mice, decay. Finally a sack half filled with wheat was discovered and Joyce filled a wooden measure with it under her father's direction and was presently out in the yard, laughing as chickens pecked ravenously at the grain.

"We'll leave the barn door open," William Ballard said. "They like a barn like this. Come in here—"

Joyce followed him into a dirty little chicken house against one of whose walls fruit boxes partly filled with straw had been nailed, top out. In these with two glass eggs, were astonishingly enough some seven or eight fresh eggs.

"Dad!" she said.

"Didn't you ever find an egg before?"

"Oh, no!" Her eyes were wide with wonder. "Eggs," she said musingly with a little abrupt laugh. "Then these are our chickens and our eggs, dad," she summarized it. "And our cows and our milk. How—how funny!"

"And our fruit and our vegetables," he added. Joyce's eyes were bright with an entirely new emotion as they went back to the kitchen. For the first time in her life she felt a real sympathy for her father as a human being.

Her mother was still sitting at the table with her hat on and looked dazed and miserable.

"Are the beds upstairs, Joyce?"

"Yes, but not put together."

"Mother says Aunt Laura's death may make a great difference," Lissy said cautiously from the stove when Ben and his father had gone upstairs.

"We know she has left him something and it may be—quite something," Mrs. Ballard said. "Dear Cousin Laura, she loved us all!" Treadwell, Cousin Laura's lawyer came in this morning [illegible] left and he indicated to dad that Laura had made a ne[illegible] weeks ago. Treadwell said something like—I can't remember his exact words, but he said, 'she certainly remembered you most generously, Mr. Ballard!' Of course," Sally said trying not to be too hopeful, "that might mean only a thousand dollars and it might mean only ten. But he indicated that Laura was richer than we thought."

The thought of Cousin Laura's positive legacy, large or small, put heart into them all for the rest of the day. Ben, followed by his father in the little car, drove the big car into town and left it for its new owner. He and his father came back with boxes of necessities; milk pans, frying pans, soap, ammonia, cleaners.

The parlor was aired and temporarily two beds were set up in its gloomy depths. It was all cold, uncomfortable, wretched enough, but it did become a little less cold, uncomfortable and wretched as the hours went by and Cousin Laura's will formed a bright light to guide them all through the strange beginnings of the new life.

Some old glass lamps had been found in the cellar again it was William Ballard who knew how to cut their wicks, fill them with kerosene, light them. In the room off the kitchen the girls beds were set up:

Luncheon was meat cakes and beans and bakery buns. They were all ravenous, the food disappeared like magic.

At five o'clock there was an announcement that any one who wanted it could have hot water for washing; in turn they retired into the freezing washroom off the woodshed and made such gingerly concessions to cleanliness as they dared.

"I don't wonder that when real countrywomen get the house cleaned up and dinner started and themselves clean, they put on a fresh apron an go and sit on the porch and look triumphant!" Joyce said at dinner.

"They cook for hands, too," her father reminded her, carving steaks at the head of the forlorn kitchen table

"And they bear children and they put up hundreds of jars of preserves. My grandmother never had less than a thousand jars of jam."

English Children Find Haven in Canada

AMONG the first contingent of English children to arrive in Canada as war guests was a group of 25 brought to a place of safety by Mr. Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Canadian Ford organization. The children were welcomed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell in Windsor, Ontario, where they were cared for until placed in their new homes. Some of the children posed for a "family group" with their host and hostess, left to right, Tony Hampson and Peter Daniels, in back row; Mrs. Campbell, Lorna Thacker, Doreen Fowler, Peter Brister, Mr. Campbell and four-year old Peter Fowler seated on a toy fire truck. Another 100 children will reach the Campbell's home later on under an arrangement made between Mr. Campbell and Lord Perry, head of the Ford company in England. Many of these will be war guests of families in the Ford organization in Windsor. These children are not a part of the movement of children under the Government plan.

CORNWALL STRIKE QUICKLY SETTLED

Employment of Man With View to Promotion Brought About the Trouble

Ottawa, July 15—(CP)— Speedy settlement of a strike in the Cornwall plant of Canadian Cottons, Limited, which is engaged on war contracts for the government, was announced today by the Department of Labor.

The strike arose owing to the employment of a young man in the weaving department with a view to promoting him to a position of authority. The young man had not previously been employed in the department.

The announcement said the wavers resented the action of the company as over-riding their seniority rights, and ceased work. As the weaving department is a key department, the result eventually would have been to tie up the whole plant.

A delegation of the employees visited Ottawa and laid their case before Labor Minister McLarty, who got into touch with the manager of the company, and succeeded in adjusting the difficulty. The result was that the men returned to work the following morning and that any delay on production was avoided. There are approximately 1,500 employees in the Cornwall mills of Canadian Cottons, Limited.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma was darning holes out of socks, saying to pop, Willyum, did you ever hear of the Finkelstein Four?

Many times, pop said, Moe and Larry Finkelstein were much smarter boxers than Manny and Abe, he said, and ma said, The Finkelstein Four are a famous musical quartette. Surely you've heard of Isadore Finkelstein's, he's the leader and he plays the chello as it's never been played before, she said.

I theard of one remarkable musican who plays with his toes, is that this Finkelstein fellow? pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum I have tickets for the Finkelstein Four charity concert next Sattiday afternoon and you'll be free, so supopsing I stop for you at your office, it would be a real treat for you, she said.

By gollies I hate to pass it up, but Benny has never heard a good 4 piece orchester and I dont think I ought to deprive him of the opportunity, pop said, and I said, Aw G, pop, dont shove it off on me, that's not fair.

Why Benny, such an attitude, ma said, ou're really just the right age to start an appriciation of good music, I think our father is quite right, she said and pop said, Absilutely, an appriciation of good music is what separates man from the lowerq animals and civilization from savagery. Nations and cultures crumble into dust but theoir undying melodies linger on forever to charm and inspire the sole of man with the eternal beauty of great music.

Why Willyum that's beautiful, I never sispected you had such a real feeling for music, now I insist on your going with me and I wont take an excuse for an answer, ma said, and pop said, Shucks, I always knew my gift fro oratory would ruin me, just as Hitler's will ruin him.

Meaning all right and making me feel lucky on account of expecting to have an important engagement with the fellows Sattiday afternoon.

WOULD TRANSFER SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENTS TO PRINCETON

Princeton, N.J., July 16 (AP) — Three Princeton institutions feeling the League of Nation's scientific program has been curtailed by the war, have invited the League to transfer the work of three of its non-political departments from Geneva to Princeton. They suggested transfer of the League's sections on finance and economics, international health, and opium control for the duration of the European war. No response has been received.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 16—(CP)—Trading picked up on Toronto Exchange today to show turnover of 58,000. Prices were higher for mines but industrials were showing a few losses. Western Oils were unchanged.

Hollinger, Macassa, Preston, Malartic Gold fields, Naybob, Upper Canada and a few other penny issues ruled stronger and in base metals the market was stronger for Smelters, Hudson Bay, Steep Rock and Sherritt.

Walkers Common was prominent with a gain of 4 to 36 and Bell Telephone and Canada Malting advanced 1 to 2. Seniors were steady.

WALL STREET

New York, July 16 (AP).—Steels, aircrafts and motors put on a little rally of their own in today's market, but many issues continued to drift in narrow territory.

Dealings, sluggish at the start, picked up a bit after mid-day and gains for favorites ranged from one to two points generally, with a few especially "thin" stocks up more.

Among supported stocks were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Standard Oil of N.J., Anaconda and Woolworth.

EARL OF ATHLONE 'REGULAR GUY' TO R.C.A.F. MEN

Unknowingly Breaks Air Force Rules by Unauthorized Canter Over Air Station Grounds

SUBMITS TO RULES

BY ROSS MUNRO

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 16 (CP)—The Earl of Athlone has paid formal calls here on the chiefs of the Canadian forces but it's the air force men at Rockcliffe air station who really know him. As one flying man there put it, the Governor-General is "a regular guy."

At the air station the best story told in the mess is the one about His Excellency and his riding privileges at Rockcliffe; how he broke air force rules by an unauthorized canter over air station grounds and submitted goodnaturedly when taken to task by a young flying officer.

The Earl is an enthusiastic horseman and he found a good bridle path from Rideau Hall grounds to Rockcliffe Airdrome where surrounding fields are splendid for his morning canter.

Ordered by Flying Officer to Stop

But it is an important air base, closely guarded. When the Governor-General galloped across the fields for the first time the flying officer ordered him to stop and informed him such incursions were not permitted unless authorized.

His Excellency, somewhat taken back by this young man, leaned down from his horse and said: "But I'm Athlone."

"I know sir," replied the officer "But you still are not allowed in this area without permission."

Lord Athlone cordially inquired about getting permission and was told to ride around to the main gate. So the commander-in-chief of the Canadian forces rode to the airport entrance.

Authority is Issued

In the meantime the flying officer excitedly telephoned a wing commander of the incident. The wing commander bundled into his uniform and rushed to greet His Excellency, waiting quietly on his horse at the gate.

Then in the small guard house full authority was written out for the Earl to take his daily ride over the air station grounds, and, laughing heartily at the episode he accepted the wing commander's invitation to breakfast in the officers' mess.

Fishing Schooner Burst Into Flames

Grand Marais, Man., July 16. —(CP)—One man was drowned and four others were rescued when a fishing schooner burst into flames after an explosion about half a mile off shore here last night. Grand Marais is on Lake Winnipeg about 55 miles north of Winnipeg.

Edgar Anderson 30, of Balsam Bay, Man., was drowned. Four Grand Marais residents rescued are Calvin Webb, Benson Orbis, Alex Sinclair and Johnny Soltser.

The boat, a 40-foot commercial fishing schooner, was bound for northern fishing grounds when the accident occurred. It is believed engine oil became ignited and caused the explosion.

'QUIET' IN KENYA BORDER

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, July 16—(AP)—"Yesterday was quiet in the northern frontier district," the British daily war communique said today.

"Our troops in Turkana (in the northwestern corner of Kenya Colony), having completed the task of wrecking the enemy post at Namaraputuh, withdrew."

CROPS DAMAGED BY WIND, RAIN AT ST. THOMAS

Severest Electrical Storm of Season Accompanied by Hail in Some Sections

TRAFFIC IS HALTED

London, Ont., July 16—(CP) — Extensive damage to grain crops, tobacco fields, orchards and farm buildings was being estimated by farmers in the London and St. Thomas districts of Western Ontario today in the wake of the severest electrical storm of the year.

A wind of near cyclonic velocity which was accompanied by hail and torrential rain struck late yesterday with intensity in the Mount Bridges, Lawrence Station, Pyne's Mills and Glanworth areas, flattening grain and tobacco fields, stripping orchards, uprooting trees and levelling Hydro and telephone lines.

No estimate of aggregate damage was available. The loss ran into many thousands of dollars around Mount Bridges where the storm cut a swath 15 miles long and from three to five miles wide through Cardoc Township. The crop of one 25-acre apple orchard was believed lost as the wind stripped all the apples and most of the leaves.

Without Power

In the London district all available line crews of the Public Utilities Commission were called out and most of the electric lines were restrung within three hours. In East London's industrial area, factories were without power for two hours.

In Western Cardoc Township large maple trees were blown down, blocking traffic on highways and knocking over electric and telephone lines. In St. Thomas district the wind was strong enough to lift the roof from a large barn and carry it some distance away.

Hail damage to tobacco growers was feared heavy as whole fields of plants were beaten into the mud. The hail fell mostly in the tobacco area east of Melbourne.

Motor Traffic Halted

Campbellford, Ont., July 16—(CP)—Motor traffic was halted for more than an hour last night when the worst electrical storm of the season, accompanied by high winds, struck this district. Falling branches struck power lines causing short circuits and blowing out transformers, leaving the town in darkness until emergency repair gangs repaired the damage and cleared the road of fallen trees.
